

Old Times Recalled

SOME YORK COUNTY MILLS

(By William H. Moore)

At last the machinery was all in its place and lumber was being sawn, and to digress from mills just for a short time, the highway was built to cross the stream on the dam of the mill, and roads still are in evidence. Later bridges have been built across the pond and at present there is a covered span over quite an extent of the bridgeway. As the water was quiet the bridge piers were not loaded with stones.

Times became hard for the early settlers and there was a strong rumor that they would have scant fare, so Mr. Jewett reported that he would put up a mill to grind oats and by living on oatmeal porridge the settlers might survive until more prosperous times might help them live better. The miller cut the mill stones and had the mill ready to grind the oats by the time the grain was ripe.

For this work the grain had to be very dry, so the new mill was provided with a large sheet iron pan into which the oats were poured and dried over a fire in the basement. Oatmeal was part of the bill of fare and was cooked in different ways for many years. Later this part of the mill was changed into a carding mill and wool was brought for many miles to be carded into rolls for the owners.

This part of the business is now worn out and only a few of the older ladies now exist who are able to spin. A grist mill now built at this mill site grinds grain for the farmers of the surrounding country in a rather better or more modern way than was employed over one hundred years ago.

Corn was ground at this mill and as little as eight pounds had been taken in one grist. Just think about enough for one feed for a horse.

Adjacent to the mills of the Macnaquac are a few old remains along the Saint John river and on some of the adjoining small streams. First above the entrance of the aforementioned stream and only a short distance up river, was the Elliott Creek and on this stream a mill was started but never finished and remains are still in evidence, although fifty years have rolled past since it was being built.

A short distance up the river at the mouth of the Currie brook was a mill erected by the early Curries for grinding grain grown by the early settlers. This was known as the Currie mill and was out of use before the writer remembers. A neighbour spoke for a mill stone from this place but took two, evidently in good measure and to be sociable.

Some miles up from the aforementioned mill two mills were built by a man named Jordan. These were shingle mills and both are out of commission at the present time.

A saw mill was built on the Pennington brook which enters the St. John river at Bear Island. This mill was driven by overshot power of water and owned by a Scotch emigrant and the place is now known as the Mill Hill. It was down at the foot of the precipice at this place where the Indian who killed the man on the other side of the river St. John was preparing a meal from part of a sheep he had killed, was discovered, chased and captured about a mile further up river.

Some early immigrants to Scotch Lake were at this mill in its early day and while under the influence of some intoxicant, probably rum, were having a race down the water spout which led the water from the cliff down to the mill. It was the turn for a Scotch Lake man to run the chute and soon after he started some of the competitors turned on the water, which swept Mr. Fleming off his feet and broke his leg. That sort of sobered the party and their enjoyment was ended for that time.

SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

100th Anniversary Celebrated

In June 1836 there arrived in Stanley a party of settlers to take up homes under the New Brunswick and Nova Scotia Land Company. These were the first settlers to arrive for this purpose. They were mostly from Northumberland county, England. Included in this party were William Pringle and his second wife Margaret Appleby, with Thomas, William and Anne, children of his first wife (Jane Turnbull) and Arthur and Gilbert, the second family. Gilbert was a babe of six months.

On June 26th the descendants of this family met on the old homestead in English Settlement, now occupied by a great-grandson Neil MacNaughton and his mother, for a family reunion and picnic and centenary anniversary. They had as guests a few of the oldest descendants of other early settlers there.

The oldest descendant of the family, John Douglass, now 85 years of age, son of Anne Pringle and John Douglass, was able to be present. The other grandchildren present were Arthur, John, Major James Pringle, David D. Pringle, Mrs. Jas. Craig, Mrs. Erise Clarkson and Mrs. John Jarvis, children of Wm. Pringle. Mrs. James Saunders and Mrs. Bert Clarkson, children of Arthur Pringle; Mrs. Isabel MacNaughton and Mrs. Annie MacLaughlan, children of Gilbert Pringle. The only descendant of Thomas Pringle was Mrs. Agnes Sansom, a granddaughter, and her son Gilbert.

Although the weather was very unpleasant in the early part of the day, the afternoon proved very pleasant and the 160 present had a most enjoyable afternoon. The supper table was set under the shade of the trees and groaned under the quantity of good things it held which were enjoyed by all present. In the early evening the party started homeward, only regretting the shortness of the day.

BIOLOGIC THEOLOGY

Eternal King, how hopeless life would be,
Without that wondrous care direct from Thee,
How melancholy, forlorn, and sore distressed,
Without Thy constant care and thought possessed.

What good we have, what little good we do,
What walk of life we each pursue,
What energy or skill we each possess
This loving care of Thine does but express.

Eternity! is but a word, which measures
In our thoughts and mind;
Explains—perhaps—in slight degree,
Perpetual life and liberty.

This Temple of the Living God,
On dissolution turns to sod,
Such housing of Thy love divine,
Is then to matter's fate resigned.

It cannot be that life can die,
'Tis only matter suffers thus,
'Flesh profits nothing," only acts
As demonstrator of these facts.

'The Way,' 'The Truth,' the 'Logos,'
'Word,'
Does not disintegration know,
In 'Faith' His spiritual Thought
Directs man's pathway here, below.

Such things are obviously clear,
As meditation thus inclines,
And comprehend what is to me,
That "Light" which shines 'twixt
Thee and we.

—W. H. Irvine, M.D.

The public demanded shirts for one dollar. Being public servants we felt it our duty to meet this demand. First we had to secure shirts of quality equal to our standard of value, or keep out of the low price field.

Realizing the truth of the words of Chesterfield, "A man of sense may be in haste, but never in a hurry, because he knows that whatever he does in a hurry he must do very ill"—we therefore took our time and carefully "combed" the shirt manufacturers' lines for values before we decided to "stock" shirts at this price. We feel confident that you will agree with us that our dollar shirts are real value—worth one dollar of any man's hard earned money.
