The principal reason for designating relatives or friends as executors of one's estate is that of friendship rather than that of ability.

It is a wise man who puts sentiment aside and names this Company in his Will as Executor and Trustee.

Our accumulated experience in the management of estates and our combined credit, investment and trust facilities, together with the fact that we are permanent and not subject to the uncertainties of life that your friends and relatives are, makes it your duty to consider naming us in your Will.

Here, still beneath a canopy
Where chestnut trees spread coolness on the lawn;
I waken with the first light breeze
As rosy clouds blow sweetness from the dawn.
Across the East a taper moves,
As slowly shades of night are lifted high;
Then, softly from a golden bed,
The coverlets are folded from the sky.
With face aglow the sun appears,
His arms upheld—a supreme judge of day—
A sentence falls in the court of Earth—
A benediction on all mortal clay.
—Leila Bishop Martin.

BEAUCVILLE, Que., Aug. 8—In the presence of a helpless mother, a 12-year-old girl named Samuel was killed by a huge bear while the two were out blueberry picking near this town yesterday.

CANADIANA

SUMMER CARNIVAL

I shut my eyes and the wind in the trees,
Seemed whispering sweet melodies;
I listened and heard the waves of the sea,
Murmuring a song of the deeps to me;
The rippling brook on the pebbles made,
A laughing tune throughout the glade;
While the cataract down the mountain grade,
Roared as it fell in a white cascade.
The wind brought back dear memories,
As it sang its song in the tops of the trees;
They carried me over the whole wide world,
Over land, or sea, where my sails were furled,
And mingled with the wind's own song,
Came bird-notes, fluting the whole day long—
For, out in my garden, the wind and the birds,
Hold carnival, there, too splendid for words.
—ETHER MAY HALL.

OBVIOUS BUT TRUE

Baltimore Sun: The President, the Governor-General, the Prime Minister were not speaking pious platitudes or empty wishes when they spoke of the good feeling and understanding between the peoples of the two countries. They were giving expression to incontestable facts. . . . There are particular circumstances and particular conditions to explain this. There are the identity of language, the similarity of racial stocks, the parallel between our democratic institutions. Nowhere else in all the world are these conditions repeated as between adjacent nations. But these favourable influences would still not have been enough but for wise and prudent statesmanship, which refused to allow petty difficulties between the two countries to nourish a narrowly Chauvinist spirit. For such statesmanship, of which the latest manifestation is to be found in the reciprocity treaty which Mr. Hull negotiated not so many months ago, we may all be grateful.

Say Fredericton

tourist business but have been successful in July this year in about doubling the number of tourists that visited in Fredericton in July 1935. We can understand our Saint John friends, resenting the loss of tourist business to Fredericton if they believe that unfair means are being adopted but fail to see why the St. Croix Currier are kicking about tourists being routed through Fredericton.

"The Fredericton Board of Trade has enjoyed the most friendly relations with the Saint John and St. Stephen Boards of Trade and hope to show them that we are playing the game energetically but fairly."

The article appearing in the Saint John Telegraph-Journal was as follows:

A protest against what was considered unfair discrimination against Saint John was voiced in the name of the New Brunswick Hotel Association yesterday by the association vice-president, H. J. Lyons. In his statement yesterday, Mr. Lyons said: "Our attention has been directed to the activities of representatives of the tourist bureau of the Fredericton Board of Trade who have been posted at Ellsworth on Route No. 1 in Maine, and at Newport on Route No. 2 in Maine to direct motor traffic for New Brunswick through Fredericton."

"We have no objection to any legitimate efforts made by any community to stimulate its own tourist traffic," Mr. Lyons said, "but we must protest against the statements which it is claimed are being made by these representatives of the Fredericton Board of Trade. We are informed that they are using arguments that are false, stating that the roads from St. Stephen to Saint John and from Saint John to Sussex are impassable."

Mr. Lyons said further that motorists having been incorrectly informed concerning these two highways, were recommended to make their trip into New Brunswick from St. Stephen by way of Harvey to Fredericton, through routes 9 and 10 to Sussex and Moncton and thence to Nova Scotia, or where a northern trip is desired, are advocating entry at Houlton, Me., following the Woodstock highway to Fredericton and proceeding to Newcastle.

RETURNED FROM WOODSTOCK
Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Shea have returned from Woodstock, where they were called on account of the sudden death of Mrs. Shea's brother, the late George King.

MATRICULATION EXAMINATIONS ARE DISCUSSED BY "OBSERVER"

Exams Not Accurate Test of Pupils' Ability—The Examiners—Matric. Standard Founded on Fallacy

The recent matriculation showing reflects great credit upon Fredericton students. Out of a total of 59 placed in first division, Fredericton secured 12. This means approximately 25 per cent which is a good percentage for any one school to obtain. In addition Fredericton students stood in first and third place. From the point of view of the public the Fredericton High School, in which most of these students were prepared, has done well.

There is perhaps a word of warning needed, however, about our standards of judging. It seems to be the practise to judge a school by its matriculation standing. This is all right to a certain extent, but it can be carried too far. Matriculation results may be an accurate estimate of a school's scholastic standing, or it may not. It may be, and often is, merely a display of the standing of the most select group from the school. Sometimes these groups are singled out early in the term and carefully groomed for the final exams. This means that a great number of students below this select group are going to be neglected. Every effort is made to bring up the higher group to a position of prominence in the final lists. A further means of accomplishing this result is to coach these pupils by drill on the questions contained in old examination papers. It has been found to be a fact that questions in almost any paper have a habit of repeating themselves every so often. By going over the papers for several years back it is possible to prepare a student very well indeed for this set of papers.

Here is where the practice of changing the examiners every few years would be beneficial. I do not say that it is not legitimate for the teacher to coach the pupils in this way, as long as the system remains what it is, but at least if it is going to be done it should be done with equal emphasis for all, and not concentrated upon a particular group.

It is also perfectly understandable why so much effort is put forth to obtain a good matriculation showing, when, as we have said, the school is to be judged upon those results. I would suggest, however, that this standard, if taken as the sole standard, is founded upon a fallacy. One reason for this statement is set forth above in the practice of coaching a particular group of pupils. This practice cannot surely result in an accurate showing of the school's capabilities. Another reason is that which applies to any set of examinations as a real test of the pupil's ability. It is not an accurate test. Many factors enter into the writing of an average examination paper. A written paper does not take into account the state of the pupil's health, his nervousness or his native ability to express himself or not by means of the written word only.

It would seem then that the public should educate itself as to what really constitutes a fair standard on which to judge a school's progress. If instead of opening their newspapers and saying, "Ah, Fredericton did well this year; we got the first and third places and a whole lot in first division." Or, "Well, Fredericton didn't do so well. We didn't get the leader—if, instead of doing this they would take into account all that the school has stood for in the community during the year, it would be a better standard of judging. A high school should be a place where not only academic knowledge is taught, but also, what is far more important, a place where the boy or girl is taught the fundamental rules of good citizenship. It should be a place where the abilities and talents God has given him, in the way which will be of the most service to him and his fellow man. It should be a place where the pupil can express himself in music, art or drama, and not only in geometry, algebra or grammar. In short, the school should be a training ground for life, and should make itself felt in the community life. If the public would take as much interest in the school during the school year as they do around examination time, they would soon realize that the school as an institution stands for something more than just the making of high marks by a few favored pupils.
