TERRY WILL RETIRE AS A PLAYER IN 1937

Sorely Troubled By Damaged Left Knee, Bill Says Decision is Final This Time.

The toll of the Giants' pennant drive, the strain of the world series and the years are catching up with one William Harold Terry, who nevertheless still remain the best first baseman in his league.

But if the colonel can get through the current warfare against the Yankees without sending for a cane or a crutch, he never again will subject his aching and aging ligaments to such punishment as they are undergoing now.

Bill will play no more ball next year and this time he means it. But right now he must carry on and carrying on becomes increasingly difficult.

As he lay on the rubbing table after Saturday's game, he winced slightly at Trainer Schaeffer's rubbing of his damaged left knee.

"That knee gave me plenty of trouble out there today," he said. "I couldn't go to either side very well, nor could I run."

Evidence of the truth of Bill's statement was seen in the fourth inning when he grounded to Crosetti in deep short and was thrown out. On another day, not so far in the past, that blow would have been a base hit for Terry.

GLASS IS MORE LIKE LIQUID THAN SOLID

Is ordinary, hard, brittle window glass a liquid? Surely not. And yet, in many ways, a scientist may tell you it is more like a liquid than a solid.

Cold sealing wax is another one of these borderline solid-liquids. Give it a sharp blow and it will break; but exert even a small pressure, steadily, and the substance will bend into a new and permanent shape. Glass will do this also, it is believed.

Really to qualify as an honest-to-goodness solid, a substance must not bend permanently when a small force is exerted, no matter how long this force is applied.

This characteristic of a true solid, its ability to maintain permanently its original shape, is related to its internal molecular architecture. Its molecules are arranged regularly, block fashion, and are bound together by electrical forces.

But in a true liquid, the molecular bricks have no regular arrangement; the inner electrical forces do not hold the mass to a definite shape. Or at least this was the view until recent years, and is still regarded as true in its main points.

Giants Upset Yank's Apple Cart, 5-4

SCHUMACHER ENDS NATIONAL CLUB'S WINNING STREAK

Terry Brings in Moore With Winning Run in Tenth

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Swaying perilously close to the brink of world series disaster, New York Giants prolonged their baseball civil war with the Yankees today with a breath-taking 5-4 victory in the 10th inning of the fifth game.

The outcome reduced the margin of the Yankees to a single game three games to two, and sent the warring clans back across the Harlem River for the sixth game at the Polo Grounds tomorrow.

On their home grounds, the Giants will rely on their knuckleball star Freddy Fitzsimmons, to beat "Lefty" Vernon Gomez and carry the fight to a seventh and final match.

Bill Terry, manager of the Giants who has been hobbling through the series with a painfully swollen knee, drove "Jo-Jo" Moore across the plate with the winning run in the first extra frame of a ball game that was loosely but thrillingly played.

The decisive blow was a looping drive to left-centre that Terry hit off the veteran relief pitcher, Pat Malone, with the count three and two, after the Yankees had kicked vigorously against Umpire Cy Pfrman's failure to call what they thought was a third strike on the Giant's pilot, Moore, who had started the 10th with a groundrule two-bagger that hopped into the leftfield boxes, reached third on Dick Bartell's sacrifice bunt and scored easily as Joe Di Maggio threw wildly to the infield after catching Terry's wallop on the dead run.

50,024 In Attendance
A crowd of 50,024 fans saw the National Leaguers battle their way to victory behind the sensational "sinker" ball pitching of Hal Schumacher, who came back to whip the famous "Murderers' Row" of the Yankees after being knocked out of the box last Friday.

The youthful right-hander had the crowd wildly on edge with a perfect exhibition of the "man on the flying trapeze" but in crisis after crisis he gave a demonstration of courage that thrust back his slugging rivals and saved a game that he came dangerously close to losing because of his wildness.

Schumacher yielded 10 hits and walked six Yankees but he also struck out 10, within three of the world series record.

He scaled his greatest heights in the third inning when, with one run in, the bases full and none out, thanks to two bases on balls, a wild pitch, an error by Bartell and a bunt base hit, he stopped the "big three" of the Yankees batting order cold Di Maggio and Captain Lou Gehrig fanned and Bill Dickey hoisted to Mel Ott.

The Giants went on their biggest batting rampage of the series when they walloped big "Red" Ruffing for five hits and three runs in the first inning, but they failed to hold this advantage, bitterly as they fought to protect it.

M'LARNIN TRIMS CANZONERI VIA DECISION ROUTE

Easy Victory -- May Be Last Fight For Old Tony

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Jimmy McLarnin, the Vancouver Dynamiter, turned in one of his best performances in recent years tonight to score a slashing victory over Tony Canzoneri, former lightweight champion, in their return 10-round bout in Madison Square Garden. McLarnin weighed 145 and Canzoneri 137.

McLarnin, who was decisively defeated by Canzoneri when they met first last May, more than got even tonight. He administered what probably was the worst defeat in the little American-Latin's dozen years of distinguished ring campaigning.

A ringside score card gave McLarnin seven rounds, two were credited to Canzoneri and one was called even. The crowd of 11,423 paying customers, who contributed $54,189.54 to see Canzoneri fade out of the fistie picture, gave the former lightweight king a rousing hand as the weary but game Canzoneri, his face covered with blood, left the ring.

The impressive victory for the Canadian Celt put him in line for a shot at the welterweight crown he has already worn twice. Both Madison Square Garden and the 20th Century Sporting Club of Mike Jacobs are anxious to match Barney Ross of Chicago, present welter champ with tonight's winner.

Using a flashing left that Canzoneri simply could not dodge, McLarnin showing traces of his old time greatness, rolled up point after point as the rounds went by while a slow but thoroughly game Canzoneri spent most of the time counter punching in a vain attempt to connect for a knockout punch.

Canzoneri was only a shell of the great little battler who has successfully ruled the featherweight, junior lightweight and lightweight divisions. He was slow afoot, his timing was bad and he showed virtually none of the dash and zip that for the past 10 years helped him on or near the top of the fistie ladder.

The fight may be the last for Tony, but a jubilant McLarnin who says he fought his best battle in two years, has no idea of hanging up the gloves.

ROOFS NEAR PARK DOTTED WITH FANS

Provide Vantage Points For Thousands Without Tickets For Series Battle.

The record world series crowd at the Yankee Stadium yesterday was not confined to the ball park by any manner of means. It spread to the outlying districts and included in its scope thousands more who witnessed the best game of the series without benefit of ticket.

The roofs of near-by apartment houses were black with unofficial and uninvited spectators. The new Bronx courthouse was dotted with hundreds more, as were low-lying garages just across the street. The subway station on the other side of the center-field fence carried extra spectators who apparently believed what they read when it was said that this was to be a "nickel world series."

More of that same notion was found among subway passengers who got a glimpse as their trains crawled past at a snail's pace. Right toward the end of the fray one motorman gave up all pretense of keeping his train moving and parked it outside the Stadium until the game was over.
