Miss Muriel Miller's Book Is Reviewed At Osgoode Hall

A recent issue of the Toronto Globe contains the following review of the new book entitled "Bliss Carman: a Portrait" recently written by Miss Muriel Miller, M.A. The writer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Miller of this city and is at present doing post-graduate work at Toronto University. The following is the criticism:

Bliss Carman: A Portrait, by Muriel Miller, M.A.; The Ryerson Press, Toronto, 1935.

Much has been written of our great Canadian, both as a man and as a poet; this little volume gives a distinct addition to our knowledge of him, and it will be welcomed by many of his admirers.

While his life is here traced in outline, the chief value of the book lies in the accurate and sympathetic account of the evolution of his poetic genius.

Born in 1861 at Fredericton, New Brunswick, of United Empire Loyalist stock, he received his preliminary education at the Collegiate School of his native city, devoting much attention to the Classics—he had as fellow-students and close friends his cousins (Sir) Charles G. D. Roberts and Andrew Stratton, while during most of his attendance at this school, the Head Master was (Sir) George R. Parkin, afterwards Head Master of our own Upper Canada College. Entering the University of New Brunswick in 1878, he graduated in 1881 with a Gold Medal, having distinguished himself in Mathematics as well as in Classics—he had in 1880 translated metrically some of the Classical masters. After a year at home, he in 1882 left for Oxford, which after a short time, he deserted for the University of Edinburgh, whence he spent a year and a half, paying much attention to versification. Returning he took his M.A., and in the following years, he tried Teaching, Law, and Civil Engineering. In 1886, he went to Harvard for post-graduate study intending to qualify for a Chair in English or the editorship of a journal. Here he came under the influence of Professor Josiah Royce, who introduced him to the intricacies of the philosophy of Spinoza, and reintroduced him to Emerson.

In that year, 1888, he composed his celebrated Low Tide on Long Pre, which was first published in the Atlantic Monthly for March, 1887. He joined his cousin, Roberts, on the staff of the New York Independent, where he laboured for two years, and then for a time did some editorial work for the Atlantic Monthly and other journals till his appointment in 1894 to the editorship of the Chap Book. During this period, he wrote much poetry some of which was afterwards reprinted.

After a walking tour in France and England in 1896, he wrote the Pierrot Cycle; and in 1898 made a trip to the Bahamas following a break-down in health (he did not completely recover until 1901). About this time, he and Roberts being together in New York, he made up his mind to collect and publish his poems; they appeared in two volumes.

He became editor of The Literary World and a little later, published three volumes of prose Essays, abridged from his editorials; he also collaborated in a volume with Mrs. Mary Perry King of "Personal Harmonizing" fame.

Honoured in his own land, "The Poet Laureate of Canada", in the United States and in England, he lived an active literary life until called away in 1929.

One is strongly tempted to follow the talented authoress, a graduate of Carman's own University, in her analysis and criticism of his many poems, but the exigencies of space forbid; and it must suffice to express cordial agreement with her final estimate:

"As the writer of the lovely and nostalgic word-pictures of the early years, as nature lyricist, sea poet, rollicking vagabond, symbolist, natural mystic, lover and classical rhapsodist, Carman will live in literature."
—William Renwick Riddell.

Local Bus Company Head In Statement

The council "will not entertain a resolution with regard to regulation under Motor Carrier Act while present system proves adequate."

The Town Council of Devon also reserved decision on similar grounds.

On August 30th my application to the Town Council of Fredericton for an exclusive franchise in this City was heard.

The fact of these applications having been made and the nature of the proposed service was given wide publicity in the press and it was made public that if the franchise were granted a number of new and modernly equipped buses would be immediately ordered and as soon as they could be constructed and delivered here they would be put in operation.

Immediately after this appeared in the press B. S. Wood, Manager of the branch of Universal Sales Limited in this city came to me and said that Mr. Rogers of Universal Sales Limited of Saint John had three second hand buses that they had no use for and asked if I would buy them for the service here.

I refused to entertain this proposal. I felt if Fredericton, Devon and Marysville were to have a bus service it ought to have as good equipment as could be obtained.

Fredericton took some time to consider the matter and on October 25th agreed to give me and my associates the exclusive franchise. This having been settled so far as Fredericton was concerned the application to Marysville and Devon was renewed at the regular monthly meetings of these Councils on November 12th. When we appeared before the Devon Council it was already known that on that day Highways Transport Limited had placed used buses in operation between Fredericton and Marysville without having obtained the consent of either of the towns or the city concerned. These buses I have no doubt were the three which Universal Sales Limited had wanted me to buy and which I had refused.

At the meeting with the Devon Town Council and with the Marysville Council it was explained what we would do. It was explained that we had been granted the exclusive franchise for Fredericton, that we had ordered new buses and that we would like their approval to extend the service to Devon and Marysville; that we were prepared to put into force an arrangement by which a person coming from Marysville or Devon to Fredericton would be carried to any place on the bus route in Fredericton without any extra charge and similarly for the return; and that we would pay the Towns two per cent of the gross earnings. The representatives of the Towns seemed favorable and no suggestion was made that the Towns would prefer a lump sum payment rather than the benefits offered. After our application had been made a request was made on behalf of Highway Transport Limited for the right to operate buses in Marysville and Devon.

I was somewhat surprised later to read in the press that the representatives of the Towns had entered into an agreement to endeavour to obtain for Highway Transport Limited an exclusive franchise for ten years to run through Marysville and Devon and part of Fredericton in consideration of a payment of $2,500.00 to each Town. If the representatives of the two Towns had intimated to me that they preferred payment of a lump sum now in preference to the right of their Town people to travel through the three Towns on a single fare and the percentage of the earnings over ten years I have no doubt that that could have been done but I was not given any information that they were prepared to do that. While it may seem useful to the Town Councils to have the $2,500.00 at once I must say that it does seem a little hard on the citizens that as a result of this decision all persons wishing to travel by bus from Marysville or Devon to any place in Fredericton during the next ten years would have to pay an extra five cent fare to do so and another five cents to return which could have been avoided by accepting my offer.

Each ceremony is carefully planned and intelligently administered. And each service is a fair-minded business arrangement. We believe that no tribute should be exacted from those who grieve.
