A Live Minister

Hon. J. E. Michaud, Minister of Fisheries, who spent last night in Fredericton, has just returned from Grand Manan where he discussed at length the prospects of increased fish markets for our New Brunswick fish. It is hope to have New Brunswick fish placed in the markets of the world to a much wider extent than at present. Hon. Mr. Michaud was much encouraged by the cheering news that Connors Brothers plant at Black's Harbour would continue to operate just as long as fish could be obtained. This was particularly encouraging in view of the fact that canneries in the United States may have to close down. This New Brunswick firm, of which J. J. Hayes Doone, M.P.P., is Secretary, now ships sardines to all parts of the world.

On September 25 Hon. Mr. Michaud will start his campaign for "Eat More Fish." This campaign which will be Dominion wide will, it is hoped, result in an increased consumption of sea foods across Canada.

Hon. Mr. Michaud has been at the head of the Department of Fisheries less than a year, but he has proved himself to be the most active Minister that has ever held the post of Minister of Fisheries. He has made a personal visit to the leading fishing points on both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and has obtained first hand information of the fisheries industry. Not only that, but he is making a study of the ways and means to assist this industry, and to provide wider markets for our fishermen. The creation of wider markets means employment to thousands of Canadian fishermen, and in the creation of these Hon. Mr. Michaud is sparing no pains to promote. Speaking to The Daily Mail last evening, Hon. Mr. Michaud said that he was working hard and had travelled many thousands of miles, during recent months. This, however, he said, did not matter if the results were accomplished for the benefit of the fishermen.

"Intent to Alarm the King"

Calm British justice made a piker of a petty evil-doer who seemed to have laid plans to be a sensational big shot.

On July 16, as King Edward was returning a-horseback from a trooping of the colors, a man tossed a black object in the path of his majesty. The object, a pistol, landed on the ground at the horse's hind legs. George Andrew McMahon was arrested and held on three charges:

"Presenting near his majesty a revolver with intent to break the public peace."

"Being in possession of a revolver with intent to endanger public life."

"Performing an act intended to alarm his majesty."

Upon arrest, McMahon said he had intended to kill himself in front of the King. On the stand he said he had been engaged by a foreign power.

The court in so many words termed this story so much poppycock. The presiding justice calmly instructed the jury to find the man not guilty on the first two counts. Finally a guilty verdict was given for "an act intended to alarm his majesty." And the judge gave the prisoner a year's sentence.

"I do not intend to glorify this misguided person as a sort of fancy hero," said his honor. And that was that.

Who knows but what this punishment is more bitter to the wrongdoer than a long stretch in a tough jug? It's an idea, anyhow.

Babson Blasts "Education"

"School authorities must revise the present crazy and false educational system which is the primary cause of unemployment."

Who said that?

Roger Babson, business diagnostician, said it. And we are not sure we are going to quarrel very much with him about it.

When anybody takes a shot at the educational system he invites the withering fire of embattled educators. And when you start to argue education, you have difficulty in finding where to start.

Yet when all is said and done, the educators have produced a rather crummy lot of pupils. We include ourselves. And this they have done with the biggest bite of the tax dollar.

"Ah, but," they'll tell you, "the home and church must bear their share of the blame."

Yes, that's right, but Brother Babson probably is thinking of the endless stream of youngsters "educated" in arts and skills who come to him and other business men and are "willing to do anything" but just cannot be pinned down to displaying one purchasable art or skill.

Educators do not necessarily claim to produce the finished worker. Yet what are they producing? Babson says theirs is a "crazy and false system."

Educators may now have the floor and present the defense.

Jurists Agree on Driving

Virtually identical views on the problem of careless and reckless motorists were expressed in Toronto by two eminent Judges and are worth careful consideration.

In Appeal Court, Chief Justice Latchford said: "I think that many more lives would be saved if the regulations were more rigidly enforced." And Chief Justice Rose of the Supreme Court declared: "I am not sure we are following the logical course in prosecuting only when there has been a serious accident." Both these jurists intimate that the time for action in regard to motor accidents is before they happen.

Unlike the criminal who plans to break the law, the motorist does not kill nor cause damage with intent. He does so because he is careless, ignorant, or has not learned to consider the rights of others. He acquires these habits because he is not checked up. A bad driver may menace life and property for years before running foul of the law.

It is too late to wait till a fatality or serious accident has occurred before imposing a fine or prison sentence. The harm has been done, and unless the driver is a fool or an inhuman monster the thought of the death or destruction he has caused will be a greater punishment and have more effect than anything the law can do.

As hinted by Justice Latchford, it is the disregard of regulations and the committing of minor offenses which lead to the major accidents, and, therefore, as Mr. Justice Rose says, "reckless driving must be punished suitably."

It is better that the driving laws be over severe and the punishment of offenders against them harsh than that the terrible toll of motor-car deaths should continue to mount.

SNAPSHOTS

Now that the Exhibition is about over our next worry is about taking off the screen doors and putting on the outside windows.

The following advertisement appears: Old established baking business for sale. Good oven. Present owner has been in it for twelve years.

A conductor was taking tickets on a train coming to the Exhibition. "He's only five years old," said the mother when the conductor looked at her little boy. "Mother is 36," added the lad, who wished to give the conductor all the information.

Perhaps if it were decided not to charge fifty cents for the Exhibition and an extra fifty cents for the races the fall fair would be even more popular another year.

The Toronto Exhibition costs an entrance fee of twenty-five cents.

Our Exhibition directors work hard but they do not always use good judgment.

Fierce Hurricane

in North Carolina and Virginia concealed full extent of damage along their coasts, but indications were the toll of life and property had been slight.

Last night the centre of the vast, whirling hurricane was reported approximately 50 miles southeast of Atlantic City, N. J., moving south-northeast. The full force of the blow was expected here by 9 a.m., ADT today.

Along the New England coast, shipping observed storm warnings and hung close to shore.

131 Children Aboard
The steamer Berkshire, carrying 131 school children, anchored off Wing's Neck at the western entrance of Cape Cod and prepared to ride the blow out. The New York-Boston steamer, Boston, cancelled its sailing.

To the southward, shipping in Norfolk, Hampton Roads and other southern coastal points was at a standstill and the Coast Guard raced to the rescue of four distressed vessels.

The Chesapeake lightship, broken loose from its moorings, lost its lifeboats and sent out an SOS. The Coast Guard cutters Mendota and Sebago prepared to stand by.

The cutter Modoc took in tow the Morgan liner El Almirante, which reported herself in distress 300 miles off Cape Lookout and started for New York.

By 9 a.m., ADT, today the Weather Bureau said, the full force of the hurricane, which was measured at 100 miles or more an hour in southern cities, would be loosed on New York City.

DAILY FOREIGN NEWS COMMENT

Signs of Internal Disputes

Among Spanish Rebels
It is said that the youthful element among the Curist, Fascist and Monarchist parties have been already disputing among themselves as to which form of Government to establish when they took Madrid. The fiery General Emilio Mola in the somewhat testy manner of a martinet told them, that youth in spite of its immense spirit of devotion and sacrifice, "must know that it is WE SOLDIERS who are going to lay the foundations for national reconstruction." The choleric general blasted the hopes of the Monarchists by saying that the rebels were not fighting to re-establish "a king who in 1931 fled like a woman because he did not know how to die like a man."

General Franco (Has Food

For Serious Thought

From Tangier comes news that the Riffians tribesmen in Spanish Morocco have attacked an outpost killing a Spanish captain and four soldiers. It is rumored that several Moslem chieftains are plotting an uprising. The frontier between French and Spanish Moroccan zones has been closed to automobile traffic. General Franco found it necessary to leave 18,000 of the Spanish Foreign Legion in Spanish Morocco to maintain order. These troops, the cream of the Spanish army, are desperately needed by the rebels in Spain. But Italy and Germany have been promised special trading privileges in Spanish Morocco in return for their assistance. Like a prudent man General Franco is trying to be sure that he can make delivery. It is rumored that Spanish peasants are maintaining a guerrilla warfare in the rear of Franco's army, massacring stragglers cutting off convoys and ammunition and making themselves as unpleasant as Spanish Guerrillas did in the old days of the Peninsular War, to Napoleon's Marshals Massena, Victor and Soult. Firing squads, devastated villages and the atrocities of the rebel Moorish auxiliaries, are being repaid in kind. —H. M. P.

Co-operative

ment is quite an extensive one and promises to constitute the heaviest contribution ever made by the upper St. John River valley to the long-advocated policy of properly finishing hogs of bacon type for the better price levels, and more profitable results the market affords for such better-quality products.

The movement has caused great interest, and so many enquiries have been received by the department of agriculture that its extension has been authorized to all sections of the district where there are to be found a sufficient number of farmers prepared to undertake profitable steps to improve the quality and marketing methods of their hog-breeding and feeding operations.

As a further inducement, the department has announced a special provincial bonus on market bacon hogs by which producers are to receive 50 cents per head on hogs grading "selects" and "bacons" live, or as Grade A and B 1 in the carcasses. Live shipments, however, are encouraged, with returns made on the graded carcass basis. This bonus expires at the end of 1937, and is available only when hogs are shipped through recognized approved shipping organizations of farmers.

The department is encouraging the farmers to keep their pigs in the feed lot until they attain the proper live market weight range of 190 to 230 pounds at the farm, and the assistance rendered in assembling and shipping hogs is not designed to hurt the existing buying and shipping channels.

Loss has been suffered in the past through the practice of buyers picking and marketing unfinished lightweight hogs which bore a discounted price when they reached the packer. Buyers found themselves handicapped in advising proper development, as they feared that if they did not buy the next man would, and they would lose the business, so the present sow unit policy was organized to offset this loss and discourage the practice of shipping immature animals.

The minister of agriculture has now announced a policy whereby the provincial and federal governments will bear jointly the cost of transportation of spring farrowed sows of select grade, excellent and good breeding from the stockyards at Moncton to a central point in this district. These sows are to be selected by experts from shipments of market hogs made at Moncton and will be purchased at the prevailing "off-car" price for select hogs. Their weights will border around the 200-pound mark, and they will be bought early in November.
