SEPTEMBER DAYS

We've spent lavishly of summer blooms and shades
Of woodland songs and peaceful clover glades,
Yet God, has given us September days
With gardens fair that drowse amidst the haze
In laziness of hale content.

Fair mornings tower the sweet translucent air,
With noons of deeper shades that spread on bare
And dusty fallow ground along the lane,
Where scarlet-tinted sumacs proudly reign
Like crimson skies in twilight fields.

It isn't hard for us to be glad today
With soft strange whispering of leaves that play
And flap and tumble in cool winds that flow,
As moody and full of change they gently blow
When golden summer falls asleep.
—LAWRENCE P. REINHARDT in Philadelphia Inquirer.

"Yes everybody I met in Egypt had his nanc out."
