CHIROPRACTIC for Health

Chiropractic does not "treat" effects. It's objective is to "adjust" causes. There must be a CAUSE for every EFFECT, and the Chiropractic premise is that interference to the proper transmission of nerve force creates a bodily condition of disease.

Chiropractic's impressive record of achievement in behalf of sick and suffering humanity should insure unprejudiced consideration and trial.

Peanut Carnival
Splendid Recreational Programme Planned For the Summer

Official opening of the playgrounds at Queen's Square and Wilmot Park will take place on Monday morning at 9.30 under the supervision of Ralph J. Albrant, Y. M. C. A. Secretary and four experienced play directors. Walter O'Donnel and Miss Molly Burt will be in charge at Wilmot Park and Don MacKinnon and Francis Crocker will have charge at the square.

The programme is starting off in fine style on Monday with a Peanut Carnival. The directors have planned this special feature for the very first day in the hope that they will have a big crowd and that future plans can be outlined to them. A Peanut Carnival, we understand, is something new. The details are being kept secret but we are told that there will be races and contests of various kinds. A bicycle race will be one of the features during the afternoon.

Children in the lower end of town will go to Queen's Square and those from the upper end of the city should go to the Wilmot Park playground. The hours Monday are:

Miss Lonelyhearts:

It would be fine to run a Lonelyhearts column. This sort of department was originally intended to benefit and bring together lonely men and women who were grieving and pining for physical and mental communal with the opposite sex. Later, the scope broadened and every conceivable human problem was brought to Miss Lonelyhearts. How noble it would be to knock out a lot of drivel in reply to a letter throbbing with grief and hope and doubt and sign it "Sincerely your friend, Miss Lonelyhearts." However, there would be other ways of handling it.

Girl from the Gornish

Of necessity there's a girl from Rusagons or thereabouts who modestly admits that she has cornflower-blue eyes, hair like spun gold, an oval face, good features, a nice figure, weighs one hundred and five pounds, and (shyly) is considered quite attractive. All she wants is to make a home for some deserving man. Lo! A young man from nearby, say Waasis, has written that he is virile and ruggedly handsome, has a fine farm and would be a good provider for some plain home girl. Through Miss Lonelyhearts they are brought together. She is plain enough, to put it mildly, and there must certainly be a good provider if he can provide much from those few rocky acres. Nonetheless, they are married and all that stupidity is concentrated into one household instead of spreading into two.

Man, Woman and Child

A young man who has, his friends think, a Grand Opera voice begs Miss Lonelyhearts to help him get his chance. He is told to be in the Barker House alley on a certain night in the dark of the moon to meet an impressario traveling incognito. His friends never know whom to thank for his continued absence.

A middle-aged widow who, it develops from her letter, has five thousand dollars and no sense is looking for a help-meet. Very soon she meets a man with slick hair, a blond mustache and a penchant for middle-aged widows. After a short friendship he must depart for a short time and he goes, swearing undying love, leaving the widow only a memory and no sense.

A girl, of course, who has done recitations at local entertainments knows that if she can but set foot on the New York stage she will be at once recognized as a Duse or Bernhardt. A few lines to her, a word to any local white-slaver and all is arranged satisfactorily.

Thus could Miss Lonelyhearts be a power for good for the masses rather than the individual. Problems sent here will be given immediate attention.
