AROUND

the TOWN

The weather seems to have cooled off a bit during the past few days which is an indication that autumn is rather close at hand. During one night this week the mercury came dangerously close to the frost line, and it will not be very long now before old Jack Frost will be on the pumpkin. On the whole it has not been too bad a summer; it could easily have been worse and it might have been better. There have been no protracted spells of hot weather, although on several occasions the mercury ran into the nineties. The only real objection to the present summer is that it is passing away altogether too quickly.

The time is fast approaching when the average householder will be looking around for his winter's supply of furnace wood, and already dealers are predicting higher prices than prevailed last year. This may or may not happen, as much depends on the supply. Whatever dry furnace wood will be burned next winter was cut months ago and piled up to season. A goodly portion of it was no doubt left in the woods to be hauled out after snow comes, but there is said to be considerable piled up at different points ready for shipment. Last winter two foot furnace wood sold at twelve dollars per cord and it is unlikely that a higher price will prevail next winter. If some means could be found to bring about a much needed reduction in the freight rates on wood it might have quite an influence on the price.

The tourist season now seems to be at its height and while more American cars are reported to have entered the province by way of St. Stephen than was the case up to this time last year, it is doubtful if there has been any great increase so far as Fredericton is concerned. Naturally a large percentage of the cars which cross the border to St. Stephen continue on to Saint John and proceed to Nova Scotia, which was probably their objective when they set out from home. The bulk of the cars which visit Fredericton seem to come in by way of Woodstock, and while many of them carry Maine number plates there are also quite a number from Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, and neighboring states. Last week a West Virginia car, which had been in Nova Scotia, arrived here and remained for three days. The party consisted of a man and his wife and four children. The man told an acquaintance while here that before starting out from home he had received a dividend check for one thousand dollars and he was hopeful that the proceeds would last him through the trip, but had his doubts about it. He also volunteered the information that some of the hotels where he stopped tried hard to outdo prices which he had to pay for accommodation at Atlantic City.

It is very easy for railway companies and even Tourist Associations to send out literature telling of the great salmon and trout fishing to be had in New Brunswick, but getting tourists connected up with that delightful sport is quite another matter. It is the lack of co-operative organization that is largely responsible for the failure to get short term visiting anglers properly placed. Only a few days ago a party of Americans arrived in this city and told the proprietor of the hotel where they registered that they were anxious to get located somewhere in a permanent camp where they could have a good time and enjoy some fishing. The hotel man got busy over the long distance telephone and did everything in his power to get the party located at some spot where they could have what they wanted. Finally on the recommendation of a party who should have known better they were sent over to the Miramichi and given the address of a man who was reputed to be a guide. They found the alleged guide, but were not long in finding out that he had no accommodation for them, was poorly equipped and that there was little or no sport to be had in the locality to which they had been sent. They returned to the city the following day and soon afterwards pulled up stakes and left in disgust.

Other tourists who have visited the city during the past few weeks have fared much better than the party mentioned above. They were turned over to Mr. Raymond M. Currie of this city, a man who is not only an expert angler but knows where the fishing is to be had, understands all the wrinkles of the game and knows how to handle a canoe. He also sells fishing licenses and is ready to loan or hire fishing tackle to visiting anglers who happen along and are keen for a few days fishing. Mr. Currie is very fond of fishing himself, but is willing to give others an opportunity to indulge in this thrilling sport. He has guided five or six parties on the St. John and Miramichi Rivers already this season, and while they did not all catch salmon, largely because of inexperience at the game, they invariably had a good time and went away delighted with the country and also with the service which he gave them. An American whom Mr. Currie had out to the Miramichi one day this week, left the Barker House in the morning and returned at night with four grilse and a string of trout the largest of which weighed two pounds. But for Mr. Currie the tourist anglers would probably have moved on within a few hours after landing in the city. As matters turned out they remained here from two to four days, contributed to the provincial revenue, spent money freely and gave a promise before leaving that they would be back next season for a longer stay.

The little booklet on Fredericton issued by the Tourist Association contains a view of the old Robinson homestead at Nashwaaksis, with Mr. Frederick Phillips Robinson, a great grandson of the founder of this homestead, in the foreground. Although as the picture shows, the windows of this old house have been boarded up the building is not by any means a wreck. It is a substantially built structure and rests upon a solid foundation. The basement is partitioned off into small rooms which are supposed to have been the sleeping quarters for the colored slaves which the elder Robinson brought with him when he settled in New Brunswick shortly after the close of the revolutionary war. Col. Beverley Robinson, as history tells us, commanded a loyal American regiment during the revolutionary war and had to get out of the United States when peace was declared. He owned valuable property in lower New York, which he sacrificed rather than give up his allegiance to the British crown. He was a close personal friend of Gen. George Washington, the first President of the Republic, who while a British officer, was a frequent visitor at his home in New York. It was while sojourning at the Robinson home that Washington met Mary Phillips, whose sister was the wife of Col. Robinson, and he eventually proposed marriage to her, but his proposal was rejected. The Robinsons were above all else staunch royalists and it is said that had Miss Phillips accepted the hand of Washington in marriage the revolution might have had to find another leader and the great country to the south another father, as the Robinson influence would probably have kept him loyal to the British crown. Miss Phillips eventually married Roger Morris and the couple were deported from the United States at the close of the war on account of their strong British sympathies. The Phillips manor on the Hudson, the home of Mary Phillips, was used by Washington as his army headquarters during the early stages of the war which goes to show that he had not forgotten his love affair. The Robinson homestead on the Nashwaaksis has a history and the descendants of loyalists in this province ought to see to it that it is not allowed to go into decay.

According to an Indian tradition, Glooscap, the big chief or God of the Meleete and Micmac Indians, did not confine his operations and miraculous acts to that portion of Nova Scotia surrounding Minas Basin. Partridge Island, near Parrsboro, may have been his headquarters and the Five Islands near Parrsboro may have originally been his hunting dogs, as alleged, but the records tell us that he occasionally hopped over to the Saint John River and attended to a few important matters. In those days the beaver was a very large animal and made much trouble for the Indians. On complaint being made to Glooscap he broke their dam at the mouth of the Saint John River, and moved a few of the sods and rocks out to the entrance of the harbor, and modern folks call the conglomeration Partridge Island. A couple of beaver escaped up the Kennebecasis, but Glooscap pursued and killed them, the blood stains on the rocks being still visible. One beaver scampered off up the Saint John, and Glooscap in order to head it off, picked up a few pebbles and threw them far up the river. They landed near the Mouth of the Tobique and are still there, being known at the Tobique Rocks. The stones which Glooscap hurled such a long distance did not strike the escaping beaver but frightened it so badly that it crawled out on the shore and died. After Glooscap had broken the beaver dam at the mouth of the river he got the idea into his head there there was another one further up stream and when winter came he donned his snowshoes and started up to investigate. Upon arriving at Central Kingsclear, York County, thirteen miles above Fredericton, his snowshoes becoming burdensome he cast them off. They are still to be seen in the river at that point in the form of two little islands a right and a left, almost opposite the home of Mr. Harvey Mills, and the Indians call them "Snowshoe Islands." Glooscap located a second beaver dam at what is now known as Grand Falls and had no difficulty in breaking it. He returned to Saint John in the early spring in a canoe which he fashioned out of a huge rock. The Indians were grateful to him destroying the beaver, but complained that it was difficult for them to get their canoes up the Saint John River because of the strong adverse current. "I will attend to that," he is reported as saying, whereupon he arranged to have the tide flow up river as far as Springhill twice in every twenty-four hours, and it is so until this day. This satisfied the Indians of New Brunswick and Glooscap returned to his home at Partridge Island, N. S.

CITY TO ENGAGE ENGINEER FOR REPORT ON HYDRO

on estimated that 50,000 h. p. could be developed at Meductic with natural flowage.

Mayor Clark stated also that it was considered that power rates here were too high. St. Stephen had rates for power about one third of what they are in Fredericton. The Power Commission would have the right to expropriate the Maritime Electric Co. plant. The Commission wanted a full report on conditions of distribution and suggested that some one be named by the city to act with Chief Engineer Weston in such preparation.

Discussion.
Discussion on the matter then ensued with some difference of opinion. Ald. Ross suggested that a price on the Maritime Electric Co. plant be obtained but the final decision was to have an engineer secured who would aid in the preparation of a general report.

Poultry Field Day.
The annual field day of the Poultry Producers of New Brunswick will be held at the Experimental Station on Thursday August 26th. The program will consist of a poultry judging competition, addressed by Hon. Lewis Smith, Supt. Bailey, G. R. Wilson, A. R. Jones E. M. Taylor and others. Luncheon will be served in the Agricultural School Building at 12.30.

The water in the river is now down to summer level, and the rise and fall of the tide is very noticeable.

LIFE WAS A BURDEN

Restored to Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"It is a pleasure," says Mrs. Ross Parker, of Victoria, P. E. I., "to tell you of the new health and strength I got through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before taking the pills life was a burden to me. I was so badly run down that I did not know what to do. My blood seemed to have turned to water. I was very pale, constantly tired, and was losing flesh. It was a trial to attempt housework. Added to this I had a bad cough and my husband and friends thought I was going into consumption. The medical treatment I was taking did not appear to do me any good, and I had about given up hope when a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got six boxes and found so much benefit from them that I got six more boxes. Before these were all taken I was a new woman restored again to good health. I gained in weight, the cough left me, my appetite returned and I once more had a good color. Better still, I was able to do my housework without fatigue. Needless to say I always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all my friends, and I hope this will be the means of pointing the road to good health to some other sufferer."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong.

If you will send us your name and address a little book, "Building Up the Blood", will be mailed you prepaid. This book contains many useful health hints.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PATENAUDE CAMPAIGNING IN ONTARIO

Sudbury, Ont., 20—Addressing two meetings in the interests of Conservative candidates yesterday afternoon and evening, Hon. E. L. Patenaude, Minister of Justice, expounded the doctrines of the Conservative party to crowds which totalled over 3,000 and by whom he was accorded an attentive hearing. Speaking for over an hour in French, in the afternoon, Hon. Mr. Patenaude asserted that if any constitution were to suffer, it was the constitution of Mackenzie King. "Nobody has sinned but he himself, and he must do penance for that sin. He must not be allowed to gain power any more."

An appeal for the conciliation of the French and English-speaking races in Canada, was launched in his address to the French-Canadian electorate. "We must achieve a national sentiment," Mr. Patenaude pointed out, "so that both will learn to respect one another." While Liberals, Progressives, Laborites, and Independents all had different policies, and at the same time were endeavoring to unite them against Conservatives, the latter had one platform on which to stand before the electorate.

AMERICANS BOOZE ABROAD

Berlin, Aug. 21—Bartenders in this city declare that American tourists are consuming more liquor each year.

Fred Bielemann, the barkeeper at the Hotel Adlon which is frequented by more thirsty Americans than any similar establishment in Central Europe told the United Press: "In recent years we have been obliged to increase our day and night shifts in order to quench the large and discriminating thirst of thousands of Americans. European bars would suffer grievous losses if the Volstead act were revised."
