EMPIRE PARLIAMENTARIANS BADE FAREWELL TO CANADA WERE TREATED LIKE PRINCES

Sydney, N. S., Oct. 4.—Delegates of the Empire Parliamentary Association tonight bade their farewells to Canada. "We have been treated like princes. We have been received like old friends," exclaimed Viscount Peel, chairman of the delegation, addressing a final dinner given by the Canadian Club and City of Sydney. And to his words of farewell and gratitude were added those of representatives from every Parliament in the Empire. In their journeys through Canada, Lord Peel felt members of the British delegation had been able to remove some misconceptions. It had been thought in some quarters apparently that the Empire Marketing Board was an instrument for pushing British goods in Empire markets. In reality, it was designed to push Empire goods in the British market and the cost fell on the British taxpayer.

It had been thought in some quarters that the unemployment insurance misnamed the dole, was a demoralizing charity. In reality the employee paid his share to a fund and was entitled as of right to his insurance payment when the curse of unemployment fell upon him. "We have heard it suggested," Lord Peel added, "that we desire to load Canada with inefficient unemployed. I repudiate with all my force," he proceeded, with emphasis, "this infamous suggestion."

He briefly reviewed the course of the delegation during their stay in Canada, its conferences with the Federal and various provincial governments, its studies of Canadian resources; he spoke of imperial relations as having realized in actual fact the immortal paradox that greater freedom means greater unity. "And where one has been in Canada," Lord Peel said, "the same message has struck our eyes with reiterated reverberation. You have decided that your future shall lie not in the life of an isolated community, but as one of the great free states in the great circle of our common empire."

Homeward Bound.

Lord Peel in the course of his farewell speech said:

"We are now setting our faces homeward. We have run the last lap of our memorable journey. We have finished our great nine course banquet through the length of Canada. It remains for me, on behalf of the united delegations, to thank the Canadian branch of the Empire Parliamentary Association for our splendid entertainment and for the unrivalled opportunity they have given us of meeting the people and studying the resources of Canada. We have been treated like princes, we have been received like old friends. Our special thanks are due to Senator Bostock and Speaker Lemieux, the joint heads of the Canadian branch of the association; to Senator Bostock for having so kindly accompanied us on a large portion of our western journey, and to Speaker Lemieux for having so graciously received us on our first landing at Quebec. Our thanks are due to the provincial governments, who so generously received and entertained us, to the Canadian Clubs, the mayors of cities and Boards of Trade who showed us every kindness and gave us every information. The railways gave us admirable service, and our gratitude is due to the press and to Mr. George Hambleton in particular for conveying the full expression of our views to the Canadian people."

After reviewing at length new bonds of understanding brought into being by the tour of the delegation, and expressing gratitude for the eagerness with which premiers and Ministers had pointed out the different spheres of production in each of the provinces, Lord Peel paid tribute to the enormous resources of the Dominion, and the manner in which they were being developed.

"But as I approach the end," he said, "let us turn our thoughts for one moment to the sacrifices which Canada has made in the Great War and to that great army of young men whom she will never see again. Your splendid prosperity adds pain and poignancy to the thought that there are so many who will not live to share it. At the going down of the sun and in the morning we will remember them."

"And so," he concluded, "with minds charged of a thousand pictures of city and plain, with hearts deeply stirred by affectionate remembrances, for the moment, and only for the moment, we bid you farewell."

SAXBY GALE VISITED HERE 59 YEARS AGO

ing issued by Lieut. Commander Saxby of the royal navy, that the eastern Atlantic Coast would be visited by a tremendous storm with very high tides and heavy gales. Lieut. Saxby was at that time connected with the meteorological division and many listened to his prediction with incredulity. But when the storm rumbled began and the lieutenant's warning began to be fulfilled many came to realize the full meaning of his statements.

Terrible Damage.

The date of this devastating outbreak was 1869 and there are many persons in this province and the other Maritimes who will recall with a slight dread of that awful period when houses shook and fell down; roofs were torn from the country side barns; high waters rushed over acres of land, destroying all in its wake and leaving in some cases great loss of human life. A Saint John witness of the great storm, is said to have exclaimed that the Bay of Fundy looked like a great walled fortress from the shore, so great was the height reached by the waves. The St. John river rose to a very high level due to the force of the storm in the Bay of Fundy. The Saxby Gale was one of the worst calamities that ever befell the people of the Maritime Provinces.

HIS EXCELLENCY HAD PLEASANT DAY ON RIVER

duck hunters. Mr. Davidson's natty speed boat with Clarence Mills, engineer of this city at the wheel, was utilized by the party for transportation purposes and filled the bill to perfection. A number of islands and bays were visited and the day was spent very pleasantly. While several flocks of ducks were seen they appeared to be very wild and were inclined to fight shy of the wooden decoys. An excellent luncheon prepared by the chef of the dining car, was served to all hands on board of the motor boat at noon while the craft was on the move.

Before boarding his train His Excellency cordially thanked the guides for their services and Col. Snow on his behalf presented each one with a souvenir of the expedition.

The Governor General's special left Oromocto at nine o'clock for Saint John and His Excellency and staff are spending today hunting at George McAvity's camp in the vicinity of Aurora. Tomorrow Viscount Willingdon and staff will proceed to Shediac, where he will visit Dr. J. C. Webster before proceeding to Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia. The party plan to return to Ottawa on October 20th.

Doctor—Your husband will never be able to work again.

IT WAS ALL FOR NOTHING BUT THE OATMEAL

The man who had taken his family forty miles out of town for the summer gazed from the darkness of an upper bedroom window at 11 o'clock the other night. The vibrant noises, the regal moon and the cold, clear light it threw upon the fields impressed him tremendously. They gave him an eerie feeling of solitude, of loneliness.

Suddenly he heard a muffled thumping. Surely it came from within the house. He called to his young son who slept downstairs.

"Are you moving around down there?"

"No," said the boy, truthfully.

The tenderfoot commuter frowned and settled his head upon the pillow. He closed his eyes—then raised his head sharply. Another remote and this time more insistent thumping! What was it anyway! Why wasn't his wife awake! What the—

"Oh, Dad," called his son, "I think someone's at the front door." The man from New York jumped out of bed and grabbed his bathrobe. He couldn't find his slippers and he pattered down the stairs without them. Perhaps a telegram from the boss. Perhaps—something urgent, whatever it was!

He switched on the lights in the living room as a matter of protection and advanced to the porch. He saw a face there.

"I'm the grocery boy," said a voice hurriedly. "The Missus ordered oatmeal today and I was afraid if I didn't bring it up, the kids wouldn't have anything for breakfast!"

The man from New York ascended the stairs gingerly and shook his wife.

"Yeh—yeh—" she mumbled, rising on her elbows and staring at him.

"The oatmeal's here!" he said loudly, jumping into bed.

THE ROYAL TASTE IN BOOKS SHOWS WIDE VARIANCE

Windsor, England, October 5.—Every member of the British royal family has a different taste in literature, says the Windsor Castle librarian. There are scores of books in the castle library dealing with naval history and strategy. These belong to the King.

Queen Mary leans toward Dickens, Tennyson and Scott.

Kipland is the favorite author of the Prince of Wales.

The Duke of York reads little else than thrillers. His favorite character is Sherlock Holmes. On the other hand, the Duchess of York prefers the classics.

Princess Mary still has a great number of volumes of French literature which she has never moved from the castle library since her marriage to Viscount Lascelles.

SPECIAL ATTRACTION AT GAIETY THEATRE

"Tenderloin" is the photo play at the Gaiety for Friday and Saturday with the lovely Dolores Costello as star. This new picture is a melodrama of the underworld and has several talking sequences. Miss Costello has the role of a dance hall girl who because of her loyalty to her lover is suspected of being implicated in a crime. Conrad Nagel has the role of the gangster loved by the girl. There are many thrilling scenes in the film. A short comedy is also on the bill.

BRIDES' HIGH COST PROBLEM IN THE SUDAN

Khartoum, Sudan, Oct. 5.—The government has been trying in vain to reduce the price of brides. A bridegroom now has to pay 15 cows to the bride's father. A few hundred miles away, near Lake Albert the price is five cows. A reduction here has been thwarted by the objections of Shilluk maidens with such statements as "What! Do you think we are going to be cheaper than our mothers?"
