CASH FOR 5 DIONNES MOUNTING

Quints are Now Worth a Quarter of a Million Dollars — Aged 2 May 28.

CALLANDER, Ontario, May 17 — Queens of Babydom, the Dionne quintuplets primp for their second birthday celebration Thursday, May 28th with the world at their feet and money—plenty of it—in the bank.

Their amazing majesties, the world's most famous babies and among its healthiest, were worth an estimated $250,000 as preparations to mark the second anniversary of their birth neared completion.

That quarter-million is clear profit—bonds, cash in the bank or money earmarked Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie from contracts their guardians have signed.

Expenditures of $30,000 or so, in the past two years for nurses, their doctor's salary, extensions to their hospital and other running expenses bring the total the youngsters born in poverty to Olivia and Elzire have earned to almost $300,000.

It costs them $1,000 a month to live, these babies who were a public charge when they first arrived in the world. Newspaper picture contracts motion pictures and endorsements have brought them their wealth.

Cash is No Problem.

So money is no problem in the lives of the five little girls who had neither wealth nor health, when they were born.

And there are a few other problems surrounding the little sisters as they complete their second year. Their parents still protest against the Ontario Government guardianship act which made them wards of the King and brought them under control of Hon. David Croft, Ontario Minister of Welfare, Dr. Allan Roy Dafeo, their physician, and Judge J. A. Valin of North Bay.

But a year of protest has failed to shake the determination of the Government to keep the famous youngsters under its control and that of their noted physician, the little country doctor who shot to fame through his amazing feat of keeping them alive, the world's first quintuplets to survive more than a few days.

Though it has been crowded with the inevitable hippodroming, with controversy and with the merry music of busy cash-registers ringing a businesslike obligato to the chatter of tiny tongues, their second year had been quiet and peaceful compared with their first.

World attention that centered in their first few months on an hour-by-hour fight to nurse faint sparks of life and later to build strength in frail, premature bodies, switched to brighter things in the second 12 months.

Specialists Consulted
Contrast alarms and daily fear bred by attacks of cyanosis and a two-week siege of intestinal toxemia gave way to quiet confidence that the youngsters protected as few babies are, had less to fear from disease than most children.

There hasn't been a suggestion of illness in the Dafeo hospital since all five suffered head and throat colds in their 11th month. Under the scientific care of Dr. Dafeo their minds and bodies are being developed in a modern, conservative manner endorsed by the leading Canadian child specialists Dr. Dafeo consults.

So the world's concern over their health in the first year gave way in the past 12 months to interest in their mischievous antics, in their first steps and first teeth and—for Ontario—venue-producing shows on their front verandah.

It was news when the quintuplets stood up and attempted their first steps in August, better news when all but Marie walked in October and front page stuff when Marie joined her sisters in November.

Yvonne made the headlines by tossing a building block through a plate-glass window in September and hit them again when she awoke one midnight in December and flooded the hospital with light by touching a switch.

"On the Loose!"
Yvonne led her sisters in another escapade a couple of months ago. She worked out the combination of the quintuplets' cot latches during the night that time and led her sisters out on the nursery floor. They tip-toed to their nurses' bedrooms to give those young ladies the greatest surprise they've ever had.

The fact that their childish pranks formed the principal news from the Dafeo hospital during the year indicated the peaceful existence the youngsters are living. They started their second year in perfect health and are ending it still perfect babies.

Even a corps of movie actors and technicians who came to Callander in December to film the quintuplets in "The Country Doctor" failed to disturb the serenity of the children's lives.

No Happiness In the Home When the Mother Is Sick

The tired, worn out mother cannot make a happy home if she is sick and worried by the never ending household duties. She gets run down and becomes nervous and irritable, downhearted and discouraged, can't rest at night, and gets up in the morning as tired as when she went to bed.

Women suffering in this way will find in Milburn's H. & N. Pills a remedy with which to recuperate their health, build up the run down system, and bring back their bodily vigor.

KING EDWARD RESCUES DEBUTANTES

Even if There Can't Be any Courts at Buckingham Palace There are to Be Two Garden Parties

LONDON, England, May 26—Britain's bachelor King has ascertained early in his reign that the "launching" of debutantes is one of his multifarious duties. With mourning ruling out any courts at Buckingham Palace this summer, thereby threatening postponement of the presentations of the debutantes of 1936, the sovereign has decided to give the debutantes two garden parties at the palace, on the afternoons of July 21 and 22. Presentations on these occasions will be the equivalent and usual presentations in the ball room of the palace.

Until it had been announced that these parties would be held and that a curtsy on the lawn would confer the same status as a curtsy before the throne in the ball room there was much anxiety in the social world. But Edward VIII quickly disposed of the time-lag threat and in so doing assured additional liveliness for the impending London season and a vast amount of business for the dress-making industry.

Most debutantes would, of course, prefer to be presented in the palace ball room with its background of brilliant uniforms and under the lights of its six great candelabra. But if the weather is kind for the garden parties there will be much that is naturally beautiful about the setting for the open air "courts".

While full details of the arrangements will not be issued until later, it is believed that King Edward, with other members of the royal family around him, will sit in a gilded armchair under the Delhi Durbar canopy of scarlet and gold under which King George and Queen Mary used to receive foreign diplomats at the royal garden parties, and which is supported by four posts of solid silver.

It is expected that the Lord Chamberlain will request debutantes to wear white or pastel shades, and if so there could be no more effective setting than the lawns, flowerbeds and trees of the palace gardens.

The palace park and its lake cover an area of about forty acres; and very valuable acres they are, too, at this period of London's history. It is estimated that the value of this property is between $12,000,000 and $15,000,000, but disposal of it seems to be out of the question despite the fact that the present sovereign, like some of his predecessors, evinces no partiality for this principal royal residence.

The quintuplets gathered honors in their first feature motion picture as effortlessly as they captured the hearts of 75,000 or more persons who flocked to this Northern Ontario hamlet last summer to watch them appear on their hospital porch and wave and giggle for ten minutes at each "show".

Probably still more will stream over Northern Ontario's good roads this summer to glimpse the youngsters at play in an enclosure that is being built so visitors can see them without being seen.

GHOSTS BALK AT RADIO

A few days ago the British Broadcasting Corporation attempted to broadcast a ghost. A haunted manor house in Kent was supplied with microphones, the floor was covered with powdered chalk to record ghostly footprints, a thermometer was ready to record changes in temperature produced by the spook, and a large unseen audience was informed, as darkness fell, of all the preparatory steps.

Unfortunately, the shade failed to take advantage of this opportunity, and on shutting down at midnight the BBC had to admit its unsuccess.

Various reasons for the ghost's non-appearance were given by various people, the most pertinent one being that the spook was familiar with the regulation requiring a script to be presented to the BBC in advance.

The London Times is glad the experiment failed; it believes that if the listeners had heard the ghost say "Good evening, everybody," many people would have died in their chairs, while others would have accused the BBC of perpetrating a colossal fraud.

The Manchester Guardian, however, believes that the test proved nothing except that the ghost is not a departed publicity agent.

Pride of ancestry may be carried to extremes.

Yet, replied Miss Cayenne, it ought to be encouraged. It is the only thing I know of that could influence some people to speak kindly of their relations.

First Gent—Did you hear that old McClosk's had gone to his long rest?

Second Gent—Yes, he's been after that Government job for a long time.
