Treat the folks this Easter-time to candy of your own make! None tastes so delicious, none so perfectly satisfies, none so pure and good for all as the candy you make in your own kitchen. Use Borden's St. Charles when the recipe calls for milk—its creamy richness improves the flavor, adds to the food value of all candy. Here are a few tested recipes made with Borden's St. Charles—try them—they will delight you—

Three Layer Candy

PECAN FUDGE

2 cups granulated sugar
1 tablespoon butter
pinch soda
¾ cup pecans (broken)
1 cup Borden's St. Charles Milk

1 teaspoonful vanilla
1 tablespoon corn syrup
Place sugar, milk, syrup, butter and soda on stove. Boil until it forms soft ball when tested in cold water. Remove, whip, add flavor and nuts. When creamy pour in buttered pan.

Butter Fondant

4 cups granulated sugar
1 cup corn syrup
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tall tin Borden's St. Charles Milk
¼ lb. butter

Mix sugar, milk, syrup and butter. Add salt. Place over slow flame, stir constantly and boil until it forms a soft ball when tested in ice cold water or 238 degrees with candy thermometer. Remove and pour on to a platter which has been slightly sprinkled with cold water. When cool to blood heat, beat with wooden ladle until the whole becomes creamy and firm.

Cream Peppermint Drops

¼ cup Borden's St. Charles Milk
¾ tablespoonful water
2 cups granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
2 drops oil of peppermint

Combine the first three ingredients in a saucepan and boil gently without stirring until a soft ball will form when a little is tried in cold water. Cool till tepid, then flavor, beat till creamy and quickly drop on oiled pans in small rounds from the tip of a teaspoon.

GENE TUNNEY AND BRIDE GO THROUGH CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS MARRIAGE CEREMONIES IN ROME

Rome, Oct. 3—Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, and Miss Mary Josephine Lauder, of Greenwich, Conn., were married this morning in the Hotel Russie.

Two salons of the hotel were used, one for the civil and the other for the religious ceremony. The floral decorations were gorgeous, white roses with tuberose predominating.

Monsignor Joseph A. Breslin, vice-rector of the American College, and Tunney's former parish priest, performed the religious ceremony.

Monsignor Eugene S. Burke, rector of the college, was present at both ceremonies.

Signor Brofferio, one of the leading Fascists, conducted the civil ceremony which preceded the religious one. He delivered a short address expressing his good wishes for the happiness of the couple.

Attorney Del Frate, a lawyer for the American Embassy, employed by Ambassador Fletcher and Tunney, made all the arrangements with the civil authorities for a rapid dispatch of the formalities. Others present at the ceremony included Thomas L. Daniels of Minneapolis, secretary of the American Embassy, and Mrs. Daniels; American Consul Leon Dominian, and Vice-Consul Wesley Jones.

Marital Obligations.

John McCormack, noted tenor, his wife and daughter were among the guests. An orchestra played during both the civil and religious ceremonies. In performing the civil ceremony Brofferio read the articles of the Italian civil code establishing the rights and duties of married people.

Marriage imposes, he said, reading from the code that the couple must live together, be faithful to each other and assist each other. "The husband is head of the family," says the Italian law, he continued.

The wife, Brofferio said, follows the "civil condition of the husband;" takes his name and is obliged to accompany him wherever he chooses to fix his residence.

"The husband has the duty of protecting his wife," Brofferio read, solemnly looking at the husky bridegroom without a smile. "He has the duty to keep her with him and administer to her everything necessary to the needs of life in proportion to his substance."

Then Brofferio turned to the bride and said: "The wife must contribute to the maintenance of the husband if the latter does not have the means."

Then Brofferio continued reading the code: "The obligation of the husband to administer nutriment to the wife ceases when the wife absents herself without just cause from the conjugal domicile refuses to return to it."

The other clauses of the code provide that the wife cannot put her husband's goods in pawn, contract debts or institute suits in court without her husband's authorization.

The vows were exchanged as well as rings during the religious ceremony which was conducted in English and Latin.

Monsignor Breslin made a brief speech, wishing the couple every happiness and beamed with pride upon his former parishioner.

It was by a special dispensation that the religious ceremony was performed in the hotel and not in the scariness of a church or in an ecclesiastical building such as a rectory.

After the two ceremonies luncheon was served for 25 covers.

It was announced that the couple planned to leave soon after luncheon by automobile for an unrevealed destination.

Miss Lauder, who is wealthy and socially prominent, was dressed in mauve velvet trimmed with lace. She wore a silver net over her hair which gave her the appearance of a medieval chatelaine.

Tunney wore a blue sack-suit, a black and white tie, white spats and black shoes.

LADY EXPLORER AFTER PYGMY ELEPHANT

London, Oct. 4—Diana Strickland simply can't get away from her answer to the Shakespearean question "What's in a name?" The bard took the negative, but the famous woman explorer, seeker of big game and the ferret of secrets of the jungle says that when a woman is labelled "Diana" she simply must live up to it and shine as goddess of the hunt. And so she, who vigorously declared that the jungle is no place for a lady, has gone straight back there despite the fact that she is a real lady.

GOING TO AFRICA

"I am going this time to Africa," she said on departure, "to seek the pigmy elephants and to try to fetch some home as proof they exist, and thus silence the doubters and scoffers. The midget elephants exist, science may learn much from them, just as we are learning the cause of the race of human pigmies."

"We may yet find a solution of the housing problem and the general congestion in our civilized countries."

"Two women are going with me. I still believe the heart of Africa is no place yet for inexperienced persons, men or women. I went out first to find some relief from the tumult and the shouting and jazz and nerve-destroying social life, and found the relief all right, but when I started for home, I felt that perhaps the cure was worse than the affliction. Now after two years at home, I shall try the cure again. We expect, with the aid of the competent guides we have and because of the careful preparation based on knowledge, to go far beyond previous points visited in the upper Belgian Congo, and find the pigmy elephants."

ANNIE OAKLEY WAS THE BEST WOMAN RIFLE SHOT THE WORLD HAS EVER KNOWN

When barely six years old, Annie Oakley was doing her share to support the poverty-stricken family in the wilds of America by trapping birds. A year later her tomboyish eyes saw a tremendous 40-inch cap and ball rifle that hung on the wall of the bungalow. Her first experience with a rifle resulted in a red and bulbous nose—the result of the kick of an overload.

At nine, living the life of a slave with a cruel family to whom she had gone in the hope of improving her position, she was forced to do work that would have killed many a grown woman.

Eventually she escaped and returned to her mother, near Cincinnati. She had bought a new gun, and every spare moment was spent in the field, for there was a good market for game. The family entered upon a period of prosperity it had never before known—all because of a muzzle-loading gun in the hands of a girl not yet thirteen.

Her feats were talked about, and before long she started out to build up a career as the world's most famous markswoman. She is said to have fired no fewer than two million shots. Her life, told by Courtney Ryley Cooper, forms a thrilling story in his book "Annie Oakley, Woman-at-Arms."

She was fifteen when the famous team of Butler and Company arrived in Cincinnati. An hotelkeeper suggested a shooting match between Butler, famous for deeds of daring with firearms, and an unknown challenger.

Butler found his opponent the small pretty country girl, Annie Oakley. She beat him, married, him and won world-wide renown.

Oakley and Butler went from success to success until they became stars with Buffalo Bill.

In 1887, Buffalo Bill went to London to add to the entertainments of Queen Victoria's Jubilee Year, and after seeing the markswoman at a command performance, the Prince of Wales wrote to Buffalo Bill: "Will the little girl, Annie Oakley, who shoots so cleverly in your show, object to shooting a friendly match with the Grand Duke Michael of Russia? We will arrive at Earl's Court at 10.30 this morning.—Edward."

The Grand Duke, one of the finest shots in Russia, missed fourteen of the fifty targets; Annie Oakley missed only three.

As time went on, no tricks seemed too hard for "Little Miss Sure-Shot." Four balls were thrown into the air and she broke them all before they reached the ground, changing her double-barrelled gun into the midst of the feat. Another trick was to stand twenty yards behind her gun, wait until two balls had been thrown up, and then rush forward and break them both while they were still in the air.

She shot at the thin edge of a playing card held in her husband's hand and sliced the card in two. She knocked a coin from between his thumb and forefinger at thirty paces, and hit a swinging ball as it circled about his head at the end of a string.

Once in a contest, she fired one thousand shots at composition balls thrown into the air. She hit 943 times.

Perhaps her greatest feat was to fire five thousand rounds in a day, doing the loading herself. Of the first thousand shots she missed some twenty. Of the second, only sixteen. Then, tiring, her misses became more frequent, but she ended up by establishing a record of hitting 4,772 flying targets out of a possible five thousand.

Annie Oakley became the pet of London Society and gave lessons at one pound a lesson. Soon, in tuition fees, she was earning 200 pounds a week.
