Campbellton Curlers Have Strong Lead

STAND IN FIRST PLACE IN BONSPIEL SINGLES AND DOUBLES HAVING WON THREE SINGLES MATCHES AND TWO DOUBLE.

CAMPBELLTON, Jan. 22—Following the first day's play which did not finish until 1:30 o'clock this morning, the Campbellton Curling Club stood alone in first place in both singles and doubles in the New Brunswick Bonspiel standing with four other teams tied for second place in the singles and Bathurst trailing them in the doubles having only played and won one match to Campbellton's two. The Fredericton club won two and lost one in the singles competition and lost the only one they played in the doubles.

The feature match of the day was that between Campbellton and Bathurst with Campbellton nosing out the Ganong cup-holders and singles champion of last year by one point. Other close matches were between Carleton and St. Stephen, Newcastle and Moncton, and Thistles and Dalhousie. The other Saint John rink, St. Andrew's, was the only one to enter the win column when they downed the Moncton four skipped by P. H. Fryers. C. Allan Beatey skipped the Saint John rink to a 13-9 victory.

Hits a New Low
The strong Campbellton doubles rink in the last match of the night in their division handed the Newcastle entry a 39-12 drubbing. The first rink of Newcastle's doubles hit a new low for provincial bonspiels, it was said when it notched but two points while the first Campbellton rink was hurling them down for 28.

With five of the singles rinks tied for second place in the standing today will see the crucial stage passed for some. Others will drop down with hopes for victory well out of sight.

Campbellton and Bathurst are looked on as real contenders in both singles and doubles and Campbellton's victory over Bathurst in the singles gives them the edge.

Before the bonspiel opened a period of silence was observed by all those competing in honor of the memory of His Majesty King George V.

Morning and Afternoon
In morning singles Fredericton, Campbellton, Dalhousie and Rothesay were victorious. In the afternoon and early evening singles Campbellton and Dalhousie were again victorious but Fredericton and the defending Bathurst rink went down to defeat, the Capital four running to a low of three in the tourney.

Moncton and Newcastle as well as St. Stephen and Moncton also swept their way to victories in the afternoon and early night matches. St. Andrews and Thistles of Saint John were beaten twice in morning and afternoon and Carleton dropped two, one to the border four from St. Stephen. The score was close 11-10.

In the doubles of early afternoon and night Campbellton, Bathurst and Newcastle all scored wins. Campbellton earned a 27-19 triumph over Fredericton, Bathurst more than doubled the score on Dalhousie 29-13 and Newcastle took a close one from Moncton 23-20.

HENRY JOHNSON ONCE POISON TO MACK'S TEAMS

There is a familiar ring in the name Henry Johnson. Memories of Johnson's achievements on the mound are revived by his inclusion in the deal which put Roger Cramer and Eric McNair in Red Sox uniforms. Henry, now tabbed as one of the veteran right-handed pitchers of the American League, never amounted to anything in Boston, but he once held the spotlight as a member of the Yankees, and therein lies the reason for Connie Mack's willingness to add him to the A's roster.

Johnson joined the Yankees in 1928. He showed Miller Huggins plenty of stuff, but, like most rookie fingers, he found difficulty in clipping the corners. The Yanks at the time were a powerful championship bunch that had paced the American League for two successive years. But the A's were beginning to assert themselves, and Huggins had to have someone throw for them for a loss each time the two teams met. He chose young Johnson, and Henry was so effective he beat Lefty Grove several times.

Johnson never was an outstanding pitcher; in fact, there were times when he looked like a futile bush leaguer. But he could beat the A's almost invariably, and Connie hasn't forgotten. That's why Johnson was shuffled along to Philadelphia, together with a rookie infielder, Al Niemiec, in the most recent of the Mack-Yawkey transactions.

The year 1928 was Johnson's best in the junior circuit. He won fourteen and lost nine and as expected to do even better in the years to come. Then he was plagued with illness and he has not been the same since. The Yankees traded him to the Red Sox in the summer of 1932, but he did not report for duty until the following year. In three seasons in the Hub he won only sixteen games.

Johnson's chief handicap is lack of control. If he could overcome his streaky tossing as well as recondition himself, he might still be a winning pitcher. He has enough natural ability and, besides, has always done well in Shibe Park.

Despite the fact that he has been knocking around organized baseball for twelve seasons, he is not old as pitchers go, having yet to reach his twenty-eighth birthday. Remembering the spectacular deeds of Johnson against the White Elephants in 1928, Mack will be patient with him, probably allowing him to use his own training methods next spring.

The A's manager has sent Foxx, Marcum, McNair and Cramer to the Red Sox this winter, but there is a suspicion that the one he will miss most is Marcum, because of the broken down pitching staff Mack will be forced to use next season. Connie said recently that only two players hustled for him last year, Wally Moses and Hal Warster. The others, he said, gave up before the season had passed the halfway mark.

Unless Mack hasn't stopped selling his players he will have one of the best outfields in the league and a fair-to-middling infield. His catching and pitching staffs are in line for a thorough overhauling.

For outfield material, Mack has the brilliant Moses, hard-hitting Bob Johnson and the seasoned Lou Finney, to contend with two outstanding rookie flychasers, George Puccinelli and Emil Mailho, for the third regular berth. To

Mose Looking Forward To Better Pitching Year

By JOHN DROHAN

Robert Moses Grove, leading pitcher in the American League earned run averages last season, signed his 1936 Red Sox contract today in New York, according to general manager Eddie Collins, who talked with Owner Tom Yawkey over the long-distance telephone.

Lefty No Longer Awed

Evidently Lefty wasn't forced to do much quibbling over the new figures because Marce Tom granted him an increase over his 1935 contract. And without further parley, the saturnine-visaged southpaw showed Tom how he earned a gold star for the best penmanship in the little red schoolhouse on the side of the hill at Lonaconing, Md., many years ago.

As a result General Manager Eddie was as effervescent as a pair of seidltz powders in "swimming." Tom called up Mose the other day, after he had returned from South Carolina.

"What are you doing, you long drink of water," yelled Tom.

"I was jes' 'fixin' to go out and shoot a few squirrels for dinner, Tom," said Lefty.

"Well, drop that shootin' iron and come down here to New York just as soon as there's a train out of that speck on the map called Lonaconing," shouted Tom.

This conversation, by the way, took place in Tom's office at the Graybar Building in New York, but he could have opened the window and almost got the same results.

"And while you're on your way up here," added Tom before he hung off, "don't let anybody sell you the Statue of Liberty or Central Park because they have been sold before."

"Tom said you could hear the big boy laughing three offices away. And while Lefty might have been a little awe-stricken about coming to New York when he first went into baseball, he's been around so much in the last 12 years or so that New York to him is just another big city."

"Anyway, he walked in on Tom yesterday and they got right down to cases. I guess old Mose was surprised at the figures Tom wrote into his new contract. At any rate, they met with his approval and he signed on the dotted line, as they say in insurance circles."

Looks Forward to Better Season

"You know, Mose really looks forward to a better year this season than he had last. He's been working out in a Philadelphia gym and that Swedish masseur who eradicated the kink in his throwing arm that caused him all his grief the previous season is working on him again."

"He's the bird Bing Miller has been visiting for the past six or seven years. Bing swears he would have been out of baseball at least three or four years ago if it hadn't been for this masseur. Anyway, Bing feels so good since he's been receiving treatments this winter he's asked to get on the playing list so he can give all his time to playing. As a matter of fact, I'm seriously thinking of going down and let him do a little work on myself, just in case."

Death of Player Not Due to Game

SIMCOE, Ont., Jan. 22 — Hockey, which according to the best authority has taken only 10 lives in 30 years of strenuous battling on the ice, was not responsible for the death last week of Harold Henwood, Brantford intermediate player who died within 24 hours after playing a game at nearby Port Dover.

A coroner's jury here determined that Henwood, a member of the Brantford St. Jude's intermediate "B" team in the Ontario Hockey Association, died of a blood clot on the brain, which was aggravated only by "the normal stress of the game." He suffered no injury in the contest.

Dr. J. D. Struthers and Dr. R. D. Hare, who performed a post-mortem said the condition of the blood clot indicated it had been present for some time. They found no marks of external violence on the player's body.

It was believed at first that a fall to the ice during the game was directly responsible for Henwood's death. His teammates, opponents, referee Ken Baird of Caledonia, and others testified that while the player fell during a rush he did not strike his head on the ice.

BRITISH FOOTBALL MATCHES ORDERED CANCELLED

LONDON, Jan. 21—As a mark of respect to the late King George, the English Rugby Union today cancelled all matches until further notice while the Scottish Union took similar action in regard to fixtures scheduled for Saturday.

No decision has been reached by the English Rugby League but it is expected Saturday's games will be postponed.

replace Foxx at first, Mack has Jim Oglesby, drafted from the Pacific Coast League. Oglesby is a fine team worker, who never stops hustling, an extra-base hitter and a man who can be depended on to play through the entire schedule without being injured. Warster, a pleasant surprise, will be at second; Niemiec and Lamar Newsome will compete for the shortfield spot, and Frank Higgins, kingpin third baseman, will have that berth all for himself.

Red Sox Hold Dahlgren

The Red Sox are holding on to Babe Dahlgren, regular first baseman of last season, though they have the services of Jimmy Foxx. Dahlgren may be farmed out for further seasoning rather than warm the bench, but he is still considered a bright prospect.

Playing 149 games last season, he showed lots of spunk and aggressiveness, as well as amazing improvement in the last half of the campaign. At one time during the season he came to blows with Bill Werber, but the mixup only served to boost his stock with Manager Joe Cronin.

Dahlgren floundered about the .200 mark in the averages for the first three months, but began to spurt and finished with .263 and a total of twelve home runs. Though he throws with his right hand, he is a remarkably able first baseman, many times saving his manager from errors by sensational scoops and leaps on wild throws.

Art Ross Puts Fine On Springfield Club

BOSTON, Jan. 22—The Springfield Club of the Canadian-American Hockey League and its president were fined a total of $600 and player Doug Brennan of Springfield as suspended indefinitely as a result of an attack on Referee Norm Shay, following the Springfield - Philadelphia game at Springfield on Saturday night.

The action was announced by President Arthur H. Ross of the League, after an investigation.

The York All-Stars are changing their coaches fast and furious in an attempt to get some results in team. Their latest solution to their problems seems to be Larry McLean, coach of many former Fredericton teams, who is also coaching U.N.B. Larry was out with the squad last night and they looked the peppiest they have this year. He worked them for a solid hour without a rest, and when the boys were through they were glad to get to the showers. They seemed to like it, however, and if they continue to move as fast with Larry's prodding they should take both Rothesay and Saint John into camp this week.

According to The Daily Mail Hockey Contest, these seems to be a great deal of interest in the local sport. Already hundreds of entries have been received and are being checked. Running hand in hand with the contest is the competition amongst the players for The Daily Mail Trophy, emblematic of the highest scorer in the Southern League. Livingstone of the Beavers and Russell of the St. Croix are in the lead while Walker and Lifford are close behind.

It is too bad that the boys who were thrown out of junior hockey cannot be absorbed in an Intermediate League. Someone, with the good hockey in this town at heart should get busy and form an intermediate league. There are commercial and other leagues in the city, so why not an intermediate league.

BOSTON, Jan. 21 — Captain Eddie Shore's first goal of the season less than three minutes before the final bell gave the Boston Bruins a 1-0 triumph over the Montreal Maroons before a near capacity crowd of 14,000 at the Boston Garden tonight in a National Hockey League game.

The victors, playing their third game in four nights, appeared a bit weary at the opening face-off, which was delayed until after the huge crowd paid an impressive tribute to the memory of the late King George. As the huge crowd stood uncovered in the darkened arena, four U. S. Marine Corps buglers sounded taps.
