Giants Crash Before Yank Onslaught in 13-5

PITY THE WIFE OF A BUSY COMEDIAN

Durante Hasn't Had Time to Let Spouse Know Where He Is

Jimmy Durante is distressed. Downright depressed. Even worried. It's the missus!

A man may make audiences laugh, but he's also a husband. At least, Jimmy happens to be one. He's got the records to show for it. He was married with a ring, a wedding license and all that goes with it. He even had a best man, though he doesn't remember just who he was.

And now a domestic turmoil awaits him.

And he is depressed!

It all started something like this.

He was taking a walk with his wife along Hollywood boulevard in Los Angeles. They were talking. Nice and quiet. Peaceful like. And then he suddenly reminded himself.

"Listen, honey," he says, "I gotta go away. I got four weeks' bookings in London. That's England. I looked it up on the map when my agent tells me he got dates for me. Four weeks, honey, and then I come right back."

"Okay, Jimmy," says she. "I'll wait in Los Angeles for you. Go ahead and knock 'em dead."

"I'll do that little thing for you."

And with that he gave her a quick kiss, hopped a cab, and was on his way.

His intentions were good. He swears they were. But he went over so big in London, his original four weeks' bookings were extended to more than 10, to include some other English cities, and also dates in Scotland and Ireland. He was recruited for a picture. And everything would have been all right if only he had remembered to notify his wife. But he didn't. And when he did remember, the damage had been done, and he figured that he could explain everything when he saw her. He has great faith in personal appearance.

Well, after a guy has been burning up energy working for four months he needs a rest, doesn't he? Besides the ancestral home, whence his parents hailed, was in Italy, just across the water. He ought to take a peek at it. Something to tell his old man about when he got back.

Italy was nice, and Jimmy was just beginning to get his particular brand of Italian faintly understood by the natives when he was notified that his manager, Lou Clayton, whom he had forgotten to tell where he was going, had signed him for a starring part in "Red, Hot and Blue!" which Vinton Freedley was putting into rehearsal after Labor Day, and that he was to take the next boat home. Clayton had experienced great difficulties before he located Jimmy and the earliest that the comedian could get home was one week after rehearsals had started.

He was met at the boat by Clayton and a couple of strong men from the Freedley office and literally dragged post haste to the theater and thrown into rehearsal. He wasn't even permitted to greet his pals. The show was booked to open at the Colonial Theater in Boston on Wednesday evening, October 7, and no more time could be lost.

And Jimmy is depressed. For he hasn't got in touch with his wife yet. She is still waiting to hear from him.

But he has an idea. Once the show gets into New York for a run he'll tell her to join him.

He'll explain it all to her then. He has great faith in personal appearance.

SERIES SPOTS

The weird baseball burlesque in the ninth inning of the world series finale was expensive to the Giants in more ways than one—it not only cost them the game and the series, but it cost each man on the Giant team more than $100 for every minute the Yanks were out there knocking in those seven runs. On the other hand the Yanks made money fast in the closing minutes. Each Yankee player will collect $6,440.03 now. Each member of the Giants gets $4,656.40.

Alvin Jacob Powell, the Yankee who was going to quit baseball three years ago to become a policeman, was the series batting champion. Powell batted .454, with 10 hits in 22 trips to the plate. He also led in runs scored with eight and he drove in five. The "goat batter" was Burgess Whitehead of the Giants, who got one single in 21 times at bat.

Probably the most superstitious pitcher in the business, Gomez took time out to search out and toss away every pebble he could find on the mound.

Gomez got a perfect hit in the fourth, driving in Powell, so the next time he came up, Castleman dusted him off. "Lefty" ducked and hit the dirt. And there he sat until cries of "Faker! Sissy!" went up from the stands.

"Babs" Ruth authorized a statement to newspaper men during the game saying that he was available if anyone cared to offer him a major league manager's job. There has been some mention of Ruth as the possible successor to "Casey" Stengel as manager of the Dodgers.

RUMOR BROOKLYN DODGERS SOLD

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—Reports were current in baseball circles tonight that Col. T. L. Huston, former part-owner of the New York Yankees, had purchased Brooklyn Dodgers and had chosen "Babe" Ruth to manage the National League club.

The story gained headway when the Babe, who had held aloof from the Yankees since he left the club, appeared at the world series victory celebration of the Yankees after spending about an hour in a conference with Huston.

WELLS ENVISIONS LIVING TILL 97

LONDON, Oct. 7—H. G. Wells, one of the titans of modern English literature, celebrated his 70th birthday Monday, September 21. He already has written his own obituary telling how he died at the age of 97.

"It's now a race between George Bernard Shaw and myself," Wells chuckled, seated at his work-desk in his Baker street apartment. Shaw turned 80 last July 26. With 27 years of life still ahead of him, according to his own reckoning, Wells is as vigorous and prolific as ever—devoting most of his time nowadays to writing and directing pseudo-scientific fantasies, flavored with a modern Jules Verne touch, for a British movie company. "The Shape of Things to Come" and "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" are his two latest productions.

Wells will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given by the P. E. N. Club, Oct. 13, with the speakers including G. B. Shaw, Professor Julian Huxley, Andre Maurois, J. B. Priestley and Alexander Korda.

20 PER CENT OF ADULTS IN U.S. SHORT-LEGGED

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 7—Twenty per cent of the adults in the United States have one leg shorter than the other, the New Jersey Osteopathic Society was told recently by Dr. Eugene R. Kraus, New York radiologist.

"Many persons," he said, "suffer severe headache and back pain because one leg is maybe an eighth or a quarter of an inch shorter than the other. Sometimes they keep taking pills or applying liniment, when what they need is an extra slab of leather on the heel of one shoe."

SEA-GULLS NAME OF SAINT JOHN PUCK CHASERS

Beavers Reorganized -- Local Talent to Be Used

(Special to The Daily Mail)
SAINT JOHN, Oct. 7—Hockey enthusiasts in the Maritimes will be pleased to learn that Saint John is to have one of the strongest hockey teams this year than ever before, it was stated today by the management of the squad in a special interview.

All plans have not been fully completed as yet, and the rumors that Jackie Keating was to play with the locals, has not been made certain.

The management also said that the team will be made up chiefly of local talent, if the local boys turn out for practices at all.

The reason why the plan is to use local talent and stop importing players from elsewhere, is to give the Saint John boys a chance to see what they could do. It has been also said that this plan should have been carried out before this, instead of importing players from all over the Dominion as was done up till a year ago.

It is hoped that the fans will patronize the hockey games this year as well as they did in previous years when imported players were performing. For several seasons in a row up till a couple of years ago teams in Saint John were all made up, practically, of imported players, and this did not seem fair to the local boys who have been just waiting their chance to play for the Beavers hockey club.

The name of the local team may be changed to the "Sea-Gulls," as the latter seems more appropriate to this city. It has not been stated for sure whether or not the team will play commercial hockey this year.

SCHOOL FOR PUCKSTERS IN WINNIPEG

To Open Soon -- All Major Teams Start Training About Oct. 19

Hockey opens today when the amateur players will attend the Lester Patrick school at Winnipeg, Manitoba, and try for the Rogers, New York's famous simon pure team.

General Manager Art Ross will round up the Bruins two weeks from today. All major league teams will start training on or about October 19.

The Bruins will work out at the Arena. Ross will take a chance as the pipes of the ice-making machinery got out of order a few years ago and threw the Bruins out of stride.

Les Canadiens will open the championship season at the Garden Sunday, November 15. The Bruins will play against Les Canadiens at the Forum, Montreal, Saturday, November 7.

That game will open the National League season. The schedule has not been made public, but the news leaked out the other day.

The Bruins and Maroons will play a series of exhibitions at Saint John, Moncton, Halifax and again at Moncton.

The first game is set for October 26, and the Bruins must depart for New Brunswick Sunday, Oct. 25.

So the Bruins will have only 6 days for their preliminary training.

From Montreal information came that Les Canadiens declined to take Nels Stewart off the Bruins hands.

It is likely that the Bruins will arrange one or more deals before the season starts, but until that trade is made, it is idle to make guesses.

AMERICANS' SEVEN RUNS IN NINTH KAYO NATIONALS AND MAKES WORLD SERIES HISTORY

Fitzsimmons, Castleman, Coffman, Gumbert Fail to Stop Yanks Devastating Drive in Last Game --- Murphy Halts Giants

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—New York Yankees blasted their way to the baseball heights today with a farewell salvo of base hits that crushed the last lingering hopes of their inter-city rivals, the battle-worn Giants, and tore another whole page out of the record books.

Riddled by the long-range guns of the American League champions, the Giants finally crumbled under a 9th-inning barrage that produced seven runs and swept the Yankees to a lopsided 13-5 conquest in the sixth and final game of the world series.

As the tumult and the shouting ended for 1936, following as devastating an attack as any ball championship has ever known, The "Bronx Bombers" emerged with a decisive victory, four games to two, in a series that set a flock of new hitting and scoring records, besides scaling fresh heights for attendance and receipts.

The Yankees not only squared accounts with their metropolitan rivals in world series play, with two triumphs for each club in four battles for the game's highest stakes, but registered their fifth championship conquest in eight attempts and their fourth in succession. The Yankees now boast a record of 16 games won out of 18 played.

Four National Hurlers
Four pitchers, led by the hard-luck victim of the third game, fat Freddy Fitzsimmons, failed to check the tidal wave of Yankee base hits this afternoon. The Giants got off in front and finally forced their southpaw foe, Vernon (Goofy) Gomez, to cover in the seventh inning, but it was an uphill battle for them nearly all the way.

Giants, trailing 3-5 after Fitzsimmons had been driven from the box in four innings with a nine-hit, five-run assault, lost their chance to regain command in the seventh. They came within one run of tying the score when Dick Bartel doubled and Bill Terry belted a base hit that Joe Di Maggio fumbled for his first mis-play of the series.

Gomez gave way to Johnny Murphy after "Hank" Leiber sacrificed and Mel Ott walked, but the Giants rushed three pinch-hitters in without being able to produce the tying run. Hitting for Gus Mancuso, Sambo Leslie fouled weakly to "Red" Rolfe, Jimmy Ripple, hitting for Burgess Whitehead, walked to fill the bases, but Mark Koenig took a third strike with his bat on his shoulder. Dick Coffman, who relieved Clyde Castleman in the pitcher's box at the start of the ninth after "Stick" had been lifted for a pinch-hitter, was knocked out by the farewell salute.

Thirteen Go To Bat
Thirteen Yankees went to bat in the concluding frame, within two of the world series record. The Rookie star, Di Maggio, got two of the five basehits that punctuated the firing off the combined pitching efforts of Coffman and his successor, Harry Gumbert. Gumbert came in with two on, none out, and three runs already in. He finally retired the side, after four more tallies.

Three bases on balls, together with an error contributed to the record run-making spurge of the new world champions in their last turn at bat.

Al told, at least a dozen world series records were broken or equaled by today's finale. The Yankees displaced a flock of marks for a six-game series, in the offensive department. The aggregate totals of 43 runs and 41 batted in, 65 hits and 49 of the one-base variety, 26 bases on balls and 96 total bases, all established records.
