

Biggest Entry

an attractive display than ever before.

An exhibit that is attracting a great deal of attention this year is the orange tree at the rear centre of the building. There are perhaps 25 or 30 oranges growing on the tree and they prove the goal of every souvenir hunter at the fair. The man in charge states that none have been taken yet. They are not edible unless very ripe and then one should be very near the sugar bowl, was the remark of the caretaker.

All along one side of the room is a display of gladiolas. These flowers really dominate the exhibit and show what painstaking care has been made to make the room attractive. Directly opposite the gladiolas exhibit is the commercial group. This banks the entire right hand wall and at the far end is 60 square feet of flowers in a solid display of set pieces, bouquets, baskets and wreaths. One of the best of the table exhibits is situated near the commercial stand. Here are two tables each containing 45 different varieties of garden flowers. They are the type that floriculturists in this city are now taking pains to develop.

Tastefully Decorated

The whole room is tastefully decorated by a background and this trimming has been done by the Horticultural Society. A rock garden, a miniature of old Japan is in the centre and has attracted much attention.

Second to the gladioli displayed are the dahlias that this year are receiving a lot of attention. There is one table given over completely to the various varieties of this flower.

The pansy display is a novel one. One that particularly attracted attention was a green board with the blossoms on one side and the stems stuck through the board into small individual phials of water. Thus the display is kept fresh looking.

The Harvey Studio

The booth of the Harvey Studio at the Fredericton Exhibition is again a haven of rest for the foot-weary. The booth is one of the largest there and is 60 feet by 15 feet and contains easy chairs and chesterfields. Anyone is granted a chance to "come in and rest for a while." There are no catches to it either, nothing to buy or nothing to guess. While in the booth one is attracted by the fine display of water-colors, the work of Miss Madge Smith of the Harvey Studio staff. There are over 100 enlarged photographs, many tinted in natural colors and many different portraits. These are mostly local people and done by the local branch of this chain of studios.

M. Ryan and Son

A brick fence fronts the M. Ryan and Son booth at the Fredericton Exhibition and the scheme of using bricks throughout the display is continued in the fire place made of rustic brick. At the back of the booth is a row of brick drain tile that is of particular interest to the farmer and at the side of exhibit is a row of various kinds of building bricks; hearth tile and brick for the brick floor in the cellar are among them. The chimney brick is a kind that makes it unnecessary to use flue lining, thus cutting down the fire hazard and the cost of building. On the fireplace is a diploma awarded 50 years ago to the late Michael Ryan at the Colonial and Indian Exhibition in London.

E. M. Young and Company

One of the neatest and simplest displays and yet very effective, is the exhibit of heaters and ranges in the E. M. Young booth. At either side are attractive heaters of the most modern type. Along the rear are various types of ranges; a combination electric and fuel range, a compact fuel range that took first prize at the Toronto Exhibition and some other types that are ultra-modern in design, coloring and workmanship.

Chun in a two-hour conversation that Tokio holds the National Government of China responsible for the mob slaying of two Japanese at Chengtu.

"The Foreign Minister lengthily reviewed Nanking's investigation and incidental steps taken to punish the alleged guilty."

Before the two conferred Gen. Chang Chun, declared the National Government was ready to make "reasonable amends."

"The international relations of history afford us example of what state-manship, in such circumstances, would consider a reasonable settlement," he said.

Chang Chun continued: "Chinese public opinion has joined the National Government in appealing to Japan to remain calm and keep its sense of proportion. Provided calm opinion prevails in both countries, I believe these incidents will not have the effect of hindering or delaying prospects for a fundamental readjustment of Sino-Japanese affairs for the better."

Shigeru Kawagoe, the Japanese Ambassador, asserted his instruction to settle the Chengtu and Pakhoi incidents had not obscured his conviction that Japanese assistance and co-operation in the development of Chinese economic fields was the most important matter now before the two countries.

Woodstock Exhibition Will Break All the Previous Records

Preparations for Big Show are Almost Completed — Keen Interest in Softball Series

Practically all the space in the main building is booked and there are more exhibitors than ever for the big 5 Day Show. A very choice selection of vaudeville acts have been booked and the outdoor attraction will surpass any previous year.

The softball championship series, inaugurated last year and now an annual feature, is attracting much attention, as is the band contest, a new feature, for which numerous entries have already been received.

The Woodstock merchants are co-operating to make the town attractive in fair week.

It has been decided to have colored lights on the principal streets to lend an appropriately festive air during exhibition.

The softball contest is expected to attract many entries. The contest will be played in two divisions, parish entries in one and town entries in another, with the winners meeting to decide the grand county championship. Many teams have forwarded formal entries with the names of their players which must be filed with the Secretary of the exhibition.

Sensational racing is in prospect for those who love "the sport of kings." The largest midway show on record for a local fair has been booked. Nothing has been neglected to make this year's exhibition a memorable, interesting and enjoyable event.

Wednesday will be Band Contest Day, and a civic holiday. Thursday is Children's Day with the Junior Free-For-All and Friday the Big Free-For-All.

You can be sure of a good time if you attend the Woodstock Exhibition, September 22nd — 26th.
