

PROF. KIERSTED OF U. N. B. SPEAKS ON FORESTRY

of the forest products is exchanged for the goods of the merchant and both must be transported. It is a commonplace that a country must depend upon its natural resources for raw material to manufacture and exchange for products which it does not produce. The forest industry is basic for this province and the preservation of the forests is imperative for our continued well being. Fires destroy the forests and wipe out the wealth of natural capital. The man who sets such fires is the enemy of all citizens and the man who guards and preserves our forests is the guardian and protector of the heritage of ourselves and our children.

He—Do you play golf?

She—Oh dear, no. I don't even know how to hold the caddie.

SYMPATHETIC ONE HAD HER TROUBLESTOO

(New York Sun)

The commuter was recovering from a very severe illness. His wife also was ill. The eldest boy had been ailing for some time. The daughter was in the hospital and the youngest son was recovering from an operation. The telephone rang. At the other end of the wire was the wife of the commuter's friends.

"How is Mary?" she asked.

"Mary," replied the commuter, "is down at the hospital to see the girl. She is not feeling at all well and she is going to get the doctor to examine her."

"That's too bad. And how is Willie?"

"Willie is very much better. He will be able to get down stairs in another week."

"You've been ill yourself, haven't you? How are you feeling?" was the next question.

"Oh, I expect to be back at the office next week for the first time in three months. That is if the younger boy is well again."

"It's a terrible thing," went on the sympathizer, "everything seems to go wrong at the same time. I was remarking to my husband this morning when we found the two legs of the dining room table were loose. It will cost us ten dollars to have them repaired and only last week we had to pay five dollars to get a chair mended. Well, I hope you get over your troubles soon. Good-by."

Missus—I heard you say "Rose" several times in your sleep last night. Who is she?

Mister—I haven't the slightest idea my dear. I was simply saying it with flowers.

YES, THE MEN HAVE THEIR HAIR WAVED

(New York Sun)

"Like it or not," said the Fifth Avenue barber, "a lot of men are having their hair waved these days and the practice is growing. Any barber will assure you that this is a fact."

"But the point is that men are not only getting their hair waved in men's barber shops, they are patronizing beauty parlors once reserved for women. Many big beauty parlors now have a men's section and take care of many masculine customers for waving, treatments and the like."

"From the talk I hear I think that women are largely responsible for this. They are encouraging men to indulge in these little fripperies. Then too, foreign travel, which is getting commoner and commoner, has something to do with it. In Continental cities, especially in Italy and France, men think nothing of having their hair curled and waved and in barber shops in these countries you will find a row of chairs occupied by men who are having their locks dolled up. Nobody over there thinks the worse of them for it, but it's new to America. And as I say, the custom seems to be on the increase."

Mrs. Smith—My husband keeps late hours these days.

Mrs. Brown—Doesn't it make you angry?

Mrs. Smith—No, not at all. He walks with the baby till it sleeps.

Fire destroys the green standing timber, leaving dead trees to dry out as kindling for the second and third fires which generally follow. This young growth doesn't get a chance. Human carelessness accounts for most fires in the woods. Only carefulness will save Canada's remaining forests.

FAMILY SHAVES VILLAGE BEARDS FOR 200 YEARS

Blackheath, England, April 26—The death her of Job Taylor, barber, ended a sequence of eight men in a single family who have trimmed the whiskers of Blackheath during the reigns of eight British sovereigns.

Taylor's great-grandfather was the village barber in the reign of George I, 200 years ago, and since then his descendants have continued the business.

The last of the Taylor barbers operated his shop for fifty-three years, during which time, he estimated, he had given more than 200,000 shaves.

We never found out whether Dr. Einstein found his baggage which was relatively lost from a French sleeping car.

Every Forest Fire is a Job Killer!

In Canada to-day the condition of our gigantic forest industries is a barometer of our national welfare. If the forests be wasted through preventable forest fires prosperity must decrease and general employment conditions must suffer.
