

DESCRIBE GERMAN ALIEN AS WALL STREET "BULL"

Sharp Rise in Hauptmann Finances Seen After Lindbergh Baby Kidnapping

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 28—Familiar names of well known stocks, such as Ford of Canada, Canadian Pacific, International Nickel, Fox Films, Alaska Gold and at least a dozen others went zipping across the court room here today as Attorney-General Wilentz entered the arena to attempt to prove that Richard Bruno Hauptmann, not only masqueraded in this country as a lone wolf but also as a Wall street "bull."

Brisk Trading

Trading in his wife's name his brokerage account which, up to April 132, had been run on a shoe string immediately after that date blossomed out into brisk activity until at one time his balances showed he had purchased on margin stocks to the value of $256,422.15.

This workman who, in 1931, had written his brokers and begged them to give him a month's grace on a $79 margin call, by 1933 was buying as high as 1000-share lots per day and had purchases often averaging $50,000 in a single month.

On other days when the markets slumped, he deposited $4500 in cash to bolster his account which cash, examination now shows, did not come from any bank account standing in his name. Nor did it come from any other of these three brokerage accounts.

The same week he put up this extra $4500 he also deposited $2012.50 in his savings account in the Central Savings Bank, New York.

Thrifty Souls

These two Hauptmanns, thrifty souls as they unquestionably are, in their first seven years of married life had been able, to save up in all only $269 in cash. In addition to this, they had, prior to 1932, 50 shares of Warner Bros at that time worth about $100.

That represented their total liquid assets up to the foggy night when the reluctant Dr. Condon tossed $50,000 in bills over a graveyard fence to a man with a cough—a man whose hands were the hands of "John" but whose voice was the voice of Richard Bruno Hauptmann.

Between that night and the morning of September 19, 1934, when Hauptmann was arrested, he and Anna Schoeffler, his wife, had made cash deposits to carry on their extensive market operations to the tune of $16,942. Besides that, they had deposited in their savings accounts something over $9,000.

Some Arithmetic

"We have had a good deal of reading and writing in this trial" said Attorney-General Wilentz. "Now let's have a little arithmetic. This is the way it goes.

Debit—Ransom money $50,000.

Credit to Lindbergh—By $120 in gold coin, found in house; by $20 a gold note found in Hauptmann pocket; by $3750 a mortgage in name of Anna Schoeffler; by $16,942 brokerage account; by $9000, savings accounts; by $14,600 found in the garage. Total $44,432.

"This leaves a few thousands unaccounted for, but we must remember Hauptmann claims he lent Isidore Fisch $7,000 which, Fisch lost in the fur business."

Comes to Rescue

Mr. Reilly now came belligerently to the rescue, and for three long wearisome hours battled to show Hauptmann made a great many profits on many of his deals, using these profits in turn as margin for further buying transactions. He cited a perfect maze of figures, which left both spectators and jurors in as thick a fog as that which prevailed all day today outside the court room, and which bored all and sundry almost into a state of jitters. It was not unusual, he declared emphatically in summing up for a man to start with a few dollars and by careful manipulation keep on with his trading operations for years.

As deftly as if wiping a wet rag over a figure-crowded slate, Wilentz with one movement erased all Reilly's carefully built up compilations of Hauptmann's gains.

"Never mind the profits," he snapped to William F. Frank of the internal revenue bureau of the treasury department, who was testifying as to Hauptmann's operations. "Over that period of trading you have described, did Hauptmann, on the whole, win or lose?"

"He lost," replied the witness. "He lost, all told during his two years' operations at least $5000."

"And he put up margin, from time to time, as required, without disturbing his bank or other brokerage accounts?"

"He did, $2225 one day, $2025 a few days later."

Always on Hand

"He was always on hand, with cash to take care of any margin calls, continued Mr. Wilentz. No letters now, begging for time to pay up in; always Johnnie on the spot, with a good fat roll; a man who had not worked in months, an unemployed carpenter whose wife was a waitress, playing the market like another Jesse Livermore. He had all kinds of money now, this alien fugitive from justice. In the first seven years of his married life he had deposited, we find, $1.47 in silver. In the last two, before the police forced his car over to a New York curbstone and took him in custody he had deposited $453.25 in silver coins. He had even started a nice little collection of gold coins before the government got round to putting a stop on that kind of hoarding."

Mr. Reilly, in his turn, declared there was not one iota of evidence yet produced to show that any of the cash put up with banks or brokers was Lindbergh ransom notes.

Not one of the bills deposited by Hauptmann was ever returned by any bank because it had one of the Lindbergh serial numbers on it. There is nothing, he declared, to connect this money, not one cent of it, with the ransom Dr. Condon says he paid to somebody he says was called "John."

Gives Evidence

A Time Keeper, Edward F. Morton, who was in charge of the pay-roll of a construction company which built the Majestic hotel at 77th street, New York last year, testified Hauptmann had worked on that job late in March 1932. He had been employed there first on March 21, 1932 three weeks after the kidnapping. He had worked until Monday, April 4, when he had quit without any notice.

What Others Say

"..... or Something"

Toronto Globe:—These be parlor days for Leaders at Ottawa. Mr. Bennett is about to be drummed out of his party for saying too much, and Mr. King drummed out of his party for saying too little. Perhaps they could arranged to swap parties, or something.

No Side Issue

Halifax Herald:—If questions of constitutional law are to be permitted to obscure the real issue of reform of the social and economic system of this country, then the people of this country will hold strictly to account any and all who refuse co-operation on this ground.

A Pertinent Question

Toronto Mail and Empire:—Over one and a quarter million pounds of canned meat from the Argentine, and close to half a million pounds of barrelled pork from the United States, featured the meat imports of Canada in November. What is the matter with our own?

Time to Answer

Toronto Telegram:—The country is waiting to hear from Mr. King's own lips what he is going to say about the reform proposals. It is a ticklish question; hasty speech destroyed him once before and he may fear destroying himself again. Hence his silence. But there is no longer safety in silence; the question has been put and an answer must be given. He will have to speak. Hence the expectation.

Making Good

Vancouver Province: The announcement in the speech of the various pieces of reform legislation to be introduced is a pretty complete answer to those critics of the Government who have been charging that the Bennett reforms are election reforms only and will get no further. They are at least to be presented to Parliament. What happens to them then depends on Parliament and the country.

Going Very Far

Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph:—Certainly, to go deeper and deeper into debt is not the way in which to bring about an economic recovery. And if it were, it remains to be seen whether seven or eight billions will suffice in the United States). But the contrast between war costs and recovery costs constitutes an appeal to sentiment that is none the less mischievous because it will take in those who are easily moved.

Not Canada's Fault

Winnipeg Tribune:—The people today are little concerned about the tariff. Everyone practically speaking recognizes that it is far too high for Canada's own good, but knows at the same time that it is there not because anyone wants it at that level but because prohibitive tariffs are essential to self-defence in a world gone tariff-mad. Canada neither inaugurated the tariff war nor forced the pace in it, and has in fact taken advantage of every possibility of lowering tariffs by mutual agreement.

Hurry

Victoria Times:—There should be a short session and early election. Certainly whoever shall represent this Dominion at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the King's coronation should be one who truly represents the Canadian people, not one whose closet is chuck full of the skeletons of adverse provincial elections and Federal by-elections. It is even more important that there shall be an early decision so that a real programme of economic recovery may be put under way as soon as possible Canada's home front has been neglected long enough.

Look at the Record

London Free Press:—The Liberal party was in power for nine years from 1921 to 1930 and had a real opportunity to put into effect a policy of lower tariffs and wider markets. In the year the Liberal party took office the average ad valorem rate of duty on dutiable goods was 20.6 per cent and on all goods of 14.1 per cent. In the first year of the Liberal administration the rate on dutiable goods had risen to 24.5 per cent and on all goods to 16.2 per cent. In the year the Liberals went out of power the rate on dutiable goods were 24.3 per cent and on all imports 15.9 per cent. So much for lower tariffs.

Too Late

Edmonton Bulletin:—From Seattle comes the interesting news that 60,000 tons of Argentine corn are being landed at that port for use as stock and poultry feed in the western States, left short of feed by last summer's drought. Three cargoes have already arrived and two more are on the way. Energetic action by our Governments and a special concession in freight rates should have made that market available to Alberta farmers in a degree large enough to be important. But energetic action was not discoverable on the part of our Governments last fall, when the feed shortage in the States became apparent.

Canada Can Lead

Ottawa Citizen:—There is no need for Canada to wait until the United Kingdom or the United States has taken the first legislative step toward bringing in the economic readjustment to abolish poverty. Neither President Roosevelt nor Premier Ramsay MacDonald would appear to be as free from belief in the gold fetish as Premier Bennett, but there is no more evidence of national policy in Canada being released from the Midas touch of money power. When the Government of Canada is rid of the gold mentality this country need waste no more time over Fabian palliatives like unemployment insurance. It can go ahead into the new age of plenty with conditions of poverty and compulsory idleness banished for ever from the land.

FREDERICTON CURLERS WIN

VICKS VAPORUB

Often, "mere colds" have serious consequences. It is dangerous to neglect a cold—equally dangerous to experiment with half-way measures.

Peel safe! Use Vicks VapoRub—the proved external method of treating colds. No risks of constant internal "dosing", which so often upsets delicate digestions and lowers resistance when most needed.

DOUBLE DIRECT ACTION

Just rubbed on at bedtime, VapoRub fights a cold direct—two ways at once—by stimulation and inhalation. This combined poultice-vapor action loosens phlegm—soothes irritated membranes—eases difficult breathing—helps break congestion. Often by morning the worst of the cold is over.
