CLAIMS HEART DISEASE CURE

Doctor Reports on Use of New Drug

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 9.—Instantaneous relief for the pain of angina pectoris and cure for the disease itself is claimed by Dr. John C. Krantz, Jr. of the University of Maryland, according to a report which he read to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The cure for the nearly-always-fatal heart ailment, he said, is a drug called trichlorethylene, one cubic centimeter of which is snuffed into the nose when the pains and heart compression of angina pectoris begin. It gives relief within one second.

Used to date on 20 human patients, Dr. Krantz said, it has given permanent relief to 18 of them. He explained that these 18 were apparently cured, with no other treatment. The other two cases failed to benefit, he said.

Mysterious Effect

The treatment, Dr. Krantz said, is still somewhat mysterious in its mechanism, but it apparently acts to clear obstructions in the coronary blood vessels which feed the heart. In angina pectoris, he explained these coronary vessels "lost tone" and decreased the supply of oxygen being carried to the heart in blood pumped to it.

Dr. James C. Munch, of Philadelphia, announced in an interview at the meeting that he had also obtained highly favorable results in the treatment of angina pectoris and high blood pressure with a substance taken from the pancreas, a gland in the abdomen.

Suspected of being a hormone, it is extracted from the pancreas after the insulin, which is used in the treatment of diabetes, is removed, he explained.

To date 500 human cases of angina pectoris have been treated with the substance, Dr. Munch added, and the attacks have been stopped in 85 per cent of them. In about half of the cures the attacks never recurred, he added, and no harmful effects were felt by the patients who were not relieved.

Asthma Helped

Other medical developments were outstanding among the convention reports.

A new treatment for bronchial asthma was reported by Dr. Noel F. Shambaugh, of the University of California. By assuming an upside-down position and coughing several times a day, the patient can "sweep out" the internal dust brought about by inflammation, and thus relieve the condition materially, he said.

A cheap radio-active material which can be introduced into the body without harm was seen by Dr. Karl T. Compton, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, as the probable result of experiments now being conducted with common table salt. Salt treated with high charges of electricity can be made into artificial "radium" and would afterward turn into harmless magnesium in the body. Real radium is the world's most expensive substance, and its curative properties cannot be used directly in the body.

Abattoir Would Limit Sale of Meat Says Health Officer

tion regarding the abattoir. He said the abattoir would be a separate unit working in co-operation with the cold-storage plant. He said the county could support the cold storage plant alone, in which case the abattoir regulations would not apply to the county.

An abattoir and cold storage plant are necessary for a successful meat packing industry.

To succeed, an abattoir must be in the centre of production and not in the centre of consumption, he said. That is why Fredericton would be such a suitable location for the plant. He pointed out that this mistake was made in Saint John.

Mr. Neugard explained that according to word from the federal department of health, Ottawa, it would be required to kill 200 head to get free government inspection. He said that at present the city butchers were turning over from 300 to 600 head and that most of the local meat business of Saint John was handled in Fredericton.

He explained that if the county only wanted to support the cold storage plant the abattoir would not be public for the county, but that the county could give their grant with an option of having it apply to the abattoir in later years.

According to the scheme outlined by Mr. Neugard the abattoir board would be composed of city and county representatives amounting to 50 per cent of the directors, the company representatives comprising the other 50 per cent and the manager with the controlling vote.

LORD READING

The Marquess of Reading, dying at 75, has received comparatively slight obituary attention. Other figures had succeeded him in the public eye since he passed from the office of Foreign Secretary, since he ceased to be Viceroy of India, since the day, a generation ago, when he became solicitor-general, and wise men predicted a great career ahead of him.

But he was both a great lawyer and a great administrator, and his greatness was due to indefatigable study of facts and to an unflinching blandness of manner.

If ever steel hand was concealed in velvet glove, it was the hand of Rufus Isaacs. As a barrister, he could turn a witness inside out and make him feel as if he had been handed a Christmas present. As the King's representative in India he could send Mahatma Gandhi to prison as if he were giving him the Taj Mahal as a residence. In the House of Commons he was more suave than J. Ham Lewis, more polite than Henry Ashurst, and no more effective than either. The House of Commons, like the United States Senate, has a style of its own. Another great Jew, Disraeli, had to learn that lesson and adapt himself to it before he could become a power.

In recent years Lord Reading has been a sort of Elder Statesman, to
