TRAVELLER FINDS GUIDES ARE HONEST IN ALBANIA

TIRANA, Albania, Oct. 18—Books might be made in writing inventories of the strange sounds, smells, sights to be had in Tirana's crooked streets. These books would be filled with colorful, descriptive adjectives. More adjectives would be used than verbs, for verbs portray motion and there is little motion under this sweltering sun. There is much casualness and many pauses.

Chief traffic noise is undoubtedly the braying of one donkey heavily laden with wood calling to its mate a block away bearing two side baskets filled with watermelons, with a Turk astraddle the baskets fast asleep. The second donkey is too exhausted to exchange greetings with any donkey, howsoever comely.

Corn Favorite Food

Chief among many stench rises the sweet odor of roasting corn; not popcorn, just plain puffed corn. The native has a portable charcoal stove and on the burning charcoal he places several ears. Adults as well as children eat them piping hot without salt or butter.

Many of the restaurants are just four square walls, with wooden tables and benches on the damp earthen floor, and with a cook stove of sorts standing in the open front window. Greasy rice dishes with mutton or nuts seem to predominate. They don't look appetizing but they are known as Mohammedan delicacies. They are also to be had in some Chinese cities of the interior where Chinese Mohammedans reside in large numbers.

Most native women wear black veils through which the sun shines and shows off their features. There seems to be ample reason for the veil. Young girls go about bareheaded and bare faced and not until they marry do they literally "take the veil".

English Sign, Says "Dentist"

One of the few signs in English is painted in large black letters two feet high across the front of a two-story baked mud building. It says "Dentist" and has not a cheerful aspect. Occupying the ground floor, wide open to the street, is a carpenter's shop. Perhaps they exchange drills.

Every visitor or intendant visitor to Albania will be told prior to arrival the one outstanding fact about this country. Albania hasn't a single mile of railroad. One was once thought about it but it got no farther than that. Albania jumped the railroad age and fled from donkey haulage to airplanes. But still there is a lot of fill-in work to be done between the two eras.

A heavily mountained country, it has a number of fairly good auto roads and most of the cars operating on them are American made. The professional guide who makes a point of meeting you at the pier at Durazzo, the spot where Caesar and Pompey once fought a mighty battle, is eager that you don't get stung.

He has a way about him and inspires confidence. He says he cannot be deceitful because he is a member of a "club". Upon request he explains that the club is an automobile club and he wears its badge on the lapel of his shoddy black coat.

Polite To Americans

He takes you through the customs, which is a very polite procedure. The customs official is about to open your bag but the guide says to him: "This is an American". The customs man thereupon bows and asks you with great deference please to open your bag. You do so, but he does not look into it. Then he asks you please to close it, which you do and that is all there is to it, you being an American.

The guide then tells you it will be very expensive to hire a car alone to take you the necessary twenty-five miles across country to Tirana. It will cost, he says, all of five American dollars. To save you this expense he corrals together five other persons, two of them Germans, one a Yugoslav one an Austrian and one a Frenchman. Cost per head is now exactly $1.62 and this for a twenty-five mile taxi ride. The Albanians are an honest people if this guide is representative of them.

At the hotel you bargain for your room. There is no standard price. The hotel is Italian but it has some of the Albanian honesty about it. In Genoa for example, they will charge you New York hotel rates of the prosperity era and for a double room without bath ask $10 a day without blushing. Here they ask New York hotel rates of the depression era but what you get for it resembles nothing New York ever saw, though it is clean and the Italian imported maids are quite pleasant.

MANY STILL LOYAL TO HAILE SELASSIE

ADUWA, Ethiopia, October 17 — (Delayed since 9:45 A. M., Monday)—Many Ethiopians who surrendered to Italy in this region are still loyal to Emperor Haile Selassie, an independent survey disclosed today. They feel the Italian occupation is an example of the "law of force".

JAPAN TO REPEAT EQUALITY DEMAND

TOKIO, Oct. 18—The Cabinet today approved a Foreign Office draft of a note replying to British proposals for a naval limitation conference, and Admiral Keisuke Okada, Premier, went to the Imperial Palace to get the Emperor's approval of it.

It was understood that the note would repeat Japan's demand for naval equality with Great Britain and the United States. Cabinet Ministers were understood to maintain their hope that discussions of limitation on an equality basis would be agreed to, without prejudice to possible business negotiations.

DEPLORE PERJURY AMONG WITNESSES

HALIFAX, Oct. 18—Perjury by witnesses testifying before the Grand Jury of the Supreme Court here is deplored in a report submitted by the jury to Mr. Justice R. H. Graham.

Declaring perjury was "obvious" in some instances, the jurymen assert they view this circumstance with "serious concern." "Such disregard for the truth under oath," the state, "is deplorable and subversive to justice." Their recommendation is that the Crown investigate all cases where perjury is indicated "with a view to appropriate action being taken."

In another report, the Grand Jury urges segregation of the different classes of prisoners in the Halifax county jail to eliminate the mingling of youthful offenders with hardened criminals.
