Mr. Bennett

"We cannot portray the meaning of the events of our generation," said former Premier Bennett in his speech in London, Ontario. "No generation ever has. But of this we are certain; we are the eye witnesses of a great transition from one epoch to another, and the war, which many of you experienced, was only the prologue in a great human drama enacted before our eyes."

"The present," said Mr. Bennett again, "might not inaccurately be described as an immense blind spot in the pathway of human progress." It is clear what Mr. Bennett means and many will feel that he is "not inaccurate," even if he is mixing his metaphors somewhat.

If these sentences express his opinion today, it is evident that the present Mr. Bennett is not the Mr. Bennett who took office in 1930, and, in his enormous self-confidence, was certain that all the country needed was an extra dose of the old remedy, high tariffs.

Nor is it the Mr. Bennett of the January, 1935, radio addresses, who, after tedious years of waiting, faced with the futility of his advice to grin and bear it, and confronted with the absurdity of the plea that the depression was merely history repeating itself, proceeded with all his old time assertiveness and assurance to nail the flag of reform to the masthead, only to desert the ship with its flag still flying as soon as he got back into bad company in his old Tory environment.

No, the present is an almost human Mr. Bennett who admits that he has not all the answers.—Moncton Transcript.

Forest Fires

The forest fire menace is with us again. The woods of New Brunswick are drying out and those who have to be in their vicinity should take every precaution against starting fires that would cause destruction to any portion of our woods.

Already several smaller fires have been discovered in the woods of the Province and the forest services have been on the alert to check the blazes before they assumed large proportions. But the forest services cannot do everything. The real protection of the forests must come from the people. They must see that their lighted matches, their cigarette and cigar butts are not left smouldering where there is possibility of fire.

Travel in the woods is under strict regulation and all persons who go near woodlands should learn what their privileges are.

The forest lands of New Brunswick are among the greatest assets of the people. They contain wealth and their protection means work and wages to great numbers of men. Forest fires, grass fires, brush fires and all other kinds of fires should be avoided at this season. Use every precaution. If the people will take the necessary precautions the fire hazard in New Brunswick can be eliminated. That should be the aim of every citizen.

No Naked Truth

On Sunday evening a woman walked in a cloak to the altar in St. Paul's Cathedral, dropped the cloak and stood there naked. It was a strange proceeding, and it laid a severe tax on our Victorian daily press, which, as is well known, can never face the horror of the word "naked." In this case the Daily Telegraph described the lady as "unclothed"; so did the Daily Mail; so did the Daily Express. The Daily Herald went so far as to call her "nude" in a heading and "unclothed" elsewhere. The News Chronicle favored "unclothed" and "unclad." I may be a libertine, but I cannot for the life of me see why in such circumstances you should not tell the naked—or nude, or unclothed, or unclad—truth.—London Spectator.

An Apathetic World

To the thoughtful reader it must be apparent that, coincidentally with changed economic and social conditions, the manner of the world's thought has changed.

In the recent past public men whose probity has never been questioned, and who have been looked upon as having the average respect for justice and fair play, have raised their voices in defense of Italy's seizure of Ethiopia and Japan's aggressive attitude toward China.

They have attempted to justify Rome on the ground that Italy needs colonies and Tokio because Japan finds it necessary to form a "buffer State" between her own territory and possible Communist foes, as though the requirements or fears of a nation were sufficient reason for laying violent hands on a peaceful neighbor.

And the attitude of large section of the public toward human misery and distress, as reported in the daily news, has become one of indifference and apathy.

There was a time, not so many years ago, when the fact that civil war had broken out even in the smallest countries would cause at least a shudder of horror throughout civilized nations; when news of a famine or similar disaster would bring immediate offers of relief; when an outrage against any people would stir indignation and loosen powerful voices in condemnation.

Today there is revolt in Venezuela and revolt in Nicaragua. Spain has been torn by revolution and counter-revolution for many months. The persecution of the Jews in Germany has called forth protests, but pogroms in Poland, Rumania and elsewhere go unnoticed. There is famine as well as war in China. The Zionist home of the Jews in Palestine is threatened with destruction.

And in too many cases the reading public, skimming through the news, dismisses these facts from its mind with the remark:

"Seems to be nothing in the papers these days."

SNAPSHOTS

Fredericton pugilists held a side show fight of its own on Queen street last night.

Somebody should whisper to the Chief Game Warden that his department captured a live beaver. He told The Daily Mail today that he was not aware that any such animal had been captured. Funny, Eh, Colonel!

Quebec is getting after the chain stores. Quebec public men are of the same opinion as The Daily Mail. Great minds run in the same direction.

The five o'clock arrivals at the down town tennis club announce their arrival to the whole east end of the city.

"Could hardly walk after horse-back ride," says a liniment ad. We could hardly do anything else.

You can tell a great man. Note whether people keep cheering him when 'ex' appears in front of his title.

 reasonable level. In other Provinces producers of apples, fish, shingles and milk formed marketing associations for the regulation of trade and prices.

Undoubtedly, it is stated, the Dominion Government will seek to establish an unemployment and social insurance scheme in Canada, notwithstanding that four of the six Judges of the Supreme Court are of the opinion that the act passed by the last Parliament is ultra vires.

Held Valid by Chief Justice
 It is considered highly significant that the Chief Justice, Sir Lyman Duff, held that the act is valid. Moreover, all political parties in Canada are convinced that unemployment insurance is necessary, though many large institutions are opposed to it.

Twelve School Children

 by a gust of wind. Two of the boys were playing in the stern unmindful of danger. As other boys moved to the back of the boat, apparently to separate the scuffling couple, the stern went under water.

Then, the child related, the wind seemed to heave the bow up from the water and the children and Mr. London were thrown into the lake.

Consternation swept over the children wading on the shore, who with teachers and parents were helpless to assist the erstwhile happy group which struggled pathetically in the water before those who were drowned went beneath the choppy surface.

 part of the provinces that the New Brunswick law and also a similar law in Prince Edward Island cannot be enforced.

Speaking to The Daily Mail this morning Hon. J. B. McNair, K.C., attorney general, stated that the law passed at the recent session of the Legislature was within the power of the province of New Brunswick to pass and that it was proposed to enforce the same.

Young Man's Good

three years with hard labor for stealing a motor car owned by Dr. H. M. McLean to which charge he pleaded guilty this morning. The terms are to run concurrently.

R. H. Allen retained yesterday after the plea of guilty had been entered, made an impassioned plea on behalf of his client pointing out various features of his conduct which he said showed that he was not a hardened or experienced criminal.

Magistrate W. L. Lane, who heard the case, remarking that he would take these representations into consideration, pointed out that the maximum sentence for robbery while armed was life imprisonment.

The magistrate said he did not believe there was any intent to kill and this with the comparative youth of the prisoner and his previous record led him to make the sentence only ten years, and he would impose no lashes.

The charge of stealing an automobile was then read and after consultation between prisoner and counsel a plea of guilty was entered.

The magistrate fixed the penalty at three years hard labor to run concurrently with the first.

Nelly received the sentence calmly and showed little emotion either when they were imposed or as he was being led away to begin his ten year term.

Charles Neilly, Nova Scotia youth whose career of crime lasted less than 72 hours, pleaded guilty to a charge of assault with intent to rob while armed, when arraigned before Magistrate W. F. Lane in police court. The would-be bandit, who held up Henry McCaie, Irving Oil Company service station manager, at the point of a gun late Saturday night was captured in a barn at Hampton early Tuesday evening by R.C.M.P. Corporal Sturgeon, Sussex, several hours after he had abandoned the Graham-Paige coupe which he is alleged to have stolen from Dr. H. M. McLean.

When the accused was brought into court he did not enter a plea. He was remanded until 11.15 a.m. Then he pleaded guilty to the charge of assault and armed holdup. Another charge, that of stealing the car from Dr. McLean, was read but no plea was entered. The man was then remanded until this morning for sentence.
