"ADOPT A BABY WEEK" APPEALS BY CLERGYMEN

Rev. Dr. Milligan Made An Appeal Last Evening

Rev. Mr. Linton Tonight Gloucester County Has Envable Records For Adopting Babies

Strong appeals are being made jointly by the N. B. Protestant Orphans' Home of Saint John and the Knights of Columbus councils in the province in connection with the "Adopt-A-Baby Week." Last evening an appeal was made by Rev. Dr. J. H. Milligan who appealed to the charitable public of all denominations, especially to parents who had no children in their homes, to consider the matter of adopting a baby and that not only giving a start to some bright boy or girl on the right road in a comfortable home but of also brightening their own home by the presence of a child. He appealed to the charity of the general public in this regard. Dr. Milligan delivered his address over the CFNB broadcasting station in this city last night at 7:30 o'clock.

This evening, Rev. John Linton, pastor of the George Street Baptist church, will make an appeal along the same lines in connection with this good work. There is no report so far of any person in this locality adopting a baby but it is understood that applications are being forwarded to the committee in charge at Saint John. This committee represents both the Protestants' Orphans' Home and the Knights of Columbus organization.

Speaking to The Daily Mail today a gentleman who resides in the county of Gloucester stated that in that county whenever the parents of the baby die that there was no need of an appeal. There were more applications of people who wish to take the baby than there were babies to go round. He cited an instance of nine babies left homeless in one household, and stated that before the day was over there were fourteen applications for the nine babies, and it was only a question of picking out the most beautiful homes where they were to be placed. He said that this was not an isolated case but was one example of what always happened under similar circumstances.

POLICE DRAG THE RIVER FOR TORONTO MAN

Robert Williamson Missing Since Monday Afternoon — Hired Boat at West End Bathing Beach — Had Been Camping Here With Wife and Child.

The R.C.M.P. are today engaged in investigating the mystery of another missing man, reported to have been seen on the St. John river after he hired a "duckboat" from Charles Williams, caretaker of the West end bathing beach here. The man is Robert Williamson, of Toronto. He hired the boat Monday afternoon at three o'clock and has not been seen since that time.

The boat was discovered about two hours later, upside down with a paddle under it, and a light yellow over-shirt which Williamson had been wearing when last seen was found some little distance away. A party of canoeists found the boat and belongings about mid-river a quarter of a mile from the beach.

Mrs. Williamson and her two-year-old son, Robert, were camping at the tourist grounds a short distance above the R.C.M.P. headquarters, with Mr. Williamson. She told police last night that her husband was a strong swimmer. The Williamson's have visited Fredericton before, and five years ago, while here, Mr. Williamson made a gallant attempt effort to save the life of Ole Olsen, who was drowned in the St. John river here.

(Dragging River Today

Two police rowboats were engaged in dragging the river on the Devon side this morning, and Charles Fleer, veteran riverman, was handling one set of grappling irons on the possibility that the Toronto man may have been drowned. The police hold the possibility also that the man might have become lost after swimming ashore. The discovery of the empty boat and the paddles and shirt was made by Harry Harrison, Robert McNeil, Constance Fleming, and Miss Miriam White, all of Devon. The Williamson family had been visiting in Cape Breton and had stopped in this city Monday on their way to Toronto. The missing man is described as about five feet, ten inches tall, 32 years of age, weight about 155 pounds. He is of dark complexion, and was wearing a light yellow overshirt and blue trousers.
