BRITISH BACK HUGHTON IN REPORT TO PRESIDENT

London, March 31—Ambassador Alanson B. Houghton's report to President Collidge on conditions prevailing in Europe has produced a distinct feeling of disappointment throughout Great Britain, although it has by no means aroused the degree of bitterness that has been provoked by its publication in France.

Not that England is inclined to disagree with the Ambassador's indictment of continental Europe. "The Daily Express" declares, "Ambassador Houghton has expressed the views of ninety per cent of the people of Great Britain." Again, "The Manchester Guardian" says, discussing the report, "Isn't this very much what we would say ourselves if we did not know we have had to make the best of a bad business?"

A well informed student of foreign affairs—Wilson Harris, writes, "While our heart may impel us to tell Ambassador Houghton he is wrong, our heads must constrain us to admit that he may be alarmingly right." Indeed, Englishmen feel subtly flattered to be told, by an eminent foreign observer like the Ambassador, that they are more advanced and more intelligent on the subject of foreign policy than their Foreign Office.

Bright Hopes Shattered.
But, however, much the English may agree with Houghton's views, and however much these views may have tickled the British public's amour propre, the belief prevails in London that his report has given a definite check to the growing trend in the United States toward renewal of co-operation with Europe through the League of Nations.

Only a few weeks ago the Senate's passage of the world court resolution was being greeted by Great Britain and the Continent as a step by the United States toward eventual entrance into the league. A report from Geneva optimistically predicted that the United States would be a signatory to the covenant within ten years. These bright hopes have been rudely shaken by developments of the last fortnight. The intrigues and bargains at Geneva over the admission of Germany have impaired the prestige of the league in the United States, it is realized here, by showing that, although a few small nations like Sweden are actuated by the league spirit, the Latin nations have not the remotest conception of what the league stands for.

War Claims Startle Britain.

On top of all this come the dispatches from Washington, indicating that the State Department is considering presenting compensation claims against Great Britain for cargoes confiscated by British cruisers in the first part of the war, when the United States was neutral. Few people here have taken these claims seriously, but the mere fact that they are even being considered has revealed to British statesmen the extremely detached position of the United States with respect to European relations.

THEFT OF WHISKEY FROM THE BONDED WARE HOUSE AT HALIFAX

Halifax N. S., March 31—The theft of liquor from bonded warehouse No. 4, of the Department of Legal Vendors, announced yesterday has been found to be much more serious than was at first believed, according to an announcement by the Attorney-General today.

Investigations today indicated that the theft involved 98 cases of choice Scotch whisky and the amount may be found to be greater when the check-up of stock is completed, which will probably be tomorrow. An investigation under oath is to be recommended by Hon. J. C. Douglas, Attorney-General, who gave out the following official statement tonight:

"This matter has attained greater proportions than was at first reported to the department of the attorney general. The checking up of the shortage has not yet been completed. The last report today was that over 90 cases were relieved of their contents of liquor.

Ocurring For Years.

"So serious is the matter when considered in the light of the financial loss to the province the fact that these shortages have been occurring for years and the evidences of systematic and persistent robbery disclosed, that it is imperative that

LEGISLATURES BELIEVED TO BE TOO LARGE

(Toronto Globe.)

A conviction which gives promise of manifesting itself in concrete results is taking possession of the public mind in Canada that our legislative machinery is altogether overmanned. The belief is growing that the membership of our Provincial Legislatures is too large; that even the number of those occupying seats in the Dominion Parliament might, were it possible, be reduced with benefit to the country. The proposal to decrease the number of members of the Federal Ministry appears in keeping with this idea, and is likely to be favorably regarded by the public.

Manitoba seems to be leading the way among the Provinces in this movement for cutting down the size of the Legislature. At present there are fifty-four members of that Provincial House, and the advocates of reduction propose a decrease to forty-four. British Columbia, under the economic control of Premier John Oliver, is also considering the advisability of abolishing several of the seats in the House at Victoria, and the progress of the movement in Manitoba is being watched with interest.

Comments of the press both in the West and the East are apparently favorable to the idea, and just recently articles commending it appeared in The Standard and The British Whig of Kingston, representing, respectively, Conservative and Liberal opinion. In its editorial reference The British Whig says: "With a smaller Legislature there would be more than a saving in expenses—sessions would be more business like, 'because the volume of verbosity would be curtailed,' a smaller number of members would have greater facility of contact with the Cabinet, and there would be 'less of the servility of purely party following.'"

The Standard is not less decided in its view. "The decrease," it says, "would encourage the idea of economy and lead to this in the administration of Departments. There is an old saying that contains a good deal of truth in it and which might be thought of in connection with these matters: that a committee of three is good, a committee of two is better, and a committee of one is best."

THE CAPITOL THEATRE

"Spook Ranch" is the photo play at the Capitol for Friday and Saturday starring Hoot Gibson.

Hoot Gibson plays a lovable boob whose misadventures and him in a little desert town penniless and encumbered by a negro helper. Arrested for knocking out the keeper of a lunch counter who refused to give him a free meal, he is promised his freedom if he will go to a haunted arch nearby that is the terror of the countryside and solve the mystery of the place. Freely shooting the ghosts that roam over the place the hero stumbles on a gang of bandits who are holding the ranch owner and his daughter prisoners and are attempting to rob them of a priceless mine. After much shooting and fighting and hard riding, the undaunted hero captures the bandits and wins the girl.

PREMIER SPOKE BEFORE K. OF P. GATHERING

Met With Band.

The Saint John delegation were met at the train by the Fredericton Knights and headed by the K. of P. band marched to the Windsor Hotel where dinner was served after which the members proceeded to the Salvage Corps hall, Queen Street where the third rank was exemplified. It was finished shortly after midnight and was followed by speeches after which adjournment was made to Castle Hall, York st., where refreshments were served, and a good time spent by all. The Saint John delegation left for home this morning. W. W. O. Fenety who is a member of Fredericton Lodge kindly extended an invitation to the Knights last evening to visit the Gaiety Theatre as his guests but as there was too much work on hand the boys were unable to accept his kind offer.

The old saying that too many cooks spoil the broth might be applied to the Legislature as well as the kitchen. At least, the waste of time and money witnessed during the early days of the present Parliamentary session at Ottawa would give that impression.
