BRIDAL SHOWERS ARE DELIGHTFUL NO MATTER WHAT SOME FASHIONABLE PEOPLE DO

"We hope," says a writer in American Cookery, "that we shall not shock or discourage any one if we quote from a high authority on etiquette, who writes: 'When people ask what kind of 'showers' are given in smart circles, the answer is 'No kind.' Showers are not given by fashionable persons to other fashionable persons at the present time of writing. It is at least not the mode of a city."

"Having got this duty off our chest (haven't you noticed that most duties are horrid and unpleasant things), let us now tell you that we think bridal 'showers' are most delightful affairs, and since it is a free country we won't have any one dictate to us about their not being in the mode. We leave such deterrents to the silly and snobbish, and well tell you all we know about showers, and hope yours will be the nicest ever."

"One of the best things about a shower is that there are no rules for it. Each hostess may make her own plans for it, different from every other shower she ever knew. A morning shower may be given at a company breakfast, an afternoon one at a tea or a high tea, an evening one at a supper. The only thing insisted upon is that it shall be a 'Ladies Only' entertainment."

"The invitations for a shower should make it clear that it is a gift-making function, and they should request an answer by means of the words: 'A reply is requested,' which have now in smart society displaced the old-time initials R.S.V.P. Or the invitation might 'request the pleasure' of the invited one, for such a request always calls for an answer, without further mention of one."

"The invitation to the bride-to-be is just a plain ordinary one without a hint of anything ulterior to the breakfast or luncheon or tea to which she is begged to come. The shower is always supposed to be a surprise party. (We say supposed to be, but there is always a traitor who tells.)"

"The lady to be showered may stand in the receiving line, if it is a tea, and provision is made for the gifts to be set out in another room or behind a screen, then when practically every one has come the shower is sprung for the bride, who pretends to be astonished. (It is usually a cast of 'M' thinks the lady doth protest too much,' but it is a pleasant affair anyway.)"

"Then follows the breakfast or luncheon or tea, though we have known the shower to come directly following the refreshments, but there are always involved in such a sequence something of a strain because of the secrecy, the effort at conversation that should exclude all mention of gifts, or shopping, or bargain sales, or anything germane to the articles showered."

WHO DRINKS TEA?

Tea has long been a favored beverage at athletic training tables and is widely used by coaches in the diet of the athletes in their charge. Colleges generally are showing a remarkable increase in tea consumption among the student body.

Canadian business men have begun to discover for themselves the pleasure and advantage of a cup of tea during the afternoon. The situation in Montreal is typical of that in many other cities. A recent survey disclosed that many of the banks, insurance companies, steamship companies, investment banks, brokers, engineering offices, real estate firms and steel companies have already adopted the custom of serving tea to their employees during the afternoon.

Explorers, both in the tropics and in the Arctic, have regularly relied on tea as a favourite beverage for its energizing, stimulating properties while armies campaigning under difficult conditions have long known the desirability of tea. A typical instance is related by Captain Carl Reichmann, Seventh Infantry, U. S. Army, who wrote as follows: "In the war which I witnessed in Manchuria two nations were engaged which are known as tea drinkers. The exertions they put forth, no one can appreciate who has not seen them. In the summer, the heat was humid and stifling and alternated with torrential rains so that the roads were always muddy and marching became a painful fatigue. In the great battles, the troops marched and fought day after day, night after night, were always under fire, had little sleep and little food; they were terribly fatigued but never collapsed; they brewed a cup of tea and on they went. Nothing quite so satisfied thirst on a hot day as a glass of tea. Nothing quite so well stilled a growing stomach; so quickly warmed up a frame stiffened with cold as a glass of tea; when in the saddle without food for thirty-six hours or more, nothing so refreshed the physical balance as a glass of tea and my first care in getting into camp was to have my canteen filled with tea."

President Theodore Roosevelt, in an account of his African travels as related in "African Game Trails," wrote as follows: "There are idyllic scenes of opinion as to whether any spirituous liquors should be drunk in the tropics. Very early in the trip I decided that even when feverish or exhausted by a hard day's tramp, hot tea did me more good than brandy."

He had tried hard several times but failed. There had always been some excuse—his youth, appearance, financial status. This time he was determined. There would be no more nonsense.

Briskly he elbowed his way through dozens of applicants, past private desks, directly into the office of the chief executive.

"Now, look here—"he began. He spoke forcibly, brushing aside all protests.

Ten minutes later, smiling scornfully at the waiting mob, he marched out. At last, he was on relief.

THE CARE OF PERISHABLE FOODS

Each individual fruit and vegetable has its own particular preference as to temperature and humidity, and it is necessary to approximate these conditions if spoilage is to be avoided. In these days, when most homes are equipped with refrigerators or ice boxes, this can be accomplished without much difficulty.

Raspberries and other similar fruits should be left in their original containers and kept in the ice box or other cool place until just before they are to be eaten. Unnecessary handling tends to bruise the fruit and hasten spoilage. The washing of the fruit should be deferred to the very last minute for the same reason.

Tomatoes, on the other hand, are sensitive to cold, and if they are to be held for only a short time they should not be kept in the refrigerator.

All succulent green vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce and garden peas, keep best when wrapped in a damp cloth in the refrigerator.

Never leave any kind of fruit or vegetable in direct contact with ice for a long period of time.

MAGGOT MEDECINE

WASHINGTON, June 19—Outstanding success during the past year in the use of a new drug for the treatment of burns, chronic ulcers, and other non-healing wounds was announced today from the United States Department of Agriculture.

Good Results

Dr. William Robinson, scientist, who brought the chemical known as Allantoin into wide use after discovering its curative properties, said remarkable results had been obtained by physicians and surgeons throughout the country.

Speaking cautiously lest the drug might be regarded in the class of alleged cure-alls, Dr. Robinson said results thus far have led the members of the medical profession who have used it to extend the application of Allantoin to the treatment of other external wounds which have failed to heal under other treatment. These have included infections of the mouth, diabetic ulcers, and the bone disease known as osteomyelitis.

Aids Tissue

"Allantoin is odorless, tasteless, and has been found to be entirely harmless to healthy tissue," he said. "It is soothing in its action by reducing pain, and promotes the growth of clean, healthy tissue."

Dr. Robinson explained that the drug, now made synthetically, is one of the secretions of maggots widely used in the past in the treatment of bone diseases and open wounds.
