THE LATE HON. C. H. LABILLIOUS

The death of Hon. C. H. LeBillious, of Dalhousie who passed away yesterday at the home of his daughter at Notre Dame Degrace, Montreal will be learned of with great regret by many old friends throughout the province. The deceased was a prominent figure in the public life of the province having represented the county of Restigouche in the legislature for thirty years without a break and served as a Minister of the Crown under six different Premiers. He was the last of the old time politicians who served as a member of the cabinet of the late Hon. A. G. Blair and was the first man to hold the portfolio of agriculture following the creation of the department in 1897.

Hon. Mr. LaBillious after serving four years in opposition to the government led by Sir J. D. Hazen and Hon. J. K. Flemming, went down to his first defeat in the landslide of 1912 and did not afterwards occupy a seat in the House. On one occasion he was nominated as a Liberal candidate to contest Restigouche at a by-election for the Federal Parliament following the death of Mr. James Reid, M. P., but a dissolution of Parliament occurring soon afterwards and the union of Restigouche with Madawaska for Federal purposes brought about his retirement from the field. Hon. Mr. LaBillious did not take kindly to Hon. P. J. Veniot as an Acadian leader and played the part of a stormy petrel in Restigouche during the nine years that the Liberals held the reins of power in the province. He ran as an independent candidate in the election of 1920 and while he failed to win he split the vote and brought about the defeat of the government ticket. He was too old a politician to accept promises and all efforts to induce him to withdraw his candidature proved unavailing.

The death of Hon Mr. LeBillious means the passing from this earthly sphere of a good type of citizen who gave long and faithful service to his county and province.

CAN YOU SAVE?

A middle-western banker, executive head of a growing and prosperous financial institution, offers these few words of wisdom:

"Big business" makes a practice of keeping bankers fully informed of progress and plans. What is good for them is also good for the younger element."

The banker is right. No matter how small his business a man should become acquainted with his banker. The banker who is familiar with your financial problems is in excellent position to help you with your financial crises.

Few men who have lived within their incomes the first ten years of their business careers face failure later.

TURN TO THE BEES

To find a real civilization George Bernard Shaw says we must turn to the bees and the ants. They live in a civilized country. Even in the ant and bee country it is doubtful, Shaw thinks whether every insect really knows what it's all about. Probably most of them are just working under orders, like human beings.

Human beings work under all sorts of orders. Most of the instructions come from our instincts. Few have a clear picture of the universe and its workings. Few have even an intelligent theory of the world and life and the plan of existence.

ELOQUENCE

There is a lot which passes for eloquence which is only a fine wordiness. The only true eloquence is the kind of speaking that brings about a worthy result. No matter how fluent a man may be, if he does not really move people, stir them, inspire them to action, he is not really eloquent. Lloyd George, one of the finest public speakers in the world, says that the first eloquence is that which gets things done; the worst is that which delays them.

In his speech at the Maritime Board of Trade banquet at Halifax Premier Baxter strongly depreciated the mixing of Federal and provincial politics. "Too often" he pointed out "provincial governments of both political stripes have allowed themselves to be the pawns of their party friends at Ottawa". There does not seem to be any good reason for mixing up Federal and provincial issues. Even in the United States where party lines are closely drawn this is not done. In the late election a number of states while supporting Hoover for president elected Democratic state tickets. Several of the New York daily papers while supporting Hoover also assisted in electing Mr. Franklin Roosevelt to the governorship.

The bridegroom of two weeks is an optimist because he sees the best years in front of him; the bridegroom of fifty years is an optimist because he knows the worst is behind him.

"A man of wit is not incapable of business," once remarked Pope, "but above it." And that's the pose, too, of a lot of sleeve-frayed intelligentsia who would rather be cynical than useful.

It is our suggestion to the dear girls we see struggling with persistently annoying apparel that a little rosin properly applied might keep those irritating shoulder straps in position.

Out in California a judge has ruled that a mother-in-law is a relative. No clarifying judicial decision as to just what a relative is has ever been given, so far as we know.

There is, however, something still lacking in our civilization. We have societies for the prevention of cruelty to all dumb animals except dumbbells.

Someone says that the songs the man in the street sings are far better today than they were, which may be true, but there is still a lot to be desired in the renditions.

We always have more confidence in the thoroughness of the ablutions of the man who sings in his bath. That chap usually soaps as he sings.

Who can remember the old-fashioned Charley Chaplin two-reelers, in which the sound effects were provided by a convulsed audience?

Aimee McPherson is now in Glasgow, and evidently the Campbells and the MacDonalds don't give a hoot for Aimee, either.

Corsican bandits have been cautioned by the police to be polite to tourists. Sure, that's the better way to get money out of 'em.

Police in Minneapolis interfered with a dance marathon just as two of the dancers settled down to make it a life work.

"Reform movements" remarked the Man on the Car "are sure to come to rough roads. Even the fellow who tries to reform himself frequently has to detour."

"Life is made up of anvils and bellows," observes the philosophical blacksmith. "Some of us get all the hard knocks while others simply put on airs."

G. B. RICHEST ROYAL WOMAN KEPT ON JUMP

London, Nov. 22.—When some misguided visitor writes home to America of the idle, wealthy, social lights here natives yawn boredly and gently intimate that the scribe's contacts have been poor, probably with a segment of the nouveau riche, or that hardly perennial of all lands, the climber. The real quality of wealth and social eminence are cut off a different bolt of cloth. The women of the royal family, from Queen Mary right along the line, are industrious and justify existence, and a distinguished proof is Princess Arthur of Connaught, niece of the King, and the wealthiest royal woman in Britain.

Holds Vast Estates

As Duchess of Fife, she had vast estates and mansions—but service called her to a useful life, and she put in close to four years training in a hospital in the congested district of London, qualifying for her nurse's diploma. And then went nursing. When her husband, Prince Arthur, was made governor of South Africa, she had a great bit of fun at Cape Town. A railway worker saw her, gawped, bowed and scraped and was ill at ease. He recognized in the princess, his nurse in the London hospital. She put him at his ease quickly.

"Social life was objectionable," she says, "and I took up nursing. The social life and distractions have little appeal for me, and my few excursions into social life are a matter of duty. I would rather be busy at something useful and helpful. As I look back over my entire nursing life, I have concluded that life as a hospital nurse will have one or two clear effects on a woman—she either will improve as a woman, or deteriorate."

"If she has none of the qualities essential for true character building I am afraid hospital life will tend to deteriorate her. If on the other hand, the young woman has balance and character, hospital nursing will give her self-confidence, develop her intelligence, broaden her mind and give her a fuller understanding of life as an entirety."

DALHOUSIE ENJOYING A REAL BOOM

Campbellton, Nov. 22.—The extent of development being carried on by the Domill Construction Company of Canada, Limited, in connection with the construction work on the site of the new International Paper Company pulp and paper mill may be judged from the size of the payroll disbursed on Tuesday. The semi-monthly pay disbursed for labor and material amounted to $30,000.

If a swelled head hurt the owner thereof he might take greater precaution to avoid the calamity.

NOWADAYS YOU PRESS A BUTTON

Or perhaps a switch, or some little gadget, and a lot of things happen around home that lighten labor and banish trouble.

A Whirling Fan brings a cooling breeze, and a little copper, dish-like affair throws out a sizzling blast that warms the room in no time.

Another button boils coffee, toasts bread and cooks waffles. Another does a better job than a broom. Another makes a happy laundress out of a dismal washwoman. Another one cools the ice-box. Another—but why go on?

Labor and time saving devices have come and are today within the reach of the humblest home.

And one of the chief reasons why they have come and why they are within the reach of the humblest home is the power of advertising.

Advertising has carried the news of these better ways of doing things to every home. It has created a desire to possess them, and countless thousands have purchased them, and live better because of them.

Reading advertising not only tells you about new, helpful mechanical devices for the home, but it is an unerring guide to reliable products.

READ ADVERTISING REGULARLY. IT POINTS THE WAY TO BETTER LIVING.
