HON. MR. COCKBURN AND R. J. GILL CONTINUE DEBATE

Public Health
The Department of Health, under the able administration of his colleague, Hon. Dr. Taylor, had a splendid record of achievement. Smallpox had been stamped out, diphtheria and typhoid fever almost eliminated and great progress made in the prevention and cure of tuberculosis.

He felt the House would welcome the introduction of legislation to improve housing conditions throughout the province.

The extension of the Electric Commission's lines to Nelson, Chatham, and Newcastle was one of the achievements of the year which should prove of great economic importance to the Miramichi district and he hoped that it would be one of the things that would help bring back prosperity to the North Shore.

That work and the financial assistance rendered by the Government to the Counties of Northumberland and Gloucester should convince the people of that part of the province that the Government was alive to their needs, interested in their welfare and ready to do everything possible to better their conditions.

He was glad to know there had been improvement in the fishing industry during the year, the increase over 1933 being approximately 50 per cent in the landed value of the Catch for 1934. He understood also that the prospect for the coming sardine season was bright as the entire pack of the past season had been disposed of.

The bonus granted by the Government to the Hake and Pollock fishermen had proved a God-send, keeping many off the dole and enabling them to provide for their families. There was no more worthy, honest, conscientious citizen in the province than the hardy fisherman who had to battle and gamble with the sea for his livelihood.

His hon. friend, the Leader of the Opposition, with all his wonderful ideas of economy (acquired since he has been in opposition) wanted the Department of Health to employ more nurses, which, of course, would mean more expense. If returned to power, he states, he will create a new Department of Government, that for Federal Affairs, more expense. He also said he would grant Old Age Pensions and Mothers' Allowances, more expense. He (Cockburn) would ask the hon. gentleman how with all these added expenses he proposed to balance the budget when at the same time he would reduce the cost of automobile licenses and lower the stumpage charges. As a matter of fact the hon. gentleman really did not mean what he said, though he would like to have the public believe these promises in hopes that he might catch their votes.

In concluding, he said, that a review of the record of the Tilley Government to help the miners, the lumbermen, the farmers, the fishermen, and the Laboring man would convince any fair minded person that the Government had done its best on behalf of all classes, and he felt that supporters of the Tilley Government could go to the people standing four square on the record of those achievements. He felt also that Premier Tilley had won the respect and admiration of the people of the province generally, and that when he came before the jury of the people, their verdict would be—well done, good and faithful servant, you have acquitted yourself well, you have maintained the credit of our province, you have guided the Ship of State safely through the troubled matters, and we, the people, will not gamble with the destiny of our homes and our province by changing the pilot at this critical time, Vox populi "Tilley Carry on".

Mr. Gill
Mr. Gill, continuing the Debate, said that the present session was the last for the Legislature returned in 1930, which was a reminder that the years passed quickly. There would be an election during the ensuing year, and at the next meeting of the House the seventeenth Legislature would be succeeded by the eighteenth. The past few years had been years of depression and hundreds of thousands of people had experienced trials and tribulations. He had read of the "hungry forties" of the nineteenth century and he believed that future generations would so characterize the past five years of the twentieth century.

It was his belief that when his hon. friends opposite had assembled in caucus a few days ago that they gave thought to the fact that it was the last session of the present Legislature. No doubt they gave thought to the political events of the past year, and to the evident determination of the people of the Province to line up with those of other provinces when opportunity offered. He could in his mind's eye see the Hon. President of the Council calling for attention and urging the party to join in singing that beautiful western song, "The Last Round-Up". He wished to congratulate the Hon. President of the Council on his able defence of the Government, even though he had a difficult case to handle. He had criticized the campaign of the Liberal party, but had failed to refer to the promises made by his own party during the campaign of 1925. He had also failed to refer to promises made in the subsequent campaign, when we were told that depression was to end and Canada was to blast her way into the markets of the world. He (Gill) would tell his hon. friend that Canada only experienced hard times when a Tory Government was in office, and he had no hesitation in predicting that when the Liberals returned to power the present depression would quickly disappear. His hon. friends had forgotten that it was the Liberal Government that inaugurated the good roads policy and that the Health Department for which he had praise was established by a former Liberal government.

Continuing Mr. Gill in one of the most eloquent well prepared and scholarly speeches heard in the House this session discussed the European lumber markets. He also expressed his appreciation of the good work done by the chairman of the Electric power commission in having power introduced on the Miramichi.

Mr. Gill said that the Miramichi Country had now the power, the pulpwood and the shipping facilities. If they could get assistance in operating industries.

He noticed that under a Liberal government two new rayon mills were about to be erected in the Province of Ontario. Could not something in the way of manufacturing of rayon be done on the Miramichi? One thing was certain, there would be no peace or contentment in Northumberland county if present conditions were allowed to continue. Only the other day, it was stated at a meeting of the Chatham Board of Trade that the Government was ignorant of the economic conditions prevailing in that town and on the Miramichi. He was not in agreement with that statement, as he did not see how his hon. friends opposite could be ignorant of the Miramichi situation in any way, shape or form. Beyond a doubt they know all about it, but were either the Government of no ill-will, he believed that the failure to act in the interest of the Miramichi was due to inability and incapacity on their part.

It had been set forth that in view of the condition of the newsprint industry at the present time it would be unprofitable to establish further pulp mills, but that was not the reason advanced by the Hon. Premier at Newcastle two years ago. He then said that he had been informed that there was not sufficient wood available to warrant the building of a pulp mill on the Miramichi. That reason would no longer obtain. While he (Gill) had never been a pulp and paper mill enthusiast, yet when he saw what took place at Saint John in connection with the Port Royal mill and then witnessed the performance with regard to the pulpmill at Millbank, he came to the conclusion that something would have to be done for Northumberland. When instead of building the promised mills, he saw the only pulpmill they had go out of existence, he concluded that there was something wrong. He was not asking for a paper mill, but for a pulp mill in order that the money spent in the fabrication of the finished product may remain in the district where the raw material was produced.

Apart from the forest industries, he was sure that with the facilities possessed by the county of Northumberland, and under the fostering care of a new provincial government, he saw no reason why his county should not even surpass the county of Charlotte described by a previous speaker as the Eden of New Brunswick. He would remind the House that hon. members of the Opposition during the session of 1932 had advocated the setting up of an industrial council for New Brunswick.

While unemployment conditions had shown improvement, he had learned with regret that the dole had again been introduced in some parts of Northumberland.

Mr. Gill was the last speaker of the day when the house adjourned about five o'clock.

COOK RICE SO IT IS FLUFFY AND WHITE

(By Edith Shuck)

Although rice is considered one of the easiest starchy foods to prepare, there are some facts that a housewife should know about rice cookery so the finished product is snowy white, full flavored and in distinct grains. Rice may be cooked to look and taste at its best either by putting it on to cook in boiling water or scalding milk over the direct flame, or starting it to cook in cold water or milk in the top of a double boiler or in a heavy cooking utensil.

Cooking in Hot Liquid

First of all in the preparation of rice, remember that it is a dried food and let it soak in cold water for a few minutes. Then wash it thoroughly and rinse it again in cold water. For one cup of rice for the direct flame method of cooking heat three cups of water with two teaspoons of salt to the boiling point. When the water is boiling rapidly, add the rice and let it boil hard until it is swollen. Reduce the fire and continue cooking the rice over the direct flame until the grains are soft, or from 25 to 30 minutes. Rice should never be stirred if you want to have distinct grains, but should be lifted from the bottom of the pan after it is swollen before it has become soft enough to mash easily. Rice may be rinsed in warm water after it is cooked to free it of excess starch, and to separate the grains, but if it has been cooked correctly without stirring this is unnecessary.

Cooking in Cold Liquid

Milk adds a good flavor to rice, and this is a good way to increase the milk consumption of the family. Add a cup of rice and two teaspoons of salt to two and one-half to three cups of cold milk or water. Put this in the top of the double boiler over boiling water. By the time the milk reaches the scalding point the rice will be swollen. From that time on during the cooking it should be loosened from the pan several times. It takes five to ten minutes longer to cook rice in the double boiler than over the open flame, but there is much less necessity of watching or

FOX TO USE JAP GLOVE

Baseball may be America's pastime, but when Jimmy Foxx dons a mask and begins catching for Connie Mack's Athletics he will be wearing a mitt patterned after a Japanese model.

Foxx, accompanying the American baseball players on their trip to the Orient last fall, caught a few games for the Americans and also tried out a Japanese glove.

He liked the glove so well that he brought one home with him, and gave it to an American sporting goods manufacturer to copy.

Announcement that Foxx would return to his former role of catching was made by Mack early last fall.

ville) who confides to Miss Tillington that she needs a vacation in London anyway. The fadeout of course was with "Minty" and Peter and the way Minty laid her head on Peter's manly chest as the curtain ended the play, made one lonely playgoer, at least, quite envious.

The Old Fashioned Valentine specialty was splendidly executed and the idea was not a novel one. However by showing the four couples in a stately minuet dance for an exaggerated length of time, the impression of sedate beauty and excellence of presentation which was built up at first, was almost lost. stirring it. In using the double boiler the water in the lower part should not be high enough to surround the upper part. Rice cooked in milk should not be rinsed in water before it is served.

ICE CREAM CAKE

Half cup butter
1 1/2 cups sugar
2 cups flour
Half cup milk
Whites of 5 eggs
2 teaspoons baking powder
Half teaspoon vanilla extract.

Beat the butter to cream and gradually beat into it the sugar and then the vanilla. Add the milk and the egg whites beaten to a stiff froth. Finally stir in the flour and baking powder, mixed together. Pour the batter into shallow pans that have been well greased and bake in a moderate oven for 25 to 30 minutes. When cool, ice if desired, as follows:

ICING

2 cups granulated sugar
Half cup boiling water
2 egg whites, beaten to stiff froth.
Half teaspoon vanilla extract.

Put the sugar and boiling water in a saucepan and boil gently for 10 minutes. Beat the egg whites to a stiff froth. When the syrup is cooked, pour it gradually upon the beaten whites. There should be only a thin stream of syrup and the eggs should be beaten all the while the syrup is poured. Continue beating the whites for two minutes after all the syrup has been added; then add the vanilla extract. Spread a thick layer of the icing on one sheet of the cake. Place the other sheet on top of the first, and ice the top and sides. The cake will be ready for use in an hour. It may be kept for days.
