HELP PEOPLE TO HEALTH AND CONTENTMENT

Programme of Mass Welfare is Sought by 2,000 Workers—Counter-Influence of Machine Age.

NEW YORK, April 28—The jagged horizon of present-day living, from adult jitters to juvenile delinquency, was swept by the observing eyes of 2,000 educators last week, and labelled a challenge to their work and efforts.

At the national convention of the American Physical Education Association, in St. Louis, the leading directors of health education, physical education and recreation for young and old charged themselves with a deep responsibility for helping the people of this country to overcome the nerve-straining influences of our high-pressure machine age.

With a microscope that few of us bother to use, they examined the irritating depressing, devitalizing elements of our rush-and-bustle and our economic turbulence, and resolved to help people at large to adjust themselves to those things. They also set the telescope on the future, training it closely on the vastly increased leisure time scientists say will come, and charged themselves to help us prepare to take that time well, without boredom.

Power is Far-Reaching

It was a heavy responsibility to take on voluntarily. In assuming it, the American Physical Education Association is likely to become a more essential influence upon our mass welfare than ever was seen as possible when the organization was formed fifty-one years ago.

The power these physical educators have is really far-reaching. As scientists they are examining the changes in our living conditions and the effects of these changes upon all of us, and are working out remedies and preventative for the bad effects. As teachers and supervisors of health work, physical development work and recreative activities of school children, college men and girls and adults in community groups, they are taking action. They are in direct contact with the people of the country, and so can put their theoretical conclusions into practice.

On the basis of their searching analysis they are setting out to teach young and old how to become and stay fit under the pressure of the modern tempo, and how to use leisure time in way that will give relief from strain, protect health, develop self-confidence, breed content, prevent need for stimulants, prevent search for adventure and outlet in crime, allay boredom and all in all make life for the common man more liveable.

Even though we do not all have the microscope and the telescope to detect the basic reasons why we are tired, why we are bored, why we keep stepping up the degree of stimulation we seek without finding it enough, it does not mean that these scientific workers toward this country's better good are employed missionaries looking for a mission. They know from facts what they are talking about, as we don't, and all we have to do is watch for the help they put in our paths, and take it.

Her Husband—My arm is lame from reaching in my pocket for money for you.

Mrs. Spendit—You poor dear! I'm sorry. Why don't you leave your money at home so I can help myself?
