Treat the folks this Easter-time to candy of your own make! None tastes so delicious, none so perfectly satisfies, none so pure and good for all as the candy you make in your own kitchen. Use Borden's St. Charles when the recipe calls for milk—its creamy richness improves the flavor, adds to the food value of all candy. Here are a few tested recipes made with Borden's St. Charles—try them—they will delight you—

Three Layer Candy

PECAN FUDGE

2 cups granulated sugar
1 tablespoon butter
pinch soda
3/4 cup pecans (broken)
1 cup Borden's St. Charles Milk

1 teaspoonful vanilla
1 tablespoon corn syrup
Place sugar, milk, syrup, butter and soda on stove. Boil until it forms soft ball when tested in cold water. Remove, whip, add flavor and nuts. When creamy pour in buttered pan.

Butter Fondant

4 cups granulated sugar
1 cup corn syrup
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 tall tin Borden's St. Charles Milk
1 lb. butter
Mix sugar, milk, syrup and butter. Add salt. Place over slow flame, stir constantly and boil until it forms a soft ball when tested in ice cold water or 238 degrees with candy thermometer. Remove and pour on to a platter which has been slightly sprinkled with cold water. When cool to blood heat, beat with wooden ladle until the whole becomes creamy and firm.

Cream Peppermint Drops

1/2 cup Borden's St. Charles Milk
3 1/2 tablespoons water
2 cups granulated sugar
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
2 drops oil of peppermint.
Combine the first three ingredients in a saucepan and boil gently without stirring until a soft ball will form when a little is tried in cold water. Cool till tepid, then flavor, beat till creamy and quickly drop on oiled pans in small rounds from the tip of a teaspoon.

CANADIAN WOMEN TO MAKE DIRECT APPEAL TO PRIVY COUNCIL OF GREAT BRITAIN

Hope For New Ruling From Supreme Court Judgment That Under British North America Act Women Not "Persons" Nor Eligible for Canadian Senate.

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 30—That Canadian women are not prepared to meekly accept the ruling of the Supreme Court of Canada handed down last April that within the meaning and intent of the British North America Act, as it now stands, females can never hope to be rated as fit and "qualified persons" for the seats of the Upper House, is made evident by the very recent announcement from the west that the five Alberta women who were primarily responsible for the reference of this matter to the Supreme Court will now take it further and will ask for interpretation of the disputed Section 24 from the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Great Britain.

Appellants Prominent.

The appellants all of whom are prominent in public affairs in Canada, are the Hon. Irene Parlby, the first woman to hold the rank of Cabinet Minister in any British parliament; Mrs. Louise McKinney of Claresholme the first woman to be elected to the Alberta legislature now some ten years ago; Mrs. Nellie McClung, of Calgary, internationally known as an able writer, feminist and lecturer, who represented the city of Edmonton in the Alberta House; Mrs. O. C. Edwards of MacLeod, the veteran authority who has been for many years Convenor on Laws in the National Council of Women, the leader in the fight, Magistrate Emily Murphy of Edmonton, well known author, journalist and judge, who with Mrs. Alice Jamieson of Calgary was one of the first two women in the British Empire to be appointed magistrates and in whose courts in Alberta the struggle may be said to have begun.

"This is a fight for women but was not started by women", said Magistrate Murphy in announcing the decision of herself and sister appellants to go to the highest court in Britain for a final ruling. "Twelve years ago when I was appointed to the bench in Alberta with jurisdiction in Edmonton and later throughout the province, my initial appearance at the Police Court was heralded by counsel for the defence, in my first case rising and objecting to me. 'You are not a person within the meaning of the North America Act' said he with considerable vigor, 'and I object to your jurisdiction.' And right there," said the Magistrate, "he started the whole discussion which is not likely to stop before the B. N. A. in Clause 24 is either changed so that the word 'persons' is made to definitely include female or else is interpreted by the highest authorities as already doing so, according to the principle of reason and common sense on which all common law rests."

Appeal Taken.

When an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court of Alberta against the jurisdiction of the new women magistrates a judgment was handed down stating that "a woman is under no legal disqualification in the Province of Alberta from being appointed a Justice of the Peace or Police Magistrate" and it is a noticeable feature of the recent appeal to the Supreme Court at Ottawa that behind the five women appellants and appealing with them stood the progressive government of this province.

But in other parts of Canada the fight has gone on, for although in post war days the government changed the B. N. A. in one clause enabling women to vote and to sit in parliament, it left the clause dealing with the constitution of the Senate in the form given it by the Fathers of Confederation and the Supreme Court ruled that these gentlemen could never have contemplated women as "persons".

Bitter Struggle.

In the year 1919 the real struggle was staged, for in that year, when the Hon. Arthur Meighen was premier, several of the most powerful women's clubs in Canada asked the government for the appointment of women senators. They were at first assured of "favorable consideration" but when in the case of the Federated Women's Institutes the demand was made more specific and other petitioners appeared asking for the appointment of Emily Murphy to the vacancy for Alberta in the Senate, Mr. Meighen after some delay, denied the request on the ground that women were not "persons" in the meaning of the British North America Act.

In 1923 a motion appeared on June 25, in the Orders of the Day in the Senate itself, that a petition go to His Majesty, the King, praying for the insertion of the word "female" before "persons" in Section 24 of the British North America Act, but to this motion, for which, by the way no sponsor spoke, there was either carelessly or carefully tacked the further proviso that no senator should be allowed to hold this office after seventy years of age. So it is perhaps not surprising that the resolution, orphaned as it was, was pushed to the end of the session by more pressing business and has never more appeared.

To Supreme Court.

But last year, the women, tired of parliamentary delays and shufflings, decided to take the whole matter out of the political field and into that of the law. With this end in view they approached the Supreme Court as "interested parties" seeking to know "Does the word 'persons' in Section 24 of the B. N. A. 1867, include female persons?" This appeal was made under Section 60 of the same Act which provides that "important questions of law and fact touching the interpretation of the British North America Act may be referred by the Governor General in Council to the Supreme Court. With the result of this appeal still fresh in the minds of everyone and despite the announcement, recently made from Ottawa that the Government would "take steps" at the next session of parliament to have the B. N. A. amended in order to make women eligible for the Senate the women who made this appeal will go on with the present one to the highest court in the Empire.

They state that they have profound doubts as to the progress likely to be made through governments of any party and they point out that if the required change is really sought the concurrence of both Canadian Houses must be secured before the British parliament can be approached. In which case they express doubts as to the attitude of the Senate. Also they further state, that in the opinion of some constitutionalists this process would entail the consent of all provincial legislatures, in which case what of Quebec where the provincial franchise has never been extended to women and where opposition is certain to occur.

So they rely rather on the process of law as being more likely to be efficacious, and are the more persuaded that their reliance is justified since the King Government has announced that it will not oppose their action. In which case they hope that at long last Canadian women may be held by the Privy Council to be in both law and fact "persons" for all purposes, even that of attaining the dizzy heights of the esnatorial seats.
