WILL IT WORK NEXT WINTER?

Will it heat upstairs and downstairs next winter?

Will it consume more coal than last year? Or will it break down during the first "cold snap" and endanger the health of the family?

From every point of view, now is the time to assure yourself that, as soon as cold weather appears, your heating plant will be in shape to take care of you.

Call us up and we'll examine thoroughly; and recommend the repairs that will make your heating plant dependable for next winter.

KEEPING THE BLOOD IN BALANCE*How a Well-Rounded Diet in Childhood Will Help to Ward Off Anemia

From the time of birth to the end of life, the blood performs one of the most important functions of the body. In order that it may work efficiently, it must constantly be supplied not only with the nutrients which it carries to all parts of the body, but with materials which allows it to rebuild itself daily. If iron is lacking, the red corpuscles will decrease in number and a condition which is known as anemia will result.

This sometimes happens in infancy due to a lack of iron in the mother's diet. Normally, the liver of the infant at birth holds in storage iron enough for the first five or six months of life. Modern practice, however, insures a plentiful supply of iron through the early addition of egg yolk to the milk diet which supplies most of the other requirements.

A well-rounded diet throughout childhood will decrease the probability of the anemia which used to be common among young girls. It is sometimes induced, however, by the reducing fad which often results in semi-starvation. Care should be taken that foods, such as meats, eggs, vegetables, fruits and whole grains remain in the diet, as well as milk, for this reason. When there symptoms of anemia, not only should the supply of these foods be increased, but as well, iron salts which have been found to be soluble so that they can be used by the blood, should be taken in concentrated form.

Pernicious anemia which has an unknown cause and which is a very serious condition is now treated by means of liver both in cooked form and in concentrated extract which is given by mouth or by injection.

Liver With Cream Sauce

Slice the liver one-third inch thick, Scald and strip off the skin on edges. Drain and saute quickly with two sliced onions in three tablespoons of butter. Pour in sweet or sour cream to cover, and let simmer five minutes, closely covered. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Baked Cabbage and Tomatoes

1½ cup well-seasoned tomato sauce.
3 cups chopped cooked cabbage.
¼ cup grated cheese.
½ cup bread crumbs.
Salt.
Pepper.

Put alternate layers of tomato sauce and cabbage in a greased baking dish. Sprinkle each layer with cheese and crumbs, salt and pepper. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) until slightly browned.

GAME REQUIRES THAT EVERYTHING BE ASKEW

"Will you kindly tell me how I can get a copy of a 'crazy' game of bridge that you have on file?" asks a reader who signs her name "Gladys." What else could that be but the hilarious Earthquake Bridge? True, we've printed these directions several times, but the popularity of the amusing game never seems to dim. If we knew "Gladys" what she really wanted, we'd send the information to her, but as it is, here's Earthquake Bridge again—and we're sure there are many of you who don't mind hearing about it one bit.

Earthquake Bridge

The "seismic tremors" start with the invitation and continues throughout the entire party. Here's the invitation:

First Seismic Tremor
Expected at About 6:37 P. M. on Wednesday
Relief Expedition Under the
J. Blakes, Geologists

The invitation is written with crayon in topsy-turvy lettering on a piece of drawing paper and sealed with large splashes of red sealing wax.

When the guests arrive they find card tables set for dinner. When they are told to locate their seats by means of their place cards, they feel that they are in a foreign country. Soon, however, they discover the "key"—all the names being written backward, and then deciphering becomes an easy matter.

Feeling that the first shock is over, the guests settle down to enjoy one of the hostess's famous dinners. Things appear a bit strange, however, when coffee, cheese, and crackers are served first. Not until the orange ice and cake are brought in next does it dawn on everybody that the dinner is being served backward—and then there's fun! Next comes salad—apples boiled in cinnamon syrup and stuffed with celery and salted pecans, served with buttered and toasted Swedish wafers. Then a plate service, pork and tenderloin or lamb chop with candied potato, browned cauliflower with a cheese dressing and a ring of pineapple browned in butter, with jelly in its center. Another shock comes with the serving of cream of tomato soup piled with whipped cream.

Indicated on the reverse side of the place card, which also serves as a tally, is the location of the first table of bridge. The reverberations of a second tremor are now to be heard as the hostess places an envelope and a package on each table.

AFTER SUSAN'S BEAU TOOK A WALK*Shattered Courtship and Stern Father Fails to Dampen Spirits

This is the story of a girl whose father had made her live his life, think his thoughts and do as he did. Her play instinct had been thwarted, her love-life suppressed and her personality submerged.

It pleases me to see Susan stage a comeback.

Today Susan is a maiden lady. Ten years ago she was an old maid. Once she was thin-faced and sorrowful. Now she's plump and really pretty.

A difficult thing to believe, but it's a fact that this woman, from the time she was born until her father's death, had been dominated and repressed by him.

When Susan finished college and went to work in an office with others, she, though ambitious, lacked self-confidence and developed an inferiority complex to a marked degree. As a child she never went to parties because her father did not approve of parties. She never chose her own church connections because she had to follow in his Christian footsteps. If sleeve styles were short she had to wear long sleeves; if they were long she wore them short.

A 10-Year Courtship

In all the years of her life she had but one beau, and it wasn't so much. This love affair, did not progress as fast or as effectively as her Pa desired. The beau called three times a week, Saturday night for baked bean supper, Sunday night for the cold left-overs of a chicken dinner, and Wednesday night when he escorted her up two flights to the top gallery of a theatre.

After 10 years of this courtship the father thought it about high time the young man came to a decision. So he said to him one Sunday night, after sending his daughter out of the room—she, by the way, at that time was 35—"Now, Percy, I don't want to interfere, of course, or rush matters, but it would seem to me that it wouldn't be a bad idea if you either put up or shut up. In other words, it is time that you married our Susan."

That was the last the household ever saw of him.

It was Susan's first and last emotional experience. She did not pine or fade away. She went back to complete admiration of a perfect Dad who could do no wrong, and there she stayed until in the fullness of time her father had gone to join the innumerable caravan.

But the loss of her father was Susan's gain. She missed her father immensely until it dawned upon her that there were things in life she had missed because of her father.

Now she's staged a comeback. Bully for her!

She is head of the women's club. She is the leading spirit at dancing parties. And at least three men seek her as a life partner.

Vocation Vital Question

The question of what line of vocation your boy is to follow, is more than interesting—it is vital. There are at least two great events in a boy's life. When he is born, and when he picks his job. Oh, yes, and a third one: When some girl selects him as a life companion.

Some boys and girls are looking for "anything," and "anything" is an easy position to find and a mighty hard one to hold.

Tell your boy about Steinmetz, the great electrical engineer. His body was small and very weak, but he became a great thinker, inventor and citizen.

A DEAF AND DUMB SCOUT HERO

An unusual Scout gallantry award was that of the Silver Cross to a deaf and dumb Rover Scout, George Biddle of the 154th Glasgow (Handicapped) Group. Fully clothed, and wearing heavy boots, Rover Biddle plunged into the River Clyde at Broomielaw and rescued a woman, a would-be suicide.

UNLUCKY OMEN?

JOHANNESBURG, Aug. 19.—Air superstition will be defied September 15 when Major A. M. Miller, famous South African pilot and pioneer of civil aviation, steps into the cockpit, a starter in the London-to-Johannesburg $50,000 air race.

During the war Major Miller was in the air corps in France and it was September 15 that he was shot down and crawled out of the wreckage unhurt.

"It seems an unlucky omen," he said, "but not so when you consider the details of the adventure. My machine was smashed by anti-aircraft guns. I fell 4,000 feet—those were the days before parachutes—and escaped without injury. Indeed, only my trousers were torn in barbed wire entanglements as I crawled out of range of the machine guns."

He is in England now and has been entered in the race by Len Oates, a leading South African business man.
