LATE TRANSLATIONS GIVE QUITE A NEW VERSION OF THE DEATH OF OUR SAVIOUR

London, Aug. 4.—A new version of the crucifixion of Christ has been published here in translations recently made from the original Arabic and Syrian languages.

It presents Pontius Pilate and his wife, Procula, as two who "loved Jesus like their own soul" and sets forth that Pilate delivered Jesus to be flogged, believing it would save Him from death.

It adds an entirely new episode in which Pilate, subsequent to Christ's crucifixion, himself is crucified, but with his wife and children was received into heaven.

It also recounts miracles transpiring at the tomb of Jesus after His ascension, including the bringing of sight to a man blind in one eye; and the raising from the dead of the only son of the Roman Emperor, Tiberius Caesar.

The documents support the contention that it was Herod and not Pilate who was responsible for the death of Christ.

The translations were made by Dr. A. Mingana, and are published by the John Rylands library. They are included in a series known as the "Westbrooke Studies."

Original Documents.

Two documents form the publication just made. The first deals with the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ; the second is an apocryphal document entitled "Martyrdom of Pilate."

The author of the original papers, according to Dr. Mingana, is Gamaliel, although the work has been generally credited to Cyriacus, Bishop of Oxyrhynchus. In the belief of Dr. Mingana, the documents form a link in the apocryphal chain of the acts of Pilate or the Gospel of Nicodemus.

The translation of this new version of the crucifixion relates that the Jews feared Pilate would rescue

Christ from them and that they appealed to Herod for power to crucify Him.

It is then set down that Pilate and his wife, Procula, "loved Jesus like their own soul."

The Jews, according to the translation, demanded that Jesus be "chastised" by Pilate, promising to release him if the chastisement were administered.

Pilate ordered Jesus flogged, believing by this lesser punishment he would prevent his death. But the plan, it is recorded, failed, and Christ was crucified.

After the crucifixion, Pilate rebuked the centurions and the high priest, and "rose from his chair and scourged the high priest with a rough whip," thereafter ordering him to prison. Pilate then searched for the body of Christ and questioned the guard, but was unable to find where it had been buried.

Later the first of the hitherto unrecorded miracles took place, according to the manuscript. Pilate gave the wrappings of the body of Jesus to a centurion who was blind in one eye and instructed him to touch the clothing to his face. The centurion did and the sight was restored.

Soon a body was found in a well, the manuscript recounts, in the garden where Jesus was buried. It was identified as that of a robber crucified with Christ, and on the cross promised eternal life.

The body was swathed in the wrappings from the body of Christ and laid in the tomb where Christ's body had been placed. Pilate prayed before the tomb.

After a time the tomb was opened and the spiritual form of the robber appeared and testified to his resurrection "because of the few comforting words that I uttered while he was on the wood of the cross."

The second document called the "Martyrdom of Pilate" relates that the Jews had planned to seize Procula, wife of Pilate, when she visited the tomb, and then to kill Pilate.

Pilate was warned of the plot against him and captured Barrabas, whom he considered chief of the plotters. Barrabas was then crucified head downward.

This incensed the Jews still further against Pilate and they prevailed upon Herod to send letters of complaint to the Emperor, Tiberius Caesar. The Emperor answered sending an envoy to Jerusalem who ordered that Pilate be flogged because he had brought about the death of Jesus without consulting the Emperor. Then by bribery, the envoy was prevailed upon to deliver Pilate to his enemies for crucifixion.

Pilate was crucified upon the Savior's cross, the manuscript recounts, with a crown of thorns upon his head. But as he was nailed to the cross, two angels appeared from heaven and a voice spoke, saying that Pilate and Procula should be given crowns in heaven.

The multitude became frightened, removed Pilate from the cross, and returned him to the custody of the envoy of the Emperor.

Boy Restored to Life.

In the meantime, the account goes on, the only son of the Emperor had died and Tiberius sent the body to the tomb of Christ where, after four days, the boy was restored to life.

Pilate soon appeared before the Emperor, who then was angry because Pilate had failed to tell him the full story of Jesus and had delivered him to the Jews.

"I will now kill you and do to you what you did to him," Tiberius is quoted as saying to Pilate.

Pilate was crucified and beheaded. The body was shrouded and taken back to Jerusalem.

"But when we reached the town," the manuscript read, "we found that Procula and her two children had died on the very day of our arrival."

"We placed them all in one grave near the Sepulchre of the redeemer."

Then Tiberius ordered that all Jews in Jerusalem should be killed. Herod was sought, but it was found that he had died before Pilate.

The emperor and his wife next began a search for the Virgin Mary "so they might crown her with the crown of the kingdom."

"They scoured all the land of Judea," the manuscript recites, "but did not find her because she had left

THE PEROXIDE BLONDE IN DEBT TO INHIBITIONS

Evanstone, Ill., Aug. 7.—Peroxide blondes and inhibitions were grouped as affiliates of science today by Dr. H. N. Alyea, of Princeton University, a speaker on the program of the American Chemical Society Institute at North western University.

Peroxide blonds, he said, owe a great deal to scientific inhibitions, for inhibitions in chemistry, it was explained, are used to keep things fresh and lasting.

"By means of inhibition," said Professor Alyea, "we can prevent butter from becoming rancid, foodstuffs from spoiling, and eventually we may be able with them, to retard harmful life processes such as the growth of diseased tissue and gers."

"Inhibition will continue to render lasting service to blonds, for less than a drop of acetanilide serves to prevent rapid decomposition in each fluid ounce of commercial hydrogen peroxide."

By use of inhibitors—which retard oxidation—rubber now lasts three to this world and ascended into heaven."

Later the writer says, she appeared before the 12 apostles and said that she had seen Pilate, Procula, and their children in great glory, "while the cross of her son was shining upon them."

If Lydia E. Pinkham were alive today she would be one hundred and nine years old. Her descendants continue to manufacture her famous Vegetable Compound and the integrity of four generations is behind the product. In many families today, mothers are teaching their thirteen year old daughters to depend upon the same medicine their grandmothers praised back in 1870.

five times as long as it did, said Dr. Waldo L. Semon, of the B. F. Goodrich Company.

"Rubber was first used for winter overshoes 60 years ago in New England," said Dr. Semon. "They worked fine until they were put away for summer then they simply melted away leaving a bad odor behind them."

"The trouble was that the air had oxidized the rubber. No inhibitors had been used in their manufacture. Science got busy. The result has been the prolongation of the life of rubber, used in 30,000 different products."
