J. Clark & Son, Ltd.THE MEIGHEN NON CONFIDENCE
DEFEATED BY THREE VOTES;
SCENE OF WILD EXCITEMENTOTTAWA, January 14—Amid scenes of the wildest excitement the government at one o'clock, this morning, secured a majority of three on the non-confidence amendment proposed by Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader. Five Progressives voted with the Conservatives. The total vote stood:
Against 123
For 120

Majority against 3

As the figures were announced by the clerk, both Liberals and Conservatives rose, cheering frantically and flinging masses of paper in the air in their excitement.

The five Progressives who voted for the Conservative amendment were: Messrs. M. N. Campbell, MacKenzie, Sask.; W. T. Lucas, Camrose, Alta.; A. M. Carmichael, Kindersley, Sask.; A. M. Boutillier, Vegreville, Alta.; W. R. Fansher, Last Mountain, Sask.

In the whole house of 245 members, there were only two votes not cast. These were Speaker Lemieux and A. D. Chaplin, Conservative, Kent, Ont., who is sick. The house adjourned until Monday when the address will be considered.

When the debate was resumed in the House of Commons this afternoon Mr. Dennis (Liberal, Joliette) continued the speech he began yesterday. He reminded the Progressives and Independents that, because they held the balance of power, a very great responsibility devolved on them. Mr. Denis had no doubt that they would meet that responsibility worthily.

Members voting against the amendment did not by their action vote confidence in the Government, Mr. Denis maintained. The amendment followed a motion which asked that consideration of the Speech from the Throne be given precedence over all other sessional business. The purpose of the amendment, he submitted, was to prevent consideration of the Speech from the Throne. If the amendment were passed, the Speech from the Throne would not be discussed. He submitted that the amendment was premature and that, so far as the Progressives were concerned, it was important to allow discussion to proceed on the Speech from the Throne.

Bell Queries Denis.

C. W. Bell (Conservative for West Hamilton), asked Mr. Denis: Why, if the Government was so anxious to have the Speech from the Throne discussed it had introduced a motion of non-confidence at the very opening of the session? How could the introduction of such a motion facilitate discussion of the amendments?

Mr. Denis said he could not speak for the Government in this regard. He thought that the confidence motion might have been introduced in order to put a stop to the accusations of usurpation of office which were being made.

He claimed, with emphasis, that the amendment was premature. The Progressives were not in the House to serve the interests of either of the larger parties. They were here to serve their constituents. How could they return to their constituents and claim that they had not received justice from the Government, if they, themselves, had prevented the passing of Speech from the Throne?

Change for Forke Group.

What the Progressive Party had received in the past was only what had been fought for by the Government against Conservative opposition. The Progressives had now the greatest opportunity ever offered to any party.

The statement was greeted with considerable applause.

"An opportunity," continued Mr. Denis, "to receive what they have claimed to be their right."

Ladner Queries Him.

"Why did not the honorable gentleman's colleagues fulfill those opportunities during the last four years?" asked L. J. Ladner (Conservative, South Vancouver.)

"That is not the question," replied Mr. Denis, adding that the honorable gentleman opposite might have a chance of finding out what worry it was to be in power without a majority. If in the face of the present situation the Progressives forbade the House to consider the Speech from the Throne, they would not be doing justice to themselves or to their constituents, because that speech contained all their wishes.

The Speech from the Throne was worthy of the attention of the House, irrespective of the confidence or non-confidence which the Progressive group might have in the Government.

Stevens Speaks.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, Conservative, Vancouver Centre, followed Mr. Denis. The attitude of the Conservatives was that "the attempt of this group of individuals who assumed the right of advisors to the Crown is a violation of constitutional practice." Mr. Stevens failed to see how any member of the House could not be in accord with the viewpoint of the Opposition. Mr. King, Mr. Marler and Mr. Massey, "the three men who are the directing and most influential spirits of the Government," has been defeated at the polls, he said.

He disagreed with the suggestion from the Liberal benches that to vote for the amendment would be to express non-confidence in the Government, while to vote against the amendment would not be a vote of confidence in the present administration. The opinion of three of the members of the cabinet had been expressed on this point. The Solicitor-General for one had declared that Parliament had been called to decide whether the Government would remain in office or not and the members supported the action of the King administration in retaining office, it would remain, otherwise it would go out of office.

Non-Confidence Vote.

The whole amendment, declared Mr. Stevens, called for a vote of non-confidence in the Government. Members were called upon to say "yes," or "no," on the question of the continuation of the Government in office. To contend otherwise would be "ludicrous." He would like to know if the Government were sustained in office on the amendment, whether it would deal with large issues of whether it would make appointments.

"Are they going to come into this House standing on two feet or crawling on their knees?" asked Mr. Stevens. Or would the members of the Government slip around the lobbies with "seductive inducements" in order to retain office?

Sanctity of Contract.

Dealing with the constitutional aspect, Mr. Stevens said the Conservative party stood four-square upon British constitutional practice and believed in the sanctity of contract, not only for Parliament but for people, and believed further that Government should be responsible government. Much had been heard of precedent, but Parliament should be more interested in established principles which were the growth of precedent, than in individual cases from history. The House of Commons was a trustee of certain principles which had been established after great struggle.

Sees Danger There.

In the Prime Minister and his executive rested the full power of government. They were the governing power of the country. But there was a danger there, not from the aggression of a monarch, but from the party organization behind the executive—an invisible irresistible power. There was only one check against such power, and that was that the Prime Minister and his executives should meet the representatives of the people in Parliament.

There was no Prime Minister in the present House. Yet it was known that Mr. Marler and Mr. Massey, defeated ministers, were deep in the confidences of the Government and had much to do with the speech from the throne; so much, indeed, that members of the Government were indignant when they found they had not been consulted.

Reason Hinted At.

"Why, did the Government continue in office? It is the consciousness of this Government that the moment they relinquish office, the moment they surrender their seats, the moment others have access to the files and secret information of the departments, there will be revealed a condition which they, if they can cling to office, would fain hide.

"My friend," interjected Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Finance, "has either said too much or not enough. It seems to me he should pursue a little further."

Mr. Stevens retorted that he had not in mind the Minister of Finance or his department. Mr. Stevens added that "at the earliest opportunity we will say more."

Hon. George H. Bovin, Minister of Customs, followed, in defence of the Government's position and the debate was concluded by Mr. C. H. Cahan, Conservative of Mount Royal.

THE FARMER SHOULD KEEP AN ACCOUNT BOOK

(Experimental Farm Notes.)

The Dominion Experimental Farms system has published an extremely simple farmer's account book, designed to last a complete year. To "keep" it needs no special knowledge of accounting; simply the ability to write and add; and a record of all transactions might be made in an hour a week. A few plain directions as to making entries, some aids to taking inventories, a table of silo capacities and a gestation table, are given on the insides of the cover.

In the book itself are pages for the entry of receipts and expenditures (both of which may be seen at a glance on the same page) relative to cattle, horses, sheep, swine, poultry, crops and labor; and there is also ample space for miscellaneous items. There is a page for amounts owed to and by the farm, and forms on which may be made inventories of land and buildings, or live stock, of feed and supplies, and of machinery. Following is a page on which may be filled out a summary of the year's business, together with the few directions necessary to filling it out intelligently at the end of the year. Further, for the farmer's information there is a table in which to enter acreage and yield of crops, and one in which to keep a live stock service record.

Send for one now and record your transactions from the beginning of 1926. It is obtainable from the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, at a nominal charge of ten cents. No postage need be placed on letters of application.

A GOOD LOSER CAN ALSO BE A GOOD SPORT

(New York Sun.)

The woman discovered a dingy little antique shop in a small town and the hope of some treasure being hidden there lured her into its shadowy interior.

A little, dusty looking old man, roused from his nap in an easy chair, turned on a faint light. The woman was turning to go when the dim outline of such a clock as she had always wanted made her ask for a nearer view.

It proved to be a genuine antique, but could only be used as an ornament as the pendulum was missing.

The woman paid the three dollar antique dealer asked for it and carried it to a clock repairer near her home.

He removed a quantity of crushed newspaper, yellow with age, from its interior—and the pendulum and key dropped out!

To the astonishment of the woman in a few moments the clock was ticking as though it had never stopped.

After a small outlay in money to have it cleaned and regulated the clock was in its place on the woman's mantel—a thing of real beauty.

The woman's friends were all called in to rejoice with her and admire her latest acquisition.

But the woman's conscience troubled her when she thought of the poor little old man's loss, so she called him to the phone and offered him more money.

After he had at last grasped the idea from the woman's explanation he chuckled: "Keep your money! You were a good sport to take the clock without a pendulum. I can be a good loser and a good sport, too!"

A. M. Belding Returning.

Many will be glad to learn that A. M. Belding, who was taken seriously ill with pneumonia while visiting his son in White Plains, New York, before Christmas, has sufficiently recovered to permit him to travel. It was his intention, according to word received by his family, to leave White Plains yesterday on the way home. It was thought that he would reach Saint John at the end of this week or early in the next.
