THE MODERN MAN

Here's something that will loosen the dandruff on gray heads. In Tekonsha, Mich., there is a high school girl, Lucille Hoover, whom the faculty has chosen as the typical American girl. Maybe she is. Anyway, she is interesting. Though Lucille's philosophy is rather bewildering, it has the charm of sprightliness.

If the camera has functioned in good faith, Miss Hoover is pretty. But that isn't the story. It is her assurance in dealing with the profound subject, Man, that fascinates. Listen to wisdom, only twelve years out of the kindergarten:

"Modern man does not care so much about his evening papers and family fireside, as he does about his golf and fishing." Miss Hoover believes, "and he can find meals like mother used to make at the corner restaurant, while the laundry attends to his buttons and darning. What he seeks in a wife is a dimpled doll to show-off to his friends, an intellectual companion to share his more serious moments, and a rough-neck chum to accompany him to camp. He wants a help-mate like a Madonna, a form like Venus, a mind like Solomon, the constitution of a lumber-jack and the disposition of a saint."

Many people have been fooling themselves with the idea that there is a young people's problem. Nothing of the kind. It has been settled by the valedictorians of Tekonsha and other high schools.

The problem today is an old people's: How to maintain the mental pace set by bubbling intellects that interpret modern man and tell him what he wants and what sort of animal he is.

REASON AND FEAR

A child was afraid of a rabbit. A rabbit was put in a cage and the cage was set on a table. The child was then asked to eat his dinner at the other end. In fear he refused. Finally he got hungry enough to eat, in spite of the rabbit. At the next meal the rabbit was moved a little closer to the child. Soon, the child was eating his dinner with the rabbit's cage right in front of him. Fear had been overcome by a definite effort. The only way to beat fear is to face it and conquer it by a definite act of the will, at whatever cost. Few of us have the advantage of having had the fears of childhood eradicated as in the case of the child and the rabbit. It's a harder problem when we are no longer young.

The plant of the Maritime Reduction Company, at Rosevale, Albert Co., N. B., 22 miles from Moncton, which has been in construction since 1927, is about finished at a cost of about $500,000. It is expected that the 75 employees will be able to extract 5,000 gallons of oil per day from the oil-bearing shales known as Albertite. About 130 tons of shale a day will be treated, each ton of which will also yield 60 pounds of sulphate.

The National Revenue Review under the caption of "A Timely Reminder", publishes the following:

"Customs service is free; should guarantee bond or deposits be required, impress on the tourist or traveller that deposits are returned in full, and that no portion of the fee charged by the bonding company is received by the Department."

The total value of the gold which has been produced from placer mining operations in Yukon territory might conservatively be placed at $165,500,000, according to the Department of the Interior's latest annual report.

Dr. Mayo may be anatomically right when he says women's calves are disappearing because of their high heels, but the short skirts are doing a lot to equalize the condition.

Had Enjoyable Time About fifty members of Fredericton Lodge No. 6 went by automobile last evening to St. Stephen where degree work was carried on by the different lodges who attended. Representatives from St. John, St. Andrews, Calais, as well as Fredericton were in attendance and a very enjoyable time was had. Thirty-seven members of the Southern Cross Lodge, Campbellville, arrived in a fishing boat from Grand Manan. Upon the arrival of the parties, a banquet was served by the Pythian Sisters and was greatly appreciated by the hungry travellers. Following lodge exercises some interesting speeches were given. E. C. Atkinson and R. B. Wallace of this city were two of the speakers. Byard Stillwell, of St. John was chairman of the meeting. The local men arrived home at an early hour this morning.
