PRESIDENT COOLIDGE AT THE PAN AMERICAN CONFERENCE PREACHES GOOD WILL DOCTRINE

Havana, Cuba, Jan. 16—In his inaugural address at the opening of the Pan-American Conference here, today, President Coolidge dwelt upon the equal status of the twenty-one American Republics represented at the conference. He emphasized the need of good will and understanding and assured the delegates that the United States government was ready to encourage all peaceful efforts that would bring the American family of states into closer harmony.

President Machado, of Cuba, in his address of welcome, spoke with no less emphasis on the desirability of fraternal understanding among all people, universal peace and the spiritual and moral unity of the nations of the world.

"No person nor anything," said the Cuban President, "Can now oppose the tide that impels the destinies of the western hemisphere towards its definite brotherhood under the shelter of the jurisdictional standards that are indispensable for maintenance of peace."

For the first time all the 21 American republics are represented at a Pan-American conference, and for the first time an American President has attended the gathering.

First Foreign Trip.

Journeying outside of his homeland for the first time since he became President, Mr. Coolidge spoke to the distinguished gathering as the spokesman of a nation on an equal plane with her sister Republics, trying to find the way to a peaceful solution of whatever problems beset their quest for complete understanding and friendship.

Without mentioning the League of Nations or the Monroe Doctrine, the President assured the Congress that the Pan-American Union "involves no antagonism toward any section of the world or any other organization," but at the same time declared that the nations of the Western Hemisphere are committed to the principle that they are "better fitted to govern themselves than any one else is to govern them."

With what appeared to be almost studied intent, Mr. Coolidge refrained from letting any phrases creep into his address that might present a picture of the United States as dominating the political, social and economic development of the American Republics. The name of the United States was not once mentioned by the President except to give the assurance that his government was prepared to encourage the development of shipping, air lines, highways and all pursuits of peace that might bring the various units of the American family of states into a closer and more permanent harmony.

No War Establishment.

He declared there was no intention in this hemisphere of any nation building up a great military establishment to over-awe or subjugate its neighbors, and enunciated the doctrine that all nations of this hemisphere are determined to adjust their differences "not by a resort to force but by the application of the principles of justice and equity."

"All nations here represented," Mr. Coolidge said, "stand on an exact footing of equality. The smallest and the weakest speaks here with the same authority as the largest and the most powerful. You come together under the present condition, and future expectation of profound peace. You are continuing to strike a new note in international gatherings by maintaining a forum in which not the selfish interests of a few, but the general welfare of all, will be considered."

Trust of Democracy.

Contending that the nations have been charged with the sacred trust of establishing and expanding the spirit of democracy, the President said that although false starts and disappointing reactions will develop, the American republics have placed their confidence in the ultimate wisdom of the people.

"We are thoroughly committed to the principle that they are better fitted to govern themselves than any one else is to govern them," he said "We do not claim immediate perfection, but we do expect continual progress. Our history reveals that in such expectation we have not been disappointed."

It is better for the people to make their own mistakes than to have some one else make their mistakes for them."

Peace, Self Government.

Attachment to the policy of peace Mr. Coolidge declared, was second among the nations of this hemisphere only to the attachment to the principle of self-government.

"Their chief efforts have been devoted to the arts of peace," he continued. "They have never come under the delusion of military grandeur. No where these republics have great military establishments ever been maintained for the purpose of over-awing or subjugating other nations."

"We have all nourished a commendable sentiment of moderate preparation for national defense, believing that for a nation to be unreasonably neglectful of the military art, even if it did not invite and cause such aggression as to result either in war or in abject humiliation, it must finally lead to a disastrous disintegration of the very moral fiber of the nation. But it is one thing to be prepared to defend our rights as a last extremity and quite another to rely on force where reason ought to prevail."

New World Methods.

"The form of our governments guarantees us against the Old World dynastic wars. It is scarcely too much to say that the conflicts which have been waged by our republics for 150 years have been almost entirely for the purpose of securing independence and extending the domain of human freedom. When these have been accomplished, we have not failed to heed the admonition to beat our swords into plow-shares."

The material vehicles for the promotion of a closer union of American states enumerated by the American President were highways, railroad lines, ocean lines, transportation of mail by air and the press of all countries. He noted that "great progress has been made in the publication of fuller information and unbiased views," but he expressed the hope for a still better exchange of news service between the various countries, contending that "what happens in this hemisphere is of more vital interest to all of us than what happens across any of the oceans."

Newark, Jan. 17—He was born on St. Patrick's Day in Patras, Greece, and his name is Constantine Pappadimitrakopoulos.

A butcher, 44, he applied today for citizenship papers.

"Why don't you Americanize that name?" asked the Federal Court clerk.

"I don't want it changed because it's the name my mother gave me," replied the Greek.

BIG POLICY PAID TO GRAY'S DAUGHTER

New York, Jan. 17—The last chapters in the drama enacted by Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray are being written.

These chapters deal with the comforts supplied for their children. Yesterday an insurance company paid Jane Gray, 10-year-old daughter of Gray, $30,000 on a policy her father had held. The $97,000 insurance policy that Albert Snyder held is in litigation and there is question whether Lorraine Snyder will receive this money. The insurance company contends the policy was obtained by fraud. The civil suit over the policy was to have been heard today, but the tired attorneys who fought to save Mrs. Snyder obtained a continuance until Thursday.

In the Sunny South.

Mr. E. A. Schofield of the Schofield Paper Company, St. John who is wintering in Los Angeles in a letter to The Mail says: "Glorious weather with bright sunshine; thermometer 65 to 80 degrees every day; flowers and blossoms in all directions; 4000 people arriving daily since the cold wave hit the middle west."

Farmers to Honor Memory of Empire's Soldiers

Honor to the memory of the Empire's soldier dead will be offered by the members of the Canadian Farmer's Marketing tour which is now proceeding overseas under the auspices of the Canadian National Railways. A huge wreath, six feet in diameter, beautiful in design and bearing the crests of each province, intertwined with characteristic foliage, has been made in Montreal and will be deposited at the consulate in London this month during the party's visit there.

The picture shows the wreath being inspected by W. D. Robb, vice-president of the Canadian National Railways in charge of colonization and agriculture, before the departure of the party from Montreal.
