'SALADA' TEA

SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Miss Molly Barry, daughter of Hon. play the Fredericton High School ourable Chief Justice J. H. Barry and team.

Mrs. Barry entertained at luncheon today at her home in honor of Miss Margaret MacLaren, daughter of His Honor Lieutenant Governor Murray MacLaren and Mrs. MacLaren. The table was most artistic in its appointments. Covered with pointe de Venise lace, the table floral decorations carried out the theme of the rose, shamrock and purple heather, the centerpiece stressing the Irish harp. Small electric lights were interspersed in the green smilax which covered the harp. A tall slender crystal vase holding a yellow rose and purple heather was placed at each end of the table. The place cards in white and gold showed a small green shamrock in one corner. The favors were small corsages of shamrock and heather centred with a yellow rose. Covers were laid for twelve, those seated at table being Miss Margaret MacLaren, Miss Molly Barry, Mrs. A. R. Slipp, Mrs. A. J. Thompson, Mrs. K. E. Golding, Mrs. T. C. Barker, Mrs. H. A. Gibson, Mrs. E. C. Armstrong, Miss Constance Montgomery Campbell, Miss Margaret Richards, Miss Jean Hodge and Miss Helen Crockett.

Mrs. Phillippe C. Robinson entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home in honor of Mrs. Tilley, wife of Premier L. P. D. Tilley. Covers were laid for ten, those present being Mrs. Tilley, Mrs. P. C. Robinson, Mrs. E. C. Armstrong, Mrs. J. D. Palmer, Mrs. E. O. Turner, Mrs. Stuart Neill, Mrs. F. W. Hill, Mrs. A. J. Thompson, Mrs. C. P. Holden and Mrs. J. J. F. Winslow.

Mrs. C. J. Mersereau was hostess last night to the Bridge Club of which she is a member, at her home on University Avenue. Mrs. W. J. Osborn was the winner of the prize.

Miss Maud Dibblee of Woodstock is the guest of Miss Isabel Hartley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Hartley. Miss Dibblee is a member of the basket ball team who are here to

THE SHAMROCK

Little green plant from the Evergreen Isle,
Emblem of tears brushed away with a smile,
As smiles chase the tears from an Irish girl's face;
Tender and true as the heart of her race.

Emblem of constancy, faith and good cheer;
These are the virtues the Irish enjoy dear;
Giving, not grasping, nor hoping reward;
Open and fair as her jewel-decked sword.

Child of the meadows; or nestling in nooks,
Under walls, by the roadside, or swift flowing brooks;
Modest, tenacious, with dew-moistened flowers,
Raised to the sunshine or bowed to the showers,

Loved by St. Patrick, the saintly, the wise;
Green as the grass under rain-laden skies;
Honored by Irishmen o'er all the eart,
Who hold in fond memory the land of their birth.

Weather Spring-like Here Today

The north come reports that the depth of snow in the woods is likely to cause a monster freshet. Hereabouts similar conditions exist and coupled with this there is a great quantity of frost. With the coming of spring there is also an added interest in the maple sugar season. Now that warmer weather has arrived the operators in this county will be tapping the maple within a very few days.

Altar Becomes Bier

BELGRADE, March 16—Guests who came to a house to be present at a man's wedding attended his funeral instead. Alexander Golubovitch's mother brought him some medicine so that he should be fit for the great day. She poured out a dose and the young man dutifully drained it. Then he gave a terrible shout and fell down. A few minutes later he was dead. Unwittingly the mother had given him a glass of sulphuric acid instead of the medicine she kept in a similar bottle.

ONE YEAR AGO

One year ago today the Crown was preparing a charge of murder against Gilbert Jordan, elderly Barker's Pt resident, who was subsequently convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment at Dorchester, N. B. Jordan shot his wife, Clara A. Jordan on the night of March 14 and then turned the gun on himself, the bullet going through his jaw. Jordan was guarded in his room at the Victoria Public Hospital while his injury was being treated, and information charging murder, was laid against him a few days after the murder. The trial drew hundreds of spectators to the scene of the York County Court House and on the final day of the trial when the accused went on the stand at his own request and told brokenly of the incident of the shooting, the court room was jammed with people.

FLAGS TO FLY

Flags on Dominion buildings will be flown tomorrow, St. Patrick's Day, and also on the city hall in memory of Ireland's patron saint. It is a Dominion law that on St. Patrick's, St. Andrew's, and St. George's day flags on all Federal buildings shall be flown. It is a civic rule, too, that the flag on the local city hall be flown on these days.

a time and then went back to Ireland where his work resulted in the conversion of twelve thousand people and the founding of three hundred and sixty churches. This feature was followed by a vocal solo by Miss Helen James, who delighted the audience with her singing of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," and "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms." The programme was concluded by the readings of several Irish anecdotes by Miss Claire MacMillan. About seventy-five young people were present and the enjoyable evening was concluded after a recreational period by "Auld Lang Syne."

British Labor Peer Says He Would Prohibit All Advertising

LONDON, England, March 16—A bill introduced in the House of Lords by Lord Arnold, Labor peer, would prohibit display advertising by distillers and liquor dealers in newspapers, posters and electric signs. It also would prohibit circulations of price-lists and catalogues except upon written request.

Federal Wage Law Passes in House

throwing obstacles in the path of social justice.

Lapointe's Stand

Early in the day Hon. Ernest Lapointe, former minister of justice, gave his opinion the minimum wage law, although he favored it and would support it, was beyond the competence of Parliament. He predicted it would be tossed out by the courts, because of the assumption of power through a convention of the International Labor Office.

The only legal and rational way of obtaining uniform social legislation in Canada was through amendment of the British North America Act or agreement with the provinces, Mr. Lapointe said.

Liberal Leader Mackenzie King repeated his suggestion of an appeal to the supreme court of Canada to determine the legal method of proceeding. The government was raising false hopes in the minds of the people which would be dashed to pieces in a court ruling.

The government, Mr. King said, was "building its home on the sands of constitutional certainty and power." There was not only a difference of opinion among members of the House on the constitutional issue, there was a cleavage in the cabinet.

Seven Canadian provinces have minimum wage laws, Mr. Guthrie said, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick having none.

Has No Doubts

Mr. Guthrie said he had no doubts of the competence of Parliament to pass the wage law. The power flowed from Canada's membership in the League of Nations and its signature to the Treaty of Versailles. Under the British North America Act, he said, the Dominion had power to enforce treaty obligations. With the principle of a minimum wage in industry, Liberals were in full accord, said Mr. Lapointe. He said he was pleased so many of the provinces had minimum wage laws and believed they were the authorities to deal with the matter. The Dominion should leave it to them.

"It is a blow to the prestige of the League and its supporters in this country," said Mr. Lapointe. Canada accepted the covenant of the League and the draft conventions which followed with the understanding Canada's obligations were fully set up. There was no expectation of using them to transfer power from the provincial legislatures to the federal Parliament.

"No member in this House at the time agreed to enter the League of Nations with the idea it would have the effect of changing the constitution of Canada," said Mr. Lapointe. If the government and Parliament of that day and since were wrong then Canada had entered the League under a mistaken impression of its obligations.

Mr. Stevens said he was not concerned with narrow legal quibbles. If ever there was a time when these things should be considered from a human angle it was the present.

The question should not become a legal football, continued Mr. Stevens. He suggested Mr. Cahan, Mr. King, Mr. Lapointe and others would be better advised searching the B.N.A. Act to find how Parliament could grapple with the social problems of the day.

One of the causes of present conditions, Mr. Stevens said, was that Parliament had not fulfilled its duties under the B.N.A. Act. The Dominion sat back while the courts made rulings, instead of occupying a field which had been assigned to it by the B. N. A. Act.

St. Patrick To Be Honored Sunday

rock has grown beside St. Patrick as the symbol of this saint's great wisdom.

It was the habit in past years for the Speaker of the N. B. Legislature to place a bunch of these shamrocks on the desk of each member on St. Patrick's day. Owing to the feast day falling on Sunday this year this practice has been necessarily cancelled, since the House already has adjourned until Tuesday.

Bebbington's Gardens have also distributed shamrocks free to the Legislature and hotels on that day. This year while they are not distributing flowers to the legislature they have a beautiful line of shamrocks at their green house and are receiving orders from different parts of the city.

In connection with the observance of St. Patrick's Day the Antonian Dramatic Club of Devon will produce the three-act comedy, "When Irish Eyes are Smiling," in the St. Anthony's auditorium on Monday evening. Besides the main attraction on the bill there will be novelty specialty numbers and Irish melodies will be furnished by the Nealis Orchestra.

A Real Beauty Cannot Be Dumb Say Educationists

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 16—Girls simply cannot be beautiful and dumb, two university leaders agreed here.

Said H. Jean Crawford, director of women at the University of Pennsylvania:

"The two things are incompatible. True beauty is born of intelligence and character. Only intelligent people can be truly beautiful."

"Said Edna Clark, acting dean of women at Temple University:

"I don't know where the 'beautiful but dumb' theory originated but an examination of scholastic records at almost any co-education institution disproves it."

NEWSPAPERMAN HONORED

Haary "Dutch" Ervine, Saint John newspaperman, who is retiring from active service, was given signal honor by his confreres in that city last night, when they gathered and paid tribute to him on his forty years of service in his profession. Ervin was retired on pension. He was one of Saint John's best known newspapermen and was exceedingly popular. Special mention was made of the friends he made for his loyalty to a confidence. "Dutch" Ervin has many friends in Fredericton, who will wish him a well earned rest from his newspaper activities.

HAVANA, March 16—Heavy shooting and bombings broke out in Havana today despite the army's rigid rule under a state of war.
