THE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world. The hand that rocks the cradle is balancing its budget in the case of the Women's Institute in this city. Besides spending over three hundred dollars on relief during the past year the Women's Institute paid all its expenses and have a splendid balance on hand. This is most creditable to our local Women's Institute, and it shows that the organization is composed of ladies with brains, initiative, and good executive ability. Congratulations, ladies!

GOVERNMENT SHOULD ACT

Relief camp workers congregated at Vancouver have voted 623 to 270 to continue their strike in protest against existing camp conditions and they were unanimous at a recent mass meeting in their approval of proposals for a massed march on Ottawa of all relief workers in Canada. The plan is that the men start east employing any available mode of transportation. Word would be sent ahead to all relief camps for the inmates to meet the main body and join in the march on the Dominion capital to present their demands there.

There is no harm in these men talking and planning but should they begin to travel east across the country and add to the trials of a struggling people then their activities should meet with an unquestionably effective rebuff from our authorities.

Obviously the unemployed men of the country, or the employed either, cannot now, and never will, have everything that is wanted. The Dominion government in a trying time is providing the necessities of life for men who for one reason or other are not providing for themselves. Filling these wants is costing the tax payers of Canada a pretty penny each day. If there are those among the thousands thus being provided for who are not satisfied with conditions they should get out and leave alone those men who have some sense of facts and also of appreciation.

The time has come to stop pussy-footing. The industrial leaders are doing their best to bring the country into good times. The government's best co-operation will be in keeping down expenses and one way to do that is to properly handle those who purposely constitute themselves into a public hindrance.

SENSIBLE ENGLISH WOMEN

The English are a sensible people. Last week, in the Worcestershire village of Sedgley, the vicar proclaimed that women and girls who painted their lips and wore no stockings would not be admitted to services in his church. And instead of raising a row and insisting on their rights to do as they pleased, the feminine contingent came to church last Sunday with stockings on, and without lipstick.

Church lawyers pointed out that the vicar had exceeded his authority, and that if he barred anyone from his congregation for violating his edict he was liable to a technical charge of assault. But his female parishioners did not press the point. They placed their religion and their good sense above their legal rights. And thereby they set an example to more contentious regions that would have rejoiced at an opportunity to assert their privileges even though it split the community.

PEACE OR WAR

Clerical and lay members of all Christian denominations are divided in their opinions regarding war, and some ministers, priests and laymen, who are loyal to the core, oppose war while others equally loyal and Christian are in favour of it under certain conditions. It is a fact however, which is worthy of notice that amongst the clergymen and laymen, who are most opposed to war are those who have served overseas in the Great War.

One of the best addresses on Peace which has been delivered was given in this city last winter by the late C. R. Hawkins, who was not only president of the Canadian Legion, but was a man who had won his commission for valor on the field in the Great War.

SNAPSHOTS

A resident of the no-sewerage district tells us that if the Board of Health agent lived there he would long ago have seen that all homes back of the Valley Railway track were connected with the city sewerage system.

What with customers sneezing in the biscuits, cats lying in them, and flies having the first taste, the prospect of getting food you relish is not very bright in some stores. Not the cat's whiskers, eh?

The aged lad with the aged horse and the aged watering cart ought to water the entire width of the road, not just the middle. He should have the assistance of the motor-driven sprinkler. Dust from the sides of the road is not good for old nor young; nor does it please housewives.

There is considerable justifiable kicking about the unsightly, unpainted telephone poles on Queen Street, but the Phone Company informs us that they are to be painted at once.

The chain-letter fad simply reminds us that most of us prefer luck to arithmetic.

Mr. Gene Tunney was 37 last week and looking very hale and fit, though the count gets longer with each year.

A householder dropped dead while weeding dandelions from a lawn. That is our alibi for this year and it seems unassailable.

Food prepared of a wood pulp is available in Berlin. We had an aunt who used to boast that you could eat off her floors.

A man seldom finds out that his wife hasn't the sense to appreciate him until some other woman makes the discovery and points it out to him.

Kansas church congregations which a few weeks ago prayed for rain are now praying for the rain to stop. Let that be a lesson to them. The next time they pray for rain they should say how much.

Baldwin Takes Over the Premiership

A National cabinet such as he has presided over is still necessary if the national progress is to be maintained he added.

Two crowded hours saw the government of Ramsay MacDonald pass from the scene and Mr. Baldwin's third administration formally installed in its stead. A few minutes before the House of Commons rose last night for the Whitsuntide recess, Mr. MacDonald left for Buckingham Palace, where he handed his resignation to the King.

His Majesty accepted the long-expected resignation and sent for Mr. Baldwin on the retiring prime minister's advice, inviting him to form a cabinet. Mr. Baldwin accepted and returned to No. 10 Downing Street where the ministers were gathered. All placed their resignations at Mr. Baldwin's disposal and five minutes later he returned to Buckingham Palace, where, at a meeting of the privy council in the King's apartments, the retiring ministers handed over their seals of office, and the members of the new ministry accepted their charge. They were formally sworn in.

Offering strong contrast to the political crisis across the channel. Great Britain was actually without a prime minister for less than five minutes.

Mr. MacDonald, the weight of the premiership off his shoulders and the day's historic event behind him, bade farewell to his cabinet associates and friends and left for Scotland at 7:30 p.m.

Just before the train pulled out, he said, "I hope that in a few months I will be able to do as much work as wise in that under its conditions the soldier doing his duty would be deprived of spiritual service. Rev. R. H. Barker, Prince William, N.B., felt that chaplains should serve under the church instead of the militia.

Agreement with Mr. Matheson was uttered by Rev. J. W. A. Nicholson, North Bedeque, P.E.I., "As long as men will fight they will be used to fight for the selfish purpose of other men," he said. "No good has come out of the last war. The majority of people in all lands are for peace. The only way to prevent war is for one to put his name down "never again."

Dr. Robert Grierson, Korea, suggested further consideration before the conference committed itself to any extreme position. Injustice would exist where there were men who would not fight, he submitted.

At the afternoon session, a resolution making for a revision of Nova Scotia's marriage laws so as to prevent "hasty and unfortunate marriages" was referred to a committee for co-operation with similar committees of other churches.

A report of the Women's Missionary Society branch was presented by Mrs. L. W. Parker, Pentz, N.S. She reported 501 W.M.S. auxiliaries in the Maritimes, with 10,673 members. Money raised in 1934 amounted to $75,000.

The session will conclude Sunday, when the speakers will include Rev. Dr. Peter Bryce, Toronto; Rev. Dr. James W. Falconer, Halifax; and Rev. A. Melville Aitken, Sydney.

Morning Session

The conference resumed its sessions today with undiminished interest and numbers, with the president, Rev. A. D. Archibald, in the chair. The morning's session opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. A. V. Morash, and Dr. A. Lloyd Smith gave his final address on "Prayer."

Dr. C. E. Crowell expressed the deep gratitude of the conference for the great service Dr. Smith had rendered in his devotional addresses. On motion, the appreciation was inscribed on the minutes of the conference.

Rev. J. M. Murchison, St. John, secretary of the Bible Society, presented a report of the work of that organization. During the reign of King George translations have been made in 222 new languages. The Scriptures are now published in 692 tongues.

Rev. H. T. S. Gosnell, St. John, moved a resolution of appreciation of the "magnificent work of the Bible Society at home and abroad."

Rev. Thomas Marshall, D.D., Montreal, was present at the conference this morning and was introduced by Rev. E. E. Styles, Hantsport. Dr. Marshall was ordained in 1874 and spent 51 full years in the ministry. For several years he served as temperance secretary for New Brunswick.

I have been doing up to now. I feel like my mind has two compartments—one feeling very sorry that I had to give it up and the second feeling very relieved."

Malcolm MacDonald accompanied his father to the station and there was the sound of bagpipes as the elder MacDonald entered the coach to the cheers of an assembled crowd, some shouting "Come back fit".

Ten minutes after he left Mr. Baldwin and his wife, Lucy, again hostess at No. 10 Downing Street, entrained for Hinxley Hall, where the new prime minister will make his declaration on government policy in an address today.

Crows were reported scarcer this year than last year however. Decision was made to purchase three bear cubs for the exhibition this fall.
