PROCLAMATION
SILVER JUBILEE KING GEORGE V.

Monday, May 6th, having been proclaimed a public holiday throughout Canada to be observed as a day of general thanksgiving and rejoicing on the occasion of the Jubilee, it is therefore requested that the citizens of Devon join heartily in the ceremonies on that day, and display flags and suitable decorations on their buildings and do everything to make this celebration a success.

RURAL ELECTRICITY

A correspondent from New Maryland writes us today regarding a rural electric light service for his section of the country. He points out that the line to connect up with Tracey and Fredericton Junction should run through Maryland where there are several residents—large settlements in fact—instead of running through the woods as he says, is planned. He points out that this service might later be extended on to the Harvey section if thought advisable.

This is a matter which the powers that might very well consider just now. Maryland forms a very fine section with a progressive population and deserves favourable consideration.

TRAGIC LOUIS OF BATTENBERG

There are many of us who remember attending an official ball at the Parliament Buildings about thirty years ago, given in honor of Prince Louis of Battenberg then Admiral of the Forces. His treatment during the war was a tragedy, although under the circumstances it could not be avoided.

An authority on British naval affairs, Sir Archibald Hurd, reviewing Admiral Mark Kerr's "Prince Louis of Battenberg," expressed a profound appreciation of the sailor prince who was forced to step down from high command when national feelings ran high in 1914, because of his foreign birth and name. He says that the book is only an act of justice to the memory of a faithful prince who never complained of the way in which he was driven from the Admiralty and from the naval service at the outbreak of war. "His dignified silence was characteristic."

Louis of Battenberg was born in Gratz, Austria, and married his cousin a daughter of Princess Alice, one of the children of Queen Victoria. A naturalized British subject, he had lived in England since his boyhood and, his admirers say, had become more British than the British in his devotion to the navy he had entered as a cadet.

According to Sir Archibald, it is no secret that, on his merits, he would have been made First Sea Lord but for the signs of the coming struggle. It is pointed out that the prince served at sea in all parts of the world, and that his "timely action" a few months before his enforced retirement had the navy ready for any eventualities before hostilities began. Moreover, knowing the people of Central Europe, he had already rendered invaluable service to Britain. In the opinion of Admiral Kerr, his enemies were a few jealous senior officers who ran a campaign against him in clubs and other places in which they could give their tongues full license.

With hosts of friends, his life had been happy until 1914, despite the defamatory stories circulated. After 1914, he remained in retirement until his death. His investments in Russia were seized by the Bolsheviks and his other holdings shrank to almost nothing. His biographer says that during his unceasing trials his character showed to a better advantage, if possible, than during prosperity.

There seems no doubt that Battenberg was one of the inevitable casualties of the war. But, after all, war always is cruel, prejudices run at flood tide, and there is this to be said that treason in the navy might easily have lost the war. A slight reparation was made to Battenberg, when, in 1921, Lord Lee of Fareham, then First Lord, advised the King to promote the Prince to honorary rank, the highest in the service, Admiral of the Fleet.

AS YET, IT'S EUROPE'S PROBLEM

Consider that week lost during which Germany does not hurl new defiance at the world.

By the Versailles treaty she was restrained from rebuilding her armed forces on land, sea or air beyond a fixed maximum.

Germany enlarged her army. Germany increased her air forces.

Germany now blandly admits embarking upon a submarine program.

No more pointed barb could Germany press into the flesh of the nations of Europe than the building of the particular craft which aroused so much bitterness during the world war.

Caught flat-footed by the brazen news, Great Britain, Italy, and France have no program to meet the announcement. Hurried talk is of trade retaliations.

Thinking farther, the fact can be plainly read that Germany, despite all her talk about coming naval conversations, intends that nothing shall come of these talks. Therefore she is realistically going right ahead doing as she pleases.

Every time Europe admonishes Herr Hitler, he listens with more or less politeness and ignores the suggestion. The showdown is rapidly approaching.

SNAPSHOTS

General F. W. Hill and J. D. Palmer and the other members of the B.-P. drive committee for the Boy Scouts worked hard and they deserve credit for what they did.

Do not forget that the Provincial Celebration is to be at Fredericton, the Capital, May 6, and that every one is invited to come and to help in the Provincial Celebration.

The House of Mystery still attracts attention—from the outside. The Daily Mail has had numerous requests from young ladies for information regarding the mystery. They better keep away. Keep off the grass.

The man in the black car might give them some pointers.

Something should be done with a real bright little coloured boy who has developed a craze for holding up newsboys and taking their money. He is not a bad kid, just real devilish. He is heading for trouble.

The radio authorities should straighten out the bad kinks in the service, especially on Sunday afternoons. It's up to the radio officials who are paid for this service.

The fresh Normal student who tried to pick up the good looking blonde, did not know that she was engaged, and that her boy friend had a bad punch when he cut loose. Hard time, Mr. Would-be Teacher.

OUR MAIL BAG

DESCRIBES THE BRIDE

Editor, Daily Mail,
Fredericton, N. B.

Dear Sir:

In Snapshots yesterday, I note that the writer of the article of the marriage at the St. Anne Parish Hall, did not tell about what the bride wore or her beauty. I was the writer.

The following I hope will cover my error.

The bride at the wedding in the St. Anne Parish hall last evening (Monday), was beautiful, not pretty, she was a picture of robust health, as pure as the driven snow, her hair was like the silver of Mother Macree and a carriage of toddling doll. Her beauty, Dear Sir, would be hard to explain with mere words, and beyond the likes of me.

Her exquisite beauty and dazzling manner so took my eye that I could scarcely remember what the bride wore. But in the words of Tennyson I can better explain:

"Did her honor as Prince's bride and clothed her for her bridal like the sun."

She was clothed in a short near white dress which came an inch above her knees, a long white piece of cheese cloth satin trailed behind and swept the floor in a cloud of dust. Her stockings were of the color of over-ripe tomatoes and her shoes matched her complexion, half white and half yellow. The groom was dressed in a cast-out suit of overalls with a straw hat to cover his head and a red handkerchief to cover the blush of shame on his countenance.

Yours,

RURAL ELECTRICITY

Editor, Daily Mail,
Fredericton, N. B.

Dear Sir:

I notice in The Daily Mail that the new proposed hydro electric line to Tracey and Fredericton Junction will run through several miles of woods out through the "Gornish." Why not run it through the New Maryland district, which is thickly settled and where the residents would be glad to tap in on it. This would serve the wants of several families through an important section instead of running through a woods where no person lives.

If the government wants to make a popular move just now let them put this line out through the Maryland country. It will reach its destination just the same and will serve more people. We could get up a petition and raise enough names if necessary. If those interested in Maryland would get busy and tell us how to go about it or go about it for us, it might pay them to do so. Mr. Atkinson no doubt did what he could to procure the electric light for Fredericton Junction, Oromocto and Tracey in his own county. They can thank him for this. We in York County will show our thanks if some York county representative will get busy and give us light. Let there be light.

Oh yes, there is another point. After the line ran out to Maryland it would be an easy matter to extend it on to Harvey Station and vicinity later.

Please publish this in your paper. They asked me to write it to The Daily Mail which always takes these matters up.

Yours truly,
MARYLAND RESIDENT.
