

FIRE AT DEVON
DESTROYED BARN OF JAMES STONE

Devon Man Suffered
Loss of Large Barn in Fire Which Started
From Short Circuited
Wire.

A large sectional barn belonging to James Stone of South Devon was completely burned in a fire which broke out at 8.30 o'clock last night at the latter's home and which was plainly discernible from this city. Besides the barn, an old truck and odds and ends of stored furniture were also destroyed in the fire. It was ascertained that the fire started from one of the trucks which were in the barn, a short circuit in one of the wires being the direct cause and that which started the fire. The truck was safely taken from the barn by Mr. Stone before any damage was done to it.

Citizens here were made aware of the burning by the dull, red color of the sky which appeared from the Devon side and a great number utilized their cars to arrive at the scene of the fire, while others watched the devastating scene from the Fredericton bank of the river.

The fire blazed into action quickly and the doomed barn was soon a red mass of flame and color. The Devon fire department was soon on the scene and every effort was made to extinguish the fire before it reached major proportions. But all in vain, for even then the mounting flames were licking at the last remnants of the framework. Hundreds of people from Devon and Fredericton stood by and watched the destructive progress of the flames.

A few shingles on the main house caught fire but did no material damage before being extinguished. It is understood that the barns were partly covered with insurance. It was several hours before the fire was extinguished. This morning the barn was a frame-work of charred wood-work.

to average and full figures in this Gossard "step-in combination" made of the magical Charmosette. Though unboned, this garment, through the power of the soft, pliable Charmosette actually reduces figure measurements two inches the moment it is on the figure. And wearing it constantly means that the figure gradually loses weight—and in the right proportion. Satin tricot is used over the bust and in the back, giving the figure natural supported lines.
