SHRUBS ABOUT HOME GIVE INDIVIDUALITY TO MODEST GROUNDS

Carefully Planned Planting Adds Grace and Beauty—Trees Give Shade and Clever Camouflage

Nothing gives individuality to a home so much as the setting of trees, shrubs and flowers that surround it. Your house itself may not be vastly different from many other houses in your neighborhood, but you can give it a character all its own through the planting and care of the grounds it occupies. These grounds may be large or small, but the wealth of flowers, shrubs and trees from which the gardener may select enables him to give the home and its setting distinction and beauty. Money and time thus expended are amply returned in increased value of the property and in the restfulness and beauty such plantings give to the home.

Trees well placed lend dignity to any building and can be set to frame it or supply an attractive background in groups on the lawn or margins, they provide welcome shade or obscure undesirable objects.

Shrubby supplements and enhances the tree planting. Even though the home grounds may be plentifully supplied with trees, they will still look bare and lack finish and completeness. Shrubs supply that lack. One of the chief purposes of shrubs is to tie the house in with the grounds, or what is known as foundation planting. Variety is the keynote in attaining this effect. Variety in height prevents any resemblance to a hedge about the building and taller shrubs are needed more particularly at the corners and about the doorways.

Preferably the shrubs should be spaced irregularly and care taken to avoid blocking necessary cellar windows. For individual points of interest select plants that exhibit a variation in color and texture of leaves and a few profusely flowering shrubs or berry-bearing specimens will add additional interest.

How to Plant

In planting trees or shrubs dig a hole large enough so that the roots will not be cramped or bent in the least and deep enough so that the tree or shrub will be about half an inch below the depth at which it grew in the nursery. In digging, keep the top earth to one side and use it to fill in around the roots when setting the shrub.

Prune off any damaged or broken roots and cut back any extra long or tap roots. The tap root also requires pruning to balance the root system. Remove any broken branches or those that are weak or crossed and shorten back the branches of the head by one-third to one-half, depending upon the vigor of the root system. Pack the soil firmly around the roots and do not heap the soil around the stem, as this sheds moisture; rather leave a slight depression to retain the water. A useful aid in this respect is a mulch of old straw or rotted manure, or even lawn clippings, about the newly planted shrub.

Information as to the variety of shrub to select for different purposes can be obtained from most nurseries.

Casual pruning of growing shrubs frequently does more harm than good, but an annual pruning is useful in producing desired forms of growth; in developing strong and uniform branches and foliage—in other words removing weak wood—or to produce flower buds.

With a number of flowering shrubs the buds are produced the season before, and with these the best time to prune is immediately after they have bloomed, which will encourage the growth of new flowering wood for the following year.

Taffeta Dresses, Large Hats, Even Bustles Appear in Style Revival

Not only is Ascot, London, the largest and loveliest garden party in the world, but it reflects more of the British female courage than anything else does. It lasts four days and they may be rainy, windy days or foggy, damp days, but the average Englishwoman fares forth in filmy frocks, thin shoes and large hats with a superb disregard for weather conditions.

And Ascot sets the seal on summer fashions. This year it is a mixed seal with a somewhat Victorian tendency, due to "Pride and Prejudice," and a distinctly modernist tendency among the young and rebellious. One thing is certain, it is a season of light colors, demure grays, white and creams, primrose yellow, dusty rose and all the blues from powder to hyacinth. There are puffed sleeves and swirling long, full skirts. Here and there are distinct signs of a bustle supporting a taffeta or brocade skirt worn with jackets that have been lifted straight from the family album when it flourished and gave us a good laugh now and then. The tight-fitting kind with gathered peplums and large, full sleeves.

Princess Marina (Duchess of Kent) was responsible for the cartwheel hat last year, and she and her devotees still favor it, only it is wider and shallower than ever. There's a real eye flopper type that falls down on the nape of the neck, covers one eye and touches the tip of the nose with stiff diaphanous tulle. That flourished at Ascot, but whether it will last through the summer is doubtful. It's too much of a responsibility.

As no royal personage nor anyone connected with royalty was at Ascot one's attention was centred on the clothes and beautiful women unless there was a race in progress. And what a place to show clothes! An emerald green lawn. Tall kindly trees hoary with age, banks and borders and masses of flowers. Every style looks its best at Ascot.

ARCHING BROWS

The practice of arching the brows is in vogue today, but we believe that the average girl or woman should carefully consider whether their features will be complimented or not before resorting to this artifice. So many women and girls make the mistake of imitating in appearance their favorite movie star. This is a very grave mistake, unless the features, shape of face and coloring of the hair and brows is similar to that of their favorite. Remember not to copy your criterion on feminine pulchritude unless you are sure that something becomes you; and most of all, remember that originality and naturalness are always beautiful.

The above precaution is important because all types of faces are not enhanced by the arching of the eyebrows. A long, thin face is actually made grotesque by unnatural arching. This type needs a broad, normally curved arch. The face may be made to appear more symmetrical by extending the line of the brow on each side by means of a pencil.

The broad and short face is positively benefited by subtle arching of the brows, but it should be moderate and not excessive. Most women in trying to overcome a defect have a natural tendency to overdo the remedy.

We now come to the oval type of face which may be either a long or short oval. In either case, a straightening of the brow is more attractive than a high arch. This is the only type of face in which brows should be made conspicuous. Your purpose is to actually divert the attention of the observer to note the straight line, and thus divert attention from the visual impression of curves. Straight lines and angles are more alluring in the female face than curves. This is a scientific fact.

Marriage Market In India

A feature of the Indian press which arouses my interest is the matrimonial advertising. The following announcements are taken from the Hindustan Times:

WANTED EARLY—A healthy, educated, well-connected bachelor, aged 20-25, with a decent income or property, for an accomplished Aggarwal girl of Garg Gotra.

WANTED, A GOOD GIRL of any caste for M.Sc. youth, 24 years of age, belonging to a respectable Aggarwal family in U.P.—Apply with photo.

WANTED, ACCOMPLISHED GIRL, for well-established, handsome, healthy Saxena Dutt widower, aged 28, drawing Rs. 40 in Collectorate.

SUITABLE MATCH REQUIRED for an accomplished and highly connected Sarswat Brahman girl, aged about 18 years—Applications, stating age, qualifications and occupation, should be addressed to Advertiser.

I am informed that an eligible bachelor in the Indian Civil Service is worth between £1,500 and £2,500 in the marriage market, which seems cheap, considering the fact that the I.C.S. is the plum of official posts. Doctors, police, engineers and forest officers must have a much lower value.

Kitchen went to Fredericton today, they will visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harding Smith, Aberdeen street.

Mr. Nason of Moncton, representing the Fuller Brush Co., was here this week.

The Port Royal Pulp and Paper Co.'s drive of pulpwood passed here yesterday with seven boats and nearly one hundred men.

Mrs. MacDonald of P. E. I., with a friend from Nova Scotia passed through here selling Watch Tower publications, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The warmth of the past few days has been just like old fashioned summer weather.

Alfred King of Central Kingsclear took charge of a job here this week of moving Roy Tapley's barns, so that the Trans-Canada Highway can be straightened for hard surfacing. His crew consists of Charles Goodine, of McKinley, Paul Nevers of Long's Creek, Dolrus Hoyt of Lake George, Donald Saunders and Lee Brewer of Prince William, Waldon Moore and Roy Tapley of this place.

Salt Tablets Are Aid to Workers

DETROIT, July 14 — Automobile plant physicians credited ordinary salt today with almost completely solving the heat prostration among workers.

Since salt tablets have been made available, several of the factories have not had a single case of heat exhaustion.

Holding the principal cause of heat exhaustion to the loss of salt from the blood stream through profuse perspiration, Dr. E. R. Harris, physician at the Cadillac Motor Car plant, is urging shop workers to take from 10 to a dozen of the salt tablets daily, each following by a glass or more of water.
