Mr. Bracken and His Chances

Premier John Bracken's decision to carry on in Government without a clear majority in the Manitoba Legislature is now assured. W. Fox promised that he and his four followers would co-operate with the Government. At the same time any possibilities of coalitions with the Conservatives and the six C.C.F. members have been discarded, and unless the Social Creditors and at least three of the four Independents go over ing both sides in the war and popular to the Government Premier Bracken's term and the session are likely to be

There is merit, however, in calling an early session. It will provide the test of the Government's stability and, if it is as unstable as its numbers make it appear, Manitoba soon will have an opportunity to find the remedy. At the same time there is some justification for Premier Bracken's continuing in office. The drought situation has become acute and Manitoba has no time now to devote to another campaign. The need is for immediate Government assistance and organized rehabilitation work. It has previously done a thorough and competent job, not to say an economical job, in handling the sit-

With its previous experience, its knowledge of the Manitoba drought areas, it is best able to co-operate with the Federal Government in implementing the plans already completed for handling the emergency. The fact that it is numerically weak in the Legislature, and that it is not likely to remain long in office, should not be allowed to interfere with or handicap it in administering relief.

(Continued from Page One) He outlined two general methodsone by providing aggregates and soil binder, supplemented possibly with chemical admixtures, of the proportions and character required to produce structural stability and resistance to abrasion; the other, by treating fine-grained poorly-graded soils in a particular manner to produce structural stability, and covering the bases thus prepared with thin wearing courses to furnish resistance to abrasion.

In his illustrated lecture on "Highway Grade Separations," Mr. Giffin gave an informative resume of the experience of his state with this modern highway development. With traffic growth fostered by and constantly keeping ahead of the provision of improved roads, an effort would have to be made to anticipate future expansion and solve its problems in advance, and in these solutions highway grade separation had played an important part, he said.
