WELL, ANYWAY, TRICK CIGAR LIGHTERS DO LOOK DOGGY

(Toledo Blade)

The man who carries a match box heaved himself a huge sigh of relief when the boys in the office began to light compare and admire their new Christmas cigaret lighters.

It seems as if Santa Claus installed a new department for the exclusive manufacture of the trick flares this year. Every office in town is thick with them. In gold, silver and leather they appear. Sizes and shapes are of great variance.

But the principle of the thing the little doo jigger at the top which knocks sparks off a bit of flint onto a fuel soaked wick is the same in 99 cases out of 100 cigaret lighters. "The darn things actually work" mused the man who carries a match box. "Now maybe I'll have a chance to get by with not more than a carton of matches a week. These bozos shouldn't be so heavy on the borrow with these trick lighters all over the place. Yes sir, yes sir, a neat little trick.

And he continued in this admiring strain while on the way to lunch. Suddenly temptation. A cigar store loomed on the horizon. He entered, invested enough money to keep himself and the office force in matches for six years and become the proud possessor of a lighter that sometimes lights.

The man who always had matches spun the fire wheel and nothing happened.

"How's she work?"
"Oh you gotta have fuel."
"Fuel?"
"Yeah. Two bits a can."

The latest recruit to the ranks of the Proud Possessors returned to the office a triumphant gleam in his eye.

"How do you get fuel in these things?" he inquired.

"Fuel?" It was a chorus.

"Here let me have it, I need some in mine. I'll show you. First you unscrew this little dings on the bottom—by the way, inside that little knob is where you carry your extra flints. Then you take the can this way and shoot the stuff into the bottom, see?"

"Fine, Ken. I'm outa fuel too. Lemme have it a minute."

And so the fuel can went around and around.

"How about mine?" asked the pur-

this defect simply by realizing how stupid it really is and by conscientiously and diligently exerting their will power.

chaser of the can.

"Oh yea, sure enough. Here it is."

"It won't work."

"It's empty."

So the man who always had matches learned a great lesson.

COMPETITION.

Oh, I could love your beauty
And your eyes of flashing hue
And I could love your manners
But alas, you love them too!

"Can I buy this on the payment plan?"

"Yes. One payment and its yours."

Mertrand—Did you et a berth on the boxing squad?

Clarence—Berth is right! Theying it by spending most of her time put me to sleep the first thing!

PAWNS GEMS FOR $10 AND MISSES BIG REWARD

London, Jan. 12—There is an Italian waiter in London who believes the slogan, "It pays to advertise" should be changed to "It pays to read advertisements." The waiter, who was employed in a West End night club, found a diamond bracelet on the floor. He kept it for twelve days, and then tried to pawn it for $10. The pawnbroker was suspicious, and the Italian was arrested and sentenced to two months in prison.

He had not read the newspapers, and so did not know that a reward of $2,250 had been offered for the return of the bracelet, which was worth $25,000.

He—Aele says she is working to beautify the town.

She—Yes she believes sche's do-Clarence—Berth is right! Theying it by spending most of her time put me to sleep the first thing!
