HIGH PRICED HORSES.

That England still leads the world in the matter of bloodstock values is shown in a comparison of the prices received at the recent Doncaster sales, and those at Saratoga Springs in the United States; these being the largest public auctions of young thoroughbreds in the world.

Th boast has been that foreigners have never been able to outbid British sportsmen, when they wanted a particular specimen. That they are ready to go to dazzling heights for a thoroughbred yearling is apparent from the fact that the colt by Hurry On, out of Ecurie, brought 17,000 guineas or a little more than $87,000 of Canadian money, while a colt by Gay Crusader, out of Love Oil, brought 12,000 guineas. The Hurry On colt is the highest priced yearling ever sold. In comparison with the above the $35,000 paid for the colt by Black Toney, out of Humility, at Saratoga Springs, seems low, though not so many years ago, the record for a yearling thoroughbred in the United States was $40,000.

The 327 head disposed of at Doncaster brought 345,540 guineas, or about $1,769,000 while 627 head—300 more, than the English sale total—changed hands at Saratoga Springs for $1,902,050.

It is possible that none of these high priced yearlings will achieve distinction on the track, and even if they do win races, the chances are greatly against their earning their purchase price. The odds against any yearling winning a race has been figured out on a scientific basis and one Kentuckian of wealth is so sure of his statistics that he will wager even money that no designated yearling sold at the Saratoga sales will win.

All of which proves that sport is the thing, and the more elusive the goddess of fortune proves to be more eagerly is she pursued.

EDISON'S FORWARD LOOK.

The city of the future is pictured by Thomas Edison in an interview given to "The Forum." Some things about that visioned city would be better than what we now experience. Other things would be worse.

Efficiency will have increased greatly. Edison says traffic problems will have been solved by the mathematician and the architect, making the traffic policeman superfluous. Municipal government will be in the hands of experts, who will reduce taxes to a low level. So far it isn't so bad.

But noises will grow more and more terrific, until nature shall step in and blunt the hearing of the city dweller, thereby relieving his nerves as in Mr. Edison's own case. We wonder if a little deafness on this account isn't already in evidence. Oblivion to a certain portion of the din is all that makes city life endurable. People could not use the telephone in the midst of noise, were they unable to muffle the racket by inattention to it.

Another of the Edison predictions which causes a shiver is that about airplanes. He foresees the common use of roofs as landing stages for vertically rising planes or helicopters, and he notes that much danger will attend this practice. But he thinks the danger won't stop it. That is probably correct.

If any one had described to the average city resident of fifty years ago the city exactly as it would be in 1926, he would have exclaimed, "Not for me! I hope to die—or move into the country—before that happens." But it has happened. And some of the old-timers are still here and not so very discontented either.

As a well-known columnist has said, we not only do not know what is going to happen next but we do not know what we shall think of it when it happens.

The New York Sun in commending on the appointment of Hon. Vincent Massey as Canadian envoy to Washington says:

"In the days when the Romance of the Rose was being written the masser of macer was the drinking cup of all classes in England. The name was variously pronounced and spelled, but invariably the cup was of maple, and, as the old Rolls and Records testify, the carver of the cup took his name from it. It is a rare name today even in England, the only relics of it being the Masses and the Masseys. And so it is the United States welcomes a loving cup from Canada carved in the knotted grain of its own maple, Vincent Massey, who comes as the Dominion's first diplomatic minister to represent his democracy, which marches in peace with ours along a frontier of more than 3,000 miles from ocean to ocean."

Premier Ferguson of Ontario in a speech at Collingwood this week in support of his policy of government control of the liquor traffic used these words. "Let me repeat what I have said before. If the O. T. A. is to remain in the statute books I no longer want to be prime minister." Pretty straight talk that, but no doubt the Premier is sincere. There is no doubt that booze and prohibition present problems for our public men today, the like of which were unknown in old times.

Books and moving pictures can, and frequently do, misrepresent life. They make it more than it is or less than it is. They distort it, paint it, beautify it, or make it ugly. The glory of the honest newspaper is that it sets forth life as it is—with-out distortion, expansion or suppression.

Fiction, in books or on the stage, may do harm. But do not fear facts. They are to be faced. And facing facts is the business of newspapers.

Engineers face a pretty problem. Some day they will learn to bottle up the cold of winter to cool buildings in summer. The world is full of waste—waste heat and waste cold, waste energy and false motion. How to save and apply and direct into channels of human service is the huge problem of today and tomorrow.

Hon. W. F. Nickle, who resigned the Attorney Generalship of Ontario over a difference of opinion with Premier Ferguson on the liquor question has decided to stand as a prohibition candidate in Kingston in the pending election.

We ordinarily think that a man who does not agree with us is wrong. chances are that he simply knows more about it than we do. Listening is two things: it is profitable and it saves you a lot of trouble.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Ideal Indian Summer weather.

It takes two to make a success of matrimony with neither doing all the bossing all the time.

Somebody is forever saying "this must not happen again." But it does.

When the heart dares to speak it needs no preparation.—Lessing. It is always ready with a mouthful.

We have never seen any elbows that we could love for themselves alone.—Bob Ryder. You may add knees for us.

Perhaps it would do no harm to suggest that the Golden Rule was not intended to apply to the Christmas season only.

That which is so easy to do, like putting off holiday shopping, for example we are told not to do. Most admonitions are like that.

Queen Marie, being a woman, there is some doubt about the home office succeeding in making her quit talking.

They tell us to count one hundred when we feel ourself getting angry, but they don't tell us how we would explain it to the lunacy court.

A puzzle that has come into the mind of a Kansas editor is "why a woman with a boyish bob and a tomboy skirt insists on filling her home with antique furniture."

ring to their legend that they had displaced still earlier inhabitants, no authentic record of whom can be found. The Maliseet Indians certainly displaced the Micmacs, who live in the east and north of the province, since the place-names of this western part are of Micmac type.

An Odd Request.

Some odd requests are made of the police. One of the most unusual came by mail recently to Chief Jones, a resident of New York State requesting him to collect the rent of a farm property of his some forty miles away from Fredericton as he understood the tenant who refused to pay his rent was preparing to leave.
