AROUND

the TOWN

The electrical storm which passed over the city last evening will serve as a reminder that summer is on the way here. It is actually due on Monday next, for that day according to the almanac is the longest day in the year. We have really had very little summer weather of late, and the trees are hardly bloomed out to their capacity, but all the same summer, or what should be summer, is actually here. While nobody has had the courage to predict hot weather, the chances are that we will have some and we should get it within a very short time. Although the weather has not thus far been true to form the ice man has been steadily on the job, and as far as can be learned it is not his intention to give his customers any rebate because of cool weather.

The city had quite a lot of visitors last week, no less than four conventions having met here. The attendance was not large and the delegates did not create any appreciable stir about the streets. This is probably due to the fact that they had to stick pretty closely to business during their sojourn here. Week after next we are to have the Provincial Teachers' Institute, which if it is true to its record will bring more visitors to the city than all of last week's conventions combined. The Institute does not elect delegates, every teaching being free to come and they travel at his or her own expense. Being the seat of the Provincial Normal School it can be assumed that about every teacher in the province has taken a course of training in this city, and the desire to renew acquaintances formed during their sojourn here is naturally very strong. This gives assurance of a large attendance and it also gives assurance that the teachers during their sojourn here will attempt to live over again the good old days, and have a pleasant time.

Earl Dunraven, the noted Irish sportsman, who passed away in England a few days ago, had one acquaintance and admirer in this city in the person of Uncle Henry Braithwaite, the noted big game hunter and guide. The Earl and Uncle Henry, who were about of an age, met on the Southwest Miramichi River about fifty years ago under peculiar circumstances. The Earl was on a hunting trip after big game and had with him Abe Hood, a Micmac Indian guide from Nova Scotia. They entered the woods at Bristol, Carleton County, and canoed down the river as far as Boiestown. Uncle Henry had made a trip out from Stanley to the river in company with the late Harry Turnbull and met the Earl and his Indian guide near Burnt Mill. Uncle Henry recalls the incident very readily because of the fact that he had taken a horse along and it came very near falling the victim to the Earl's rifle. The animal had been left browsing near the bank of the river, and the Earl and his guide coming along in a canoe mistook it for a cow moose, the shooting of the latter being legal in those days. The Earl had raised his rifle for a shot, but just at that moment Uncle Henry emerged from the bushes in search of the horse and of course prevented what might have been an embarrassing situation. The party came together shortly afterwards and had a very pleasant chat. The Earl and his Indian guide continued on to Boiestown where they stopped for dinner at the only hotel in the place. The proprietor had never seen a non-resident sportsman, and the Earl in his sporting togs was scarcely recognized as a member of the Irish nobility. About the only thing which seemed to carry weight with the landlord was the fact that the stranger's companion was an Indian, and it would offend the dignity of the House were the guide to sit at the same table with white men. When dinner was served the Indian was assigned a seat at a table in the kitchen and it was intimated to His Lordship that there would be no objection to his accompanying him, as the lumberjacks and other guests of the house were rather particular. The Earl accepted the situation with good grace, ate in the kitchen with the Indian and really seemed to enjoy the somewhat novel situation. The Earl made several hunting trips to the Maritime Provinces after big game and he also hunted in Quebec. Some years later he achieved world wide fame by challenging for the America cup, but in two attempts failed to win the trophy. His interest in yachting was maintained right up to the time of his death, he having always been prominent in the Royal Yacht Squadron at Cowes, Isle of Wight.

William F. Grace, one of Fredericton's senior barbers is dead. He had been travelling in hard luck for some time, and his death will be regretted by a large circle of friends. A few months ago he was knocked down by an automobile and severely injured, and afterwards entered a suit for damages against the owner and driver of the car. The case is still pending in the courts. Mr. Grace had conducted a barber shop in the same stand on Regent Street for thirty-five years. He was one of the most expert barbers in the province and enjoyed a large patronage. Besides the accident already referred to he ran up against other ill luck, and worrying over his troubles he became violently insane about a week ago. He was taken to the Provincial Hospital for treatment, but his ailment proved incurable and now he has gone the way of all the world. Mr. Grace was known as a good fellow and will be much missed in the community.

The city tax notices are out again, and it has been decreed by the civic authorities that they must be paid on or before July 22nd otherwise, so it is said, proceedings will be taken for collection. It is also decreed that interest at the rate of one half of one percent will be charged on taxes remaining unpaid after that date. The world has made progress during the last 1926 years, but there has been little change in the method of collecting taxes. Taxes, known as a crop that never fails, is said to be the only sure thing in this world with the exception of death. In the days of ancient Rome the laws must have been stringent, otherwise Joseph and Mary in response to an Imperial decree would not have journeyed to Bethlehem on a certain memorable occasion. Joseph permitted himself to be taxed and being unable to obtain lodgings at the inn sought shelter in a stable where Mary gave birth to a son who became the Saviour of the human race. He went about healing the sick, but the records do not show that he threatened to have executions issued against those who failed to come across with the amount of their taxes by a certain date. The collection of taxes is connected with the greatest event in human history, but some of the teachings of those who are entrusted with the task in the second quarter of the twentieth century do not seem to conform with the ideals of the babe of Bethlehem, whose parents were the best advertised taxpayers in the history of the world.

INCOME TAX PROSECUTION OVER A NAME

was allowed to stand pending a decision by the Department as to whether or not there is confusion of identity in the matter.

Difference in Names.

The information given by the accused is to the effect that he signs his correspondence Harold McDonald, that he is on the C. P. R. payroll as Harold Frank McDonald and that he is on the assessment list of the Parish of McAdam as Frank Harold McDonald. He stated further that he had paid Income Tax in 1922 and he believed he had made a return in 1923 although he could not find the copy of the return which he was to have kept.

Confusion of Identity.

The argument advanced by the accused was that the Department because of the difference in the names on the C. P. R. and Parish lists believed that there were two men named McDonald. He stated that he had received communications from the Department as both Harold Frank McDonald and Frank Harold McDonald.

Fine Allowed to Stand.

Magistrate Limerick in the lack of proof of filing a return made conviction and imposed fine. The latter was allowed to stand to give Mr. McLellan an opportunity of communicating with the office in Saint John relative to the possibility of a mistake having been made. If it is found that Frank Harold and Harold Frank are one and the same and the return was made, there will be no fine collected. Otherwise there will be one collected.

PUBLIC OPINION

A WORD TO MOTORISTS.

The Editor of The Mail
Dear Sir—Has any one ever discovered why some motorists do not sound their horns until they ARRIVE at street intersections?

This, instead of giving a WARNING of their approach and allowing a chance to avoid them, startles and bewilders pedestrians and minimizes the possibility of avoiding a collision. The PURPOSE of a horn, or of any signalling device, on an automobile is to notify or to warn, and such signal should be operated in time to permit a clear path being given. This would be in accordance with the LAWS of the community, of Common Sense and of Safety First.

Sincerely,

STERLING BRANNEN,
Fredericton, N. B., June 19, 1926.
