Wilmot Young People's
The Wilmot Young People's Society held its opening meeting for 1936 last evening. The election of a slate of officers for the present year held an important place in the proceeding. The resignation of the president, Bruce Bird, was accepted following which the report of the nominating committee was read by Miss Mildred Harvey. Two candidates, Miss Netta MacMillan and Murray Shanks declined the nomination because of private studies she is undertaking. It was accordingly moved that Mr. Shanks be president and Miss MacMillan vice-president. This suggestion was adopted. The remainder of the slate is as follows: Secretary, Vernon Box, Treasurer, Lester Inch; Chairman of social committee, Miss Margaret Clark; pianist, Miss Mildred Barbour. The devotional period of last evening's meeting was conducted by Avril Ross. Herbert Dayton gave a reading on the New Year theme. The Programme presented dealt with the life and works of Rudyard Kipling whose critical illness is at present attracting attention. Miss Inez Johnston gave a sketch of the life of Kipling. This was followed by several of his poems which were read by Miss Eleanor Bartlett, Miss Minnie Jewett and Archie Fleming. A dramatized sermonette, produced under the direction of Mrs. Fred Segee, was successfully presented. Those taking part in this feature were: Misses Netta MacMillan, Mildred Barbour, Mabel Holder, Jean Fraser, Miss Eleanor Cook, Murray Shanks, Bruce Bird, Lester Inch, Vernon Box, Ralph Howe, Lloyd Boyd, Charlie McCordick, Ralph Peters. The ceremony was performed by the father of the bridegroom, assisted by Rev. W. Steadman Smith of Marysville. The bride was given away by her father and wore a beautiful wedding gown of Royal blue transparent velvet with hat to match and silver accessories. Miss Helen T. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The table was handsomely appointed with silver and pink and Mrs. Horace Pond presiding over the tea-cups. SERIOUSLY ILL
Friends will learn with regret of the serious illness of John Paisley today at his home on University Avenue.

It pays to advertise in the Daily Mail.

MY DOG

It's the wag of his tail, when I come home at night,
And the look of fond love in his eyes—
Although to the world, a sad failure I've been,
To him, I am noble and wise.

When I sit by the fire with my pipe and a book,
And he smuggles up close to my knee,
I am filled with new hope, and by faith is renewed,
Through the trust that my dog has in me.

If I'm tempted sometimes to play sharp with shrewd men—
Stage a deal that my conscience would mar,
Then the look in his eyes seems to haunt me and say—
"Be the man that your dog thinks you are."
—Willia Hoey.

Educationists Pay Tribute to Dr. B. C. Foster

ity. His seeming ruggedness, however, veiled a strong sense of humor, making him a delightful companion for those who knew him intimately. The sympathy of all will go to Mrs. Foster in her bereavement".
The death of Dr. Foster, which was published yesterday in The Daily Mail, was learned with regret on all sides. The Daily Mail has received today many expressions of sorrow at the passing of this beloved old teacher whose career in the Fredericton High School was a brilliant one, and whose retirement was in some respects an injustice.
Last evening the teachers of the Fredericton High School and vicinity held a meeting in the auditorium of the school and passed a resolution, expressing the teachers' appreciation of their association with Dr. Foster and their sympathy with the family at his death.

Tributes were paid by Miss Martha McIntosh, Dr. Kierstead, Miss Muriel Smith and I. B. Rouse to Dr. Foster as a great teacher, a man of vision, who has made a permanent and true contribution to the educational development of this city and province, and who influence, character and teaching ability will long endure.
It is understood that the school board will arrange to give the schools a half holiday on Monday afternoon to allow the teachers, especially those who were associated with Dr. Foster, either as pupils or teachers, to pay their last tribute of respect to his memory.

Old Times Recalled

Many old timers of forty and fifty years ago, especially those who lived "across the river" will be interested in reading of the conditions which existed in the present town of Devon in those old days. Mrs. Susan Squires has written a very interesting paper dealing with these conditions. This paper The Daily Mail will publish from day to day, at the request of several members of the York and Sunbury Historical Society.

REMINISCENCES OF EARLY ST. MARYS

Mr. William Garden kept the Post Office next above Ben Close's. The Macklin house came next set back from the road. The railway crossed the highway above here and crossed the Neill farm which came next behind the houses along the road. As I did not know who lived in any of these houses they did not make much impression on my memory. The Neill house at that time was near the river. A house along here also owned by Mr. Neill was rented for a Methodist parsonage for some time. It was occupied by the Rev. Matthew Knight, whose sister lived with him and went to school. Mr. Knight was followed by the Rev. Thomas Allen. Several Allen children also attended school. Afterwards Mr. Alexander Gibson built a parsonage for the church on the Marysville road across the town line in Marysville. There was quite a group of houses just below the schoolhouse creek. There were four on the side away from the river. Dan McQueen owned one, William Davenport who worked in the machinshop owned one. Mr. Hallett lived in another, and a family named Trecartin lived in the fourth. I think that Mrs. Trecartin was killed in a steamboat collision when two boats ran into each other at night. I recollect a daughter coming to school afterwards dressed in black. In front of the road Dan Doherty, another railroad conductor, had bought a lot from Mr. William McKeen and built a house. Mr. McKeen had purchased the land below the schoolhouse creek from William Grieves hence the creek was sometimes called Grieves' Creek. Mr. McKeen built a new house on the land near the road. The old house was near the shore. I always remember one thing about this house, it had an opening in a partition and a square box stove stood half in one room and half in another. A cousin of mine who was the wife of John Yerxa, another railway conductor, lived in this house for some time. My mother took me down to visit her the day of the Saint John fire June 20th, 1877. We had heard in the morning that Saint John was burning up. The wind must have been upriver for the air was full of smoke.

The schoolhouse and the little Anglican church were also built on lots of the McKeen land. When I first remember the church it was boarded in, the roof was shingled, and the window frames were in but the windows were boarded up. When a boy would pull a board loose we used to climb up and look in. There was no floor and we could see water in a hole in the cellar. Across the road from the church was a little house occupied by a Mr. and Miss Titus and we children used to think that Miss Titus was queer because she painted her cheeks.

The Hayes Place
North of the McKeen land was the Hayes farm. James Hayes and his family, his sister Miss Margaret Hayes and her niece lived in the house which is still standing near the river. The back of the farm behind the railroad track belonged to Frank Hayes, James Hayes' nephew. The Hughes land came next. Peter Hughes lived in what was probably the original house on the land between the road and the river. John Hughes and Thomas Hughes two other brothers I have been told bought a long house which stood on what was later Van-Wart's corner, sawed it in two and hauled it down to their land and made two houses out of it. The John Hughes half was burned in the first St. Mary's fire. The other half of the building is still standing although it has been changed somewhat. The Indian camps were on the front of the Hughes land. Then there was another Hayes farm which reached to Tilley's corner. Just below the corner was a two-storied house with stairs outside. I seem to remember a blacksmith shop downstairs. The old village constable named Bradley lived in the house. He choked to death trying to swallow too large a piece of meat. This house, too, burned in the first St. Mary's fire. I think Mike Ryan's house was built on the same lot of land. This Hayes land on both sides of the road was swampy, flooded in winter so that it made a good skating rink. There was a big spring back of the railroad track which probably drained into it. The ditches on both sides of the road were deep, full of water and frogs. The corners of the cedar rail fences were full of alders. There were no sidewalks of any kind and in the spring of the year when the frost was coming out of the ground the road was full of "honey pots" as we used to call them. We would dance on the cracked surface until it broke open and spewed out the liquid mud. Sometimes the waggons would go nearly to their hubs. It was quite an improvement when this bit of road was macadamized. The flat stones were laid all over its surface and men with big hammers and sledges worked out their road taxes by cracking up the rocks. Part of the water from this field crossed St. Mary's street in a culvert and a ditch ran through Mr. Van-Wart's land and the water finally flowed into Friel's creek, part of it drained into a little brook which ran across the Indian Camps and on into the river.
