HANKEY SCORES ATTACK ON ARMAMENT FIRMS

LONDON, June 3—Arms and munitions makers are important to defense and should not be subjected to "mud-slinging" Sir Maurice Hankey, secretary to the Committee for Imperial Defense, declared today before the Royal Arms Commission investigating munitions manufacture and traffic.

Sir Maurice expressed regret "that this industry, which rendered most splendid service to its country in the war and saved its allies from disaster, should be pilloried in this cruel way."
