Appeal in Bannister
Case Begun

that there was nothing in the evidence that is not consistent to the innocence of Arthur Bannister as there is to the guilt.

The crown's only strong witness as to who carried the rifle and entered the Lake home, stated the defence was Frances Bannister and was she not an accomplice? The evidence showed that there was as much room for the possibility that an attempt might have been made by the Bannisters to help Mrs. Lake get away from Phillip Lake as there was in the kidnapping theory.

Was Lake There?

The crown prosecutor did not bring out in the evidence that Phillip Lake was in the cabin contended the attorney. There was no motive for the crime in spite of the evidence of the purchased doll which the counsel contended was only taken from the store to the home for the thirteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. May Bannister as was brought out in the evidence.

The evidence of the expert on bullets who identified the bullet as from the rifle of Arthur Lake the counsel thought very slim, there being only about two-fifths of the small base to figure from and the entire nose was flattened. Certainly beyond remarkable the counsel stated to identify such a bullet and was evidence that should not be admitted; only the evidence of Frances Bannister was given as to who had the rifle and whose rifle it was?

Mr. Lambert argued that the trial judge was in error in not allowing an extension of time in regard to the effect of the condemning writs in certain daily newspapers before the trial, which were given out by R.C. M.P. as regard to signed confessions and new evidence. The Chief Justice said newspapers had no right to try a man's life and condemning headline evidence would not be allowed in England. Justice Grimmer on this point mentioned it was an outcome of U.S.A. Boston papers and suchlike.

The argument continued as to if the jury were all asked by the accused counsel as to if they were biased in any way and he stated that all were challenged and took their oath but still he stated the mind would find it hard to dissociate the newspaper writs and would unconsciously mold to an idea of guilt.

There must be evidence that is consistent with guilt and inconsistent with any doubt declared the aged attorney and the jury convicted entirely on circumstantial evidence and had to put in certain imaginary facts.

Motion was asked to extend time of appeal in case of John MacVey vs. Bert Merritt and Catherine Merritt, defendant, was asked.

In the case of Murray and Margaret Grant vs. C. P. R. time for extension of appeal was asked.

In the 1st case of King's Bench Peter J. Hughes, K. C., asked move to 2nd Friday in this term.

W.M.S. Wilmot United Church

The W. M. S. Wilmot United Church held its Easter meeting yesterday afternoon. Despite the unfavourable weather, a goodly number were present. Mrs. R. Crocker, the president, was in the chair and the programme began with an appropriate Easter service. The calling of the roll was followed by an impressive Easter message from the president. Miss Gorham rendered two very delightful violin solos being accompanied on the piano by Mr. Little. An Easter reading—"The boy who discovered the Spring" was given by Miss Irene Fitzpatrick in her usual accomplished manner. "God's Garden," a beautiful solo was sung by Mrs. Leon Thurott and was much enjoyed. Miss Greia Brewer was accompanist.

Rev. Mr. Bartlett in his address contended that Mary Magdalene, who had the great honor of being the first one to whom the risen Saviour appeared, was a much maligned woman. The gospel record says that the Saviour cast seven devils out of her. The ignorance of the times attributed her sickness to the presence of devils, but there is no evidence whatever to warrant the conclusion that she was ever anything except a virtuous woman. It is probable that her sickness was mental. The Quakers were the first to have the insight, and the Christian understanding to found an asylum for the insane on this continent, which they did in 1751.

A duet—"Come Holy Spirit heavenly Dove with all Thy quickening powers," was sung by Miss Phyllis Bat' and Miss Hazel Dow. The programme closed with the singing of the National Anthem. A considerable sum for missions was contributed. Delicious refreshments were served to which all were invited to remain and a very pleasant social half hour was spent.

LET'S GO HOME!

The following article is from a Fredericton author Theodore Goodridge Roberts, at Toronto, who still retains a love for old Eastern Canada.

(By Theodore Goodridge Roberts)

You have been sea-sick. It is a lost feeling. But it does not last forever and there is a kick in the recovery. The misery of it—that abject state of body and mind in which you did not care if the ship floated or foundered—is quickly forgotten. You may even say that it did you good. Of course it did you good!

And you have been home-sick. This is another story. The home-sick person can smile and keep up appearances—things which the sea-sick person cannot possibly do—but to what purpose? Sea-sickness is sure to end with the voyage which may be in a foreign land; but no recovery from nostalgia is to be found short of home. There are pills for mal-de-mer, and black coffee, brandy and champagne all help; but nothing you may put in your stomach can ease the misery of home-sickness in your heart. That is the mischief of it, the black secret of it—it is of the heart.

Warp of my heart the slanted field's plowed breast;

Web of my heart the golden-wing's quick flight,

The crows' harsh clamour in the black pine's crest,

The whip-poor-will's sad challenge from the night.

I know all about it, I have suffered it, grinning through it or sulking through it, in many parts of the world sick always for some place or scene or thing belonging to that dear land which went by the name of Acadie in earlier times. To be home-sick for a part of New Brunswick or Nova Scotia is to know the depth and height of nostalgia. If you happen to be in this case I advise you to go home. There is no other cure for it. Go home to Acadie now, in the spring of the year, in the accepted season for the exiles' return. The gray geese have already done it, strong-winged under the pale stars. Swallows and robins, plover and woodcock have gone home to Acadie. The ice is out of the black, brown and red rivers of home, hurled into the strong tides of Fundy and the blue Atlantic. Fiddleheads have shot up and uncured on a hundred river islands; thousands of acres of dyke are green; goose-tongue is pale green in salty marshes.

The last snow melts in the deepest forest hollows. Black salmon have Finance committee reported that the financial standing of the town is much better this year than at the same time last year. The overdraft at the end of March was less than $4,000 while last year at the same time the overdraft was $11,000. The news was received with satisfaction by the council board. Reports were made by Ald. Gorman on Roads; Ald. Gailey on street lights; Ald. Gregory on the Park; and Ald. Sloat on Poor Relief. For the year's work the assessors of the town were granted $75 instead of $60, the increase being felt to be justified.

Decision was made to have a police officer direct traffic at busy occasions at the intersection of the Marysville road and the street leading across the bridge.

Blanche Sherman was given the contract to clear refuse from the residents' yards, following choice of tenders.

All members of the council were present except Ald. Pettigrove who is ill. The usual monthly accounts were submitted and passed. A query from Moncton city as to the domicile of Albert Duguay was discussed and the clerk ordered to reply as to the responsibility of hospital costs in this connection.

run out of the Miramichi and silver fish are coming up from the sea into a hundred rivers. Mayflowers are pink as coral and sweet as honey in the damp moss of the forest floor. Ad-dert-tongues are golden among old raspberry canes in the corners of sloping pastures. Red furrows are turning at the heels of big gray horses in the upland valleys of Acadie. Plums and wild cherries will soon be blooming and blowing. At another touch of sun, drift of warm rain, caress of wind, veils and clouds of fragrance and beauty will gleam and glow by highway and river, up hill and down dale, from farm to farm and parish to parish, mile after mile, spreading through and over villages and towns, when the apple orchards break into flowery foam.

If you are home-sick for any stream, hill, valley or shore of Acadie you know the worst of home-sickness; and if you can go home, you are the luckiest exile alive. The Sweet Water Moon has waxed and waned and now is the time of the Apple Blossom Moon. Now night-hawks are swooping and twanging in lilac skies; and in the kitchens of orchard-girdled farm houses buck-wheat pancakes are frying. Let's go home!
