In 1864 an attempt was made to write the history of the Legislative Library, but even then the records were scarce, and very little historical data League, and therefore there was no could be obtained. The volumes now numbered 7.542, and the country Members were allowed to take books out with the power of exchange and had not applied military sanctions the there's quite enough work for two of return them as often as they thought proper; unfortunately the privilege answer was that even if Britain had us." was abused and thus many were lost. A week before the Session all books were returned and the Library closed to verify the contents. During the recess it was to be open on Tuesdays and Fridays from 10-4 o'clock.

The Usher of Black Rod, Sergeant at Arms and Aide-de-Camp were now allowed to take books out.

By 1880 the Library had grown until it occupied the whole lower flat in the Province Hall with the exception of one small room, and the collection was valued at $30,000. During the night of February 25th of that year, a disastrous fire occurred in the building causing damage estimated at $10,000 to the Library. The fire is thought to have broken out under the grafte in the Legislative Council Chamber, and was not at all in the main portion of the building. Another account says the flames burst suddenly from the Library and were soon beyond the control of the firemen and their apparatus. The crowd did what they could to help by carrying baskets of snow. Fortunately a number of the books were saved, and a few of the greatly charred volumes with every vestige of margin gone and only the text left intact are part of the collection today.

In 1882, the present Library building was erected and joined by four heavy fireproof doors to the new Parliament Building completed that year. In 1884, and again in 1885, the Library was indeed fortunate to receive a $1,000 grant from the Legislature to purchase books.

By 1896 legislation was introduced to keep the Library insured against loss or damage by fire in the name of the Speaker, and in case of his vacancy or death, in the name of the Governor. The Act continues as follows: "Committee of the Legislative Library are hereby authorized and empowered to bring and maintain an action in any Court in the province in the name of the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly or in case of a vacancy in the office of the Speaker, in the name of the Governor, against any person who, having obtained books from the Library, has neglected to return the same, for the recovery of damages, and the said Speaker or Governor, shall upon proof, that books are taken, or obtained from the Library at any time theretofore by the person sued, or by his authority, and on proof of the cost of replacing same, be entitled to recover a judgment against the defendant for damages, in a sum equivalent to the full cost of replacing the same in the Library, the full cost of suit in the court in which the action is brought, and no defendant shall be at liberty to plead the statute of limitations in any such
