MARRIED TO HER LOVER'S ASHES

TOKYO, Jan. 24—A funeral march will be played at the wedding of Miss Masaka Sugisaki for she is going to be married to the ashes of her lover, who died in America.

Thirty years ago, Miss Sugisaki, then a pretty high school girl, first met Kyoichi Oya, a young musician. Friendship grew into love, but Mr. Oya found it necessary to go to the United States to find an opportunity for his talents.

Weary years of waiting passed during which Miss Sugisaki went as a tutor to a Russian family in St. Petersburg, hoping to earn sufficient money to enable her to join her sweet heart in the United States, but the revolution drove her back to Japan. All the time they corresponded devotedly.

Mr. Oya eventually fell ill, and Miss Sugisaki received a letter which said:

"I may die tonight, it is fate. Please don't grieve over my passing."

Dated this 17th day of January, A.D. 1936.

PETER FARRELLA,

Chairman of Board of Assessors of Taxes.

WE EXPECT IT OF DOCTORS

(By George J. Spruell)

It is late night. Snow lies three feet deep, thermometers say 22 below. The telephone rings. The doctor, instantly awakes, reaches for it with a stubby hand that carries the scars of 50 years.

He hears a voice, sharp and clear, miles away. The sheriff. "Doc, you know Indian Bill Joe, don't you?"

"Yes."
 "Somebody tried to kill him yesterday. Hit him over the head with a singletree. He lay out in the snow for two hours before his son found him. I couldn't get to a telephone before. Bill Joe's at his cabin and I think he's goin' to die, but he wasn't dead when I left."

"I'll go," says the doctor.

In ten minutes he is whirling the starter of his car. Half an hour later he comes to the place where automobiles go no farther; and there a farmer, warned in advance over the phone by the physician's wife, has a horse hitched to a sleigh. For half an hour more they glide on runners to the click or shod hoofs on a woods road. Finally even that track fades out. The doctor climbs down and buckles on a pair of snow shoes. An hour later, in that bitter cold time two hours ahead of dawn, he half falls through the door of the tiny shack where, in preferred squalor, Indian Bill Joe lives.

Hot water, a backwoods operation, antiseptics, bandages, a joke or two, and a few directions to Bill Joe's stolid boy—and back into the snow.

Five calls at the shack, "Doc" makes. Bill Joe has no money. But he spits expertly into the snow, and simply says:

"He one dam fine feller, Doc!"—The Rotarian.

I am now filled with happiness. My sweetheart of 30 years ago, and my wife of today; How I have longed to have you call me "dear."

Shortly afterwards Mr. Oya died and was cremated. Now the bronze urn containing his ashes has reached Miss Sugisaki and she made a vow:

"Though you are dead, I will be your wife to fulfill our pledge of 30 years ago."

The marriage ceremony was arranged as a result with the dead man represented by ashes and proxy.

Keep AHEAD Of The JONESES

There's just one way to be "better off" than the other people on your street . . . In order to keep ahead, you must think and act first. And that can be done by anyone who decides to do it, whatever the family income.

For instance, some people are smart enough to buy when prices are down. Right now, of course, you can find sheets and towels and other supplies for the house at lowest-this-year prices. And that isn't all . . . Some time this winter you will find underwear for the children, gloves for yourself, pyjamas for the head of the house—and many, many more things offered at 'way-down prices.

All sorts of special buys will keep bobbing up, if you watch the advertisements in this newspaper—and keep thinking ahead, and buying ahead.

Where will you get all the money, you ask? . . . Well, it doesn't take more money to be better off, this way. Actually it takes less. The pennies you save by timely buying add up to dollars in the end.

BELGIUM RELIES ON STEAM PLANTS FOR ELECTRICITY

Electricity in Belgium is chiefly generated in steam plants burning coal. There are a few private oil or gas engine plants and three small hydro-electric power stations. Distribution is by electric supply companies and, in the case of certain cities and towns, by the municipalities. The use of electricity in Belgium is fairly general, particularly for domestic lighting, 2,620 out of the 2,670 municipalities, or communes, having distributing facilities, according to the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways. The average price for electric current for domestic purposes is 6½ cents per kilowatt hour, 50 cents rebate being allowed for electricity consumed in cooking and water-heating systems. The use of electric household appliances, however, is very small, domestic help being abundant and cheap. Electric refrigerators are not in common use, summer in Belgium being relatively cool and the hot spell is very short and, in addition, food is purchased in small quantities. With the exception of refrigerators, the demand for electrical appliances is supplied chiefly by the domestic article.

RAILWAYS IN CHINA HAVE CANADIAN TIES

Strange as it may seem, the greater part of the railways in China are laid with ties that came from North America, the United States and Canada being the chief sources of supply. Australia, Siam, the Straits Settlements and Russia also supply the market. The destruction of China's forests through many centuries has compelled the Chinese to seek outside their own borders for timber. There are now approximately 6,000 miles of railway lines in China proper, of which about 620 miles have been built within the last two years. In the preceding four years only 210 miles were constructed. Canada has greatly increased her share of the market and with a continuation of the railway expansion policy by the Chinese authorities, China should provide a larger outlet for Canadian railway ties. Canadian creosoted railway ties of Douglas fir are being tried out by the Chinese railways and it is hoped this will lead to a substantial business in creosoted ties, according to the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways.
