Fredericton--An Air Port

The word from Montreal yesterday to The Daily Mail that a twenty hour transcontinental air service between Halifax and Vancouver was planned for the near future should be encouraging It shows the development that is taking place in the aeroplane field right in our midst. And there are other developments to come in the near future commercially and otherwise. The proposed route as suggested from Ottawa runs from Halifax to Moncton thence to Montreal. From Montreal the line goes to Cochrane, Winnipeg, Regina, Lethbridge, through the Crows Nest Pass to Grand Forks and Penticton, B. C., then over the Colquellha Pass to Vancouver. The route will be 3,083 miles long or 714 miles less than the route by rail. There is another transcontinental route mentioned which is 2759 miles in length but we have not been informed as to the territory this latter route would cover.

The only fly in the ointment so far as Fredericton is concerned is that this city is not on the route. As there are no stops scheduled on the proposed route between Fredericton and Montreal, why not have the route planned to cut across the country to Fredericton and up th Valley to the Quebec border and thence on to Montreal?

What do the City Council and the Board of Trade think of the suggestion? The proposed route has not yet been finally selected. There is yet time to put in a word if we are in a position to handle air traffic. There is no reason why Fredericton should not be a port of call for this air service. Not only that but as time goes by, and before very long there will no doubt be the development of shorter distance services to different points, possibly New York, Boston, Toronto, etc. Are we in a position to be placed on the man in regard to these services? Have we the airport facilities such as has Moncton for instance? If we have we should get after the services. If not we should get after the facilities for handling such a service.

The matter of an air port for Fredericton was brought up a couple of years ago by those who were far seeing enough to visualize air service development. What action was taken or will be taken to encourage the placing of Fredericton on the map as an air port? The Daily Mail advocated this proposition more than a year ago. Some people laughed at the idea of a transcontinental air service within the next ten years. They said that The Daily Mail was away ahead of the times. We admit that this paper is ahead of some people in some respects. But we were not so far ahead in regard to the air service which is now announced by the district inspector of the civil aviation branch of the Department of National Defence-We were just a year and a half ahead. Just time enough for Fredericton to get ready to handle the airport business.
