

Old Times Recalled

OLDEN DAYS IN THE LUMBER WOODS AND IN TOWN

An old lumberjack who remembers the days of Jake Hazleton, Dick Estey, Tim Lynch and others, also tells of the days around the old Waverley and at Tom Hackett's hotel on Regent Street. He writes as follows:

The writer met an old woodsman on Carleton street. The stranger asked, "Say, boss, I'm looking for the Waverley; it's about here somewhere but I just can't find the old place." "No, you are one block too far up town." "I see, it be down town, be it?" "Yes, this is Carleton street, the Waverley's on Regent Street." "Yes, that's the name, I just forgot. At the corner I inquired of one of the workmen, telling him it was near Tom Hackett's and that Bill Scully was storekeeper on the corner. The man all daubed with plaster said, 'I never heard of names that you are using, no one ever lived here in my time by the names you speak of. I am going down Queen Street, come along and I'll show you where William Grieves used to hold out, but you may not remember him, you would know John better, but they are both dead years ago. Is John dead, we all liked John, whatever happened to him? Say, it was a great place where we used to stay a day or so after being in the woods all winter, or call for our pay when returning from the drive. There were more men hired and paid off at Grieves than any other place, and the boss lumbermen stopped there. Boys it was a lively place. We all knew one another. Oh, there is the corner, I know my way now, but I'm going there with you."

Jack Dewar was not in so we sat down and waited. The old man found the place changed. The stranger mused and again lived and talked of the past.

Why where is the crowd, fifty years ago a man with long hair and beard would welcome you with a handshake and the question, "What have you been doing this winter, John?" In the woods all the while, how was the hauling? A duffle hard winter, not a single thaw to bind the snow, it were like dust right along, wif ne'er a surface to it. Drifts on the barrens, yes deep enough to bury a horse if he missed the steep road," then turning to his pal in a red and blue flannel shirt, "weren't 'em, Joe?" "Yes, boss he's telling you the straight gospel truth."

A companion would ask "were it worse than the year when we were anxious to go out to the settlement for Christmas and it rained, yes, all day, all night, 'till there were no snow left, the road was glib with ice and the horses smooth shod. Some walked out, some stayed in camp. And how about you, Albert?" "Well, sir, us just stayed by the camp, us can't complain." Expect to go to headwaters or to the Allegash for driving? Yes. Kilburn's sending a crew next week, you going up, Jake? No, no need of asking you'll be going with Tim Lynch, yes, like to stick to a man that treats his men like men.

Oh, they all do that now. We're going to St. Mary's by ferry "Sarah H." Jared Boone will get us over in time. He never lets the boys miss the 7.30 train. Another one of the crew, Taylor by name asks, why not try Jake Hazleton? This year we have a good bunch going. Some like Dick Estey better for the Tobique drives are getting shorter, the corporation drive is now cutting in everywhere, soon if won't be worth while buying boots and calks to use when poling the logs from among the alders or going out to take chances with the undertaker when a jam in swift water has developed. After being in to room No. 13, the lumberjacks were more complaining, the one man the grudge was against was the scaler.

One chap said I've been in the woods since a kid, never saw so many logs needed to make a thousand. We lumberjacks are fools, we sign on and are tied down to the survey of a chap not more than a boy in my time, only worked one year at the mill. Mill scalers are no good in the woods at log scaling, we is just fools so we is to put up with it so we is. Give me a pipe of your fine cut, Mike, I like that bacca, it's better than we get out of the wannagan, yes, you have to pay for it there. Keep your old bacca, I've some of my own, and so on. The stranger had found the Waverley, his years, they were young again, the scribe enquired, will you be here tomorrow? Yes, I will, but say, why do you ask? "I would like you to tell me some more about the woods as you remember them. Where can I get some bacca, fine cut you know? Are you clean out? No, then I'll bring some in the morning and you'll tell me more about the bush and the men that remain in the woods all winter, shake stranger, I'll be here. Buy my bacca from Hawthorn's. I knew Jimmy better than you ever did. He was a good curlier, and the old old chaps are boys again. There will be more woods talk.

Recital by Pupils of F. W. Harrison

A large and appreciative audience was present at the piano recital given by the pupils of Mr. Harrison in the assembly hall of the Charlotte street school last evening. Of special interest was the work done by the young pupils who began taking lessons last September by class instruction. Older pupils who had the instruction for two or three years showed by their playing and ear training demonstrations that they are developing along sound lines.

A number of Mr. Harrison's private pupils played the second half of the programme. All showed good ability and gave evidence of consistent work throughout the year. George Little gave a brilliant performance and is likely to go far if he follows music as a profession. Two part songs were sung by four girls from Grade VIII, Doris Dunham, Jean Nevers, Phyllis Law and Jean Brown. These young singers know their way about, and are endowed with plenty of natural ability. Those taking part in the programme were Norma Barwell, Barbara Cown, Edna Little, Marjorie Wright, Arthur Nash, Catherine Boyd, Ronald Baird, Ralph Miller, Shirley Tracey, Dorothy Johns, Nan MacKenzie.

Second year pupils: Nancy McNair, Vivian Hawkins, Doris Pridham, Pauline Pridham, Marjorie Boyd, Gerald Wadlow, Ruth Cumming, Eleanor Rainsford.

Says Supreme Court

Industrial policy and practices of the United States.

Mr. Buckley said the decisions of the court convinced him that members had interpreted the law according to their mental qualifications.

"The Constitution was made for the people, and the people, were not made for the Constitution," he stated. "And if the Constitution is not in accord with social and economic welfare, the people must change it."

Mr. Buckley claimed that the Supreme Court was living in the past and legislating on precedent. The fact that its members had divided evenly on some legislation indicated clearly it was "just another guess" on matters of extreme importance to the masses.

Mr. Buckley believed that the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council would adopt another attitude. He pointed out its decisions of recent years were based, not on law, but on what appeared to be the needs of the people.

"I think labor must go the limit," he said, "It must get down to business now. It must pass no more pious resolutions. Too many things have occurred to indicate that financial and industrial interests are in the saddle again."

Come in and go over the entire mower. You'll agree that you have never seen anything like it.

McCormick-Deering No. 7 Enclosed-Gear Mower

WE are anxious to have all of our friends see the New McCormick-Deering No. 7 Enclosed-Gear Mower. We think it is one of the finest pieces of farm equipment we have ever sold!

Everybody who has seen it says they never had any idea that a mower could be built as this one is.

For example: The entire operating mechanism, including drive gears, differential, and countershafts, is assembled compactly in an oil-tight gear housing and runs in a bath of oil. There are four high-grade roller bearings. Operation is so smooth and noiseless that you can scarcely hear the light hum of the sickle!

Special oil seals at the ends of the main axle and fly-wheel shaft, and the oil-tight gear box prevent leakage and protect all working parts against the entrance of dirt and other abrasive materials. Floating action of cutter bar provides ample play without disturbing knife registration.

The public demanded shirts for one dollar. Being public servants we felt it our duty to meet this demand. First we had to secure shirts of quality equal to our standard of value, or keep out of the low price field.

Realizing the truth of the words of Chesterfield, "A man of sense may be in haste, but never in a hurry, because he knows that whatever he does in a hurry he must do very ill"—we therefore took our time and carefully "combed" the shirt manufacturers' lines for values before we decided to "stock" shirts at this price. We feel confident that you will agree with us that our dollar shirts are real value—worth one dollar of any man's hard earned money.

When better shirts are made to sell for one dollar, they'll be sold at
