"No regrets," says Rabbit Maranville, one of the most colorful figures of the diamond pastime, who has laid his glove aside for the last time, and is making for other fields. The Rabbit is now manager of the Elmira Pioneers in the New York-Pennsylvania league. A couple of days ago his club lost the playoffs to the Scranton Miners. As he walked to the clubhouse, Maranville said: "That was my last day out there today. I'm through—finished as a player. Baseball has been good to me. I'll continue in the game as manager, if I can find something better, I'll move up. Otherwise I'll try to continue my job at Elmira." The Rabbit batted .326 in 123 games this year, but it was afield that his legs "got him." Rabbit played 24 seasons in the major leagues. His legs, which carried him through a major league career with Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, and Boston, never recover ed completely from a fracture which he suffered at the outset of the 1934 season with the Bees. He and Babe Ruth were two of the most colorful baseball players who ever donned uniforms.

Olympic Games Comment

In the current issue of the Dunnville Chronicle, W. A. ("Bill") Fry, its editor and publisher, devotes his "Old Bill's Column" to an account of the Canadian team's visit to the Olympic Games. He follows with editorial comment, in which he expresses the opinion that Canada's showing, everything considered, was a good one. The veteran sportsman writes, in

"Let us not forget that we have only ten million to draw from, as compared with the many millions in each of such countries as the United States, Great Britain, Germany and France. Second, Canadian winter lasts so long that athletes lose during one-half the year the benefits of training done in the other half. And, third, Canadian sports leaders get practically no financial assistance from our Governments to carry on the work of developing Olympic prospects. What our athletes accomplished under these three handicaps shows that Canadians bow to no other nation as far as brains, stamina and courage go. but these have to be co-ordinated to become 'tops,' and that is were we fall down."

Leaving out all the post-Olympic arguments, the cries of favoritism, charges of mismanagement, and other allegations which, even when not groundless, have been exaggerated, it must be said that Squire Fry of Dunnville has selected three very good points. He has mentioned a trio of handicaps, any one of which can be counted as of major importance.

The second of the Maritime finals is scheduled here tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, after which the Springhill nine takes the road for the journey home where the third and fourth games are carded, opening on Today's combat was one of the closest and most hard fought battles of the titular series over many years. Old time fans here stated tonight they had never remembered a game, since the local club won its first Maritime title six years ago, that had them so much on edge. The opener on Moncton's two Allan Cup cham- was a southpaws battle on the mound with Purney Fuller, the mite portsider from Springhill, opposing Cecil (Lefty) Brownell, hurling ace of the St. Croix.

of the Close Crown topped the New Brunswick Riverside Golf and Country Club girl in a morning round and then went out over Beaconsfield's par 75 layout later in the day to quell the titular hopes of 18-year-old Heather Leslie of Winnipeg.

Netcord Shot!

NEW YORK, Sept. 23-Should the netcord shot, heartbreaker of tennis, be abolished?

This question aroused debate in English tennis circles after several vital points in the Wimbledon championships and in Davis Cup matches were won and lost by the nerve-wracking margin of a netcord.

Proponents of abolition, arguing the stroke is unfair, want a netoord to be regarded as a "let," whether it is made on service or in a rally.

Stoutly defending the netcord, the tennis correspondent of the "London Evening Star" asserted to abolish the shot "would be to prolong matches to such an extent as to place them beyond the scope of human endurance.

"There is no game in which the element of luck does not play a part," he wrote. "Expel Dame Fortune from any playing field and you will detract from the
