JOHN BULL KNOWS HOW

An address given in Montreal a few days ago by Hon. E. N. R. Trentham, Commissioner of Finance in Newfoundland's Commission Government, told of the progress being made in reorganizing the island's affairs. The subject is of more than ordinary interest. This being the first time a Dominion has reverted to the status of a Crown colony, it appears like a permanently retrograde step, but the changes brought about show that the welfare of a country is determined by the character of its administration rather than by its form. Newfoundland had become impoverished. Yet last year, in the face of difficult world circumstances, the Budget was balanced—something which many wealthy and otherwise fortunate countries were unable to accomplish.

This, of course, was evidence only of the thoroughness with which the Commission has taken up its task. Reducing public expenditures and balancing the Budget is, in reality, but a small part of the extensive re-building program. The Commission is endeavoring to place the colony on a sound footing so that self-government can be resumed with reasonable assurance that it will be successful. The British Government sent out experts to reorganize customs, excise, posts and telegraphs. It provided an Auditor-General, Experts in agriculture, forestry and geology were obtained from Canada and the United States. Perhaps nothing more significant was contained in the Commissioner's address than his reference to the value of a Civil Service. "A permanent Civil Service," he said, "carrying on without fear or favor, having security of office and promise of promotion, certain of being upheld when it did its duty, had been a great need. I hope and believe we have established such a body."

Road development has been undertaken. Game reserves have been established for the production of fur-bearing animals. Education and public health development have been planned. A complete scheme of land settlement has been worked out, both interior and coastal, that fishermen may not have to rely on one industry. Writing in United Empire, journal of the United Empire Society, Mr. J. L. Paton has explained the new land policy. Although there is plenty of good soil along the river valley and wherever forests have been felled, agriculture, he states, has been badly neglected. The Commission studied the subject, and began to establish land colonies for suitable families living on the dole. Success of the initial experiment with ten families as conclusively, that the blessed laws were constitutional.

Such instances occur daily in courts of law. Able opposing counsel interpret the statutes in support of their own contention. It is a wonderful law that hasn't a loophole in it somewhere. And it would be an amazing Constitution that covered every possible point that arose in subsequent legislation. Changing the Constitution is in Canada a cumbersome business, and there is a disposition to leave it alone. After all, it is a pretty workable document, even in this day. But what would Canadian public life be without alternating demands that the Constitution be amended and the Senate reformed?

PARNELL COMES UP AGAIN

A play depicting the fight of Charles Stewart Parnell for Irish home rule has just been produced at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre, New York. It is strange that no such play has been produced or even written, before, for Parnell is one of the obvious figures in history around whom a stage drama should be constructed.

We have neither seen nor read this play, but we know it deals, as it would have to, with the story of Parnell, Kitty O'Shea and her husband, the enterprising Captain O'Shea. The O'Shea divorce, in which Parnell was cited as co-respondent, ended the political career of the greatest champion of Irish freedom. Parnell married Mrs. O'Shea and spent his declining years in obscurity and bitterness, passionately addressing peasants in remote and wild corners of Ireland. He ended as a caricature of his former self. "Respectable folk," like Mr. Gladstone, were through with him forever.

His story would seem to make a potent comment upon the morality of the Victorian era, for Parnell (utterly falsely) had previously been accused of complicity in the Phoenix Park murders and not a breath of scandal seemed to have developed from this suggestion of political violence. But when the private life of three persons came into the limelight—then, goodbye to the fight for Ireland, to Parnell's career and to all that! It would seem to comment upon Victoria's age, but does it? Within our own generation, and in Canada, we have seen similar persecution of public men because of their private misbehavior.

The last conspicuous example was, of course, the virtual driving of John Brownlee, ex-premier of Alberta, from public life. There was no difference in the degrees of intolerance, of one-sided bigotry and of political venom exhibited in the Brownlee case as that which marked the tragedy of Parnell towards the end of last century.

How interdependent all parts of the world have become! Because of Premier Mussolini's response to League of Nations sanctions fishermen in the Canadian Maritimes will sell considerably less fish to Italy.

At Winnipeg wild ducks covered with ice from a sleet storm fell in the streets, sometimes narrowly missing pedestrians. Hunting is dangerous, at best, but it is much less so than it might be, owing to the fact that moose, hippopotami, and elephants do not fly.

Some of the Quebec political forecasters are due for a severe shock on election day. For the Government the wisecracks claim, "Anything from 78 to 84 of the 90 seats"; Gouin "rebel" Liberals, "Seventy out of 90, and not a seat less"; Conservatives, "Any clear-cut majority in the House". Surely it is in the breast of the ardent politician that "hope springs eternal".

It used to be considered bad manners for people to go out between the concert numbers at fashionable entertainments and disturb the whole row in the seats. This was before girls started smoking cigarettes men did not have the craving so bad.

Treaty Signed

Canadian prime minister had come to Washington.

At a press conference held immediately after the signing, Mr. Roosevelt told the correspondents that he would meet them with his experts in the oval room on the second floor of the White House, Sunday afternoon at two o'clock to explain all details of the treaty.

Present at the signing, in addition to those named, were Norman Armour, United States minister to Canada who traveled down from Ottawa with Mr. King and the following Canadians: Hector MacKinnon, Canadian tariff commissioner; L. D. Wilgress, chief of the foreign trade division of the department of trade and commerce; Norman Robertson, member of the secretariat of the department of trade and commerce, all of whom have been here for two weeks concluding the treaty; E. B. Pickering, private secretary to the prime minister, and Merchant Mahoney, commercial attaché at the Canadian Legation.

The Children's Contest

DO YOU KNOW FREDERICTON?

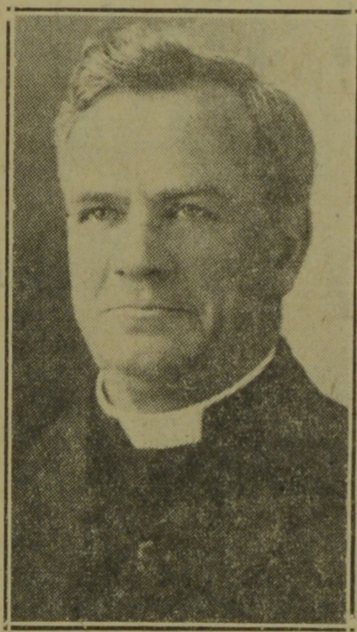

The Daily Mail in order to encourage a knowledge of our own city and its history, will give one dollar each week to the school child in the schools up to Grade VIII, who can answer correctly the most questions regarding our city.

- This is sixth series of questions:—
- (1) Where was Scully's Grove?
 - (2) How many bridges have been built between Fredericton and Devon?
 - (3) What was the name of Devon before it was changed to the present name? When was the change made?
 - (4) Name two river boats which were popular in the nineties?
 - (5) Who was instrumental in founding Victoria Hospital? What year was it founded?
 - (6) Tell us something about the history of the building which formerly stood on the site of the present York Street School.
 - (7) Where was the "Free Kirk" Church?
 - (8) Where was the Saint Ann's Boat Club House?
 - (9) What was "Province Hall" and when was it burned?
 - (10) Where was the Bradley House?

RELIGIOUS MEETINGS AT NASHWAAKSIS

The religious forces of Gibson Memorial United Church, South Devon, Nashwaaksis and Kingsley are uniting in a campaign of great religious meetings. The Rev. John E. Brown, a former member of the New York City Police Department, is the campaign speaker, and Mrs. Sadie McAlpine Brown, the soloist. They are, indeed, an excellent combination for gospel services. The first week of meetings was held at Kingsley appointment. Needless to say many who attended those meetings are now being continued at Nashwaaksis United Church. Capacity audiences are the order of the day although for three days there has been a heavy rainfall.

REV. W. A. BURGE

Rev. Mr. Brown has had a most wonderful experience, and this he is able to link up with the gospel story in a remarkable way. His arresting personality commanding the attention of all, from the beginning to the end of his story.

This coming week the Evangelists will be in Gibson Memorial United Church, South Devon each night at eight o'clock. No one will want to miss a single service. Come early and secure a seat.

The theme of Mr. Brown's talk Sunday morning will be "The Unbroken Promise" and in the evening "As Missionary and Policeman in Chinatown, New York City".

Maritime Transport Commission Council Answers Ontario

ince to sell to another, of which right I may add the Province of Ontario has taken full advantage in selling its tariff protected manufactured articles in the Maritime Provinces in large quantities.

"I might further add that if Mr. Sedgwick is right then it follows that the legislation of 1925 extending the province of the Crow's Nest Pass agreement must be ultra vires.

"So also the special rates given on grain to Vancouver must be ultra vires.

"Mr. Sedgwick will have some fight on his hands if he proposes to attack legislation which gives special railway rates to any section of Canada as apparently he intends to do. The report of the Duncan Commission was approved and in great part implemented by the Parliament of Canada. That report found that the increases in rates made, particularly since 1912, placed a burden upon the trade and commerce of the Maritime Provinces which it was clear from the pronouncements and obligations undertaken at Confederation it was never intended the Maritimes should bear, and a burden which the commission and later the Parliament of Canada, found was in fact responsible in very considerable measure for depressing abnormally in the Maritimes the business and enterprise which had been originated and developed on the basis of the rate structure as it then stood. That burden was in part removed by the Maritime freight rates act and the Maritimes will not and cannot permit that burden again to be imposed."

Sedgwick Speaks
Following the remarks of Mr. Burchell, Mr. Sedgwick stated he felt the remarks of the Transportation Commission counsel were more for the press than for the board.

Matheson Heard

Rand Matheson, traffic manager for the Transportation Commission of the Maritime Board of Trade, was the first witness to be called by Mr. Burchell, and during the course of his testimony explained in detail the various exhibits as presented by counsel for the commission to the board in support of the application for reduced rates. He stated he had made certain studies of the potato question and in various cases showed comparisons between the Maritime and other portions of Canada.

He was of the opinion that the (Continued on Page Five)

THE CAKE

She gathered around her the bowls, pan and spoon. The flour and shortening were found very soon. The flavoring extract was brought forth to rest. Close by, to be given a most severe test. And finally the cake was all ready to cook. The oven received it; a brief rest she took. She then gently removed it, a sample to try. The suspense has been trying as the minutes passed by. But success crowned her efforts, it was a success. IMPERIAL PURE EXTRACT had again stood the test.
