1. A gesture toward the banks, inviting them to provide the credits for a social credit system.

2. An effort to convert external debts into treasury "credits."

Manoeuvring the Banks The first proposal derives from advice originally offered to Premier Aberhart by Major Douglas in 193F suggested that the banks be asked to provide $5 millions ir J. In plain language, the present purpose is to manoeuvre the banks into a position where the onus for not providing "social credits" will appear to rest upon them. A statement from Mr. Aberhart provides the clue to the "strategy" which he is now promoting, on the suggestion of Douglas' two agents Alberta. The premier said: "If the banks refuse to tober 21st. Police Protection

SERIOUS LACK OF ADEQUATE POLICE PROTECTION AND A OF A TRAINED POLICE FORCE EXISTS UNDER THE PRESENT POLICE COMMISSION. This was fully demonstrated in a forcible manner by the incident which took place in the office of a local manufacturing establishment this week.

If one were to read that in some town the size of Fredericton a young man entered the office of the manager of a manufacturing establishment and, it was alleged, pointed a gun or revolver at the manager's head and threatened that official with death in a few minutes, and if one was to read that a young lady clerk notified the City Police and that two policemen drove to the spot and put their hands up in the air immediately upon entering the office, and that these policemen stood at each side of the office manager for three-quarters of an hour with their hands in the air while the alleged assailant stood with a pointed revolver at the head of the official, and if one were to read that during this period the alleged assailant was able in the presence of the officers to light several cigarettes and then to deliberately walk to the telephone and carry on a conversation with his gun pointed at the official, and the two officers of the law who were supposed to protect the public, continued to stand by with their hands still in the air and made no effort whatever to capture the alleged assailant during the time he was carrying on his telephone conversation, the party who read this story of the doings in an outside town would think that that town was considerable of a hick burg and that it lacked any kind of efficient police protection.

The person reading of such an incident would come to the conclusion that the town mentioned in the article needed a thorough change in its police administration starting from the top and going down to the bottom.

If one were told that the administration of police affairs in such a town was entirely out of the hands of the citizens through their duly elected representatives at the Council Board, and that the Aldermen had nothing whatever to say in the control of police affairs the story would sound almost increditable. The conclusion which the reader would come to would be that the affairs of such a town were very badly managed, and that what was needed was an Administration of Justice Committee on which were men who were responsible to the people for the conduct of the police affairs of the city. Also what was needed was a police force with a trained chief who knew his business thoroughly and was able to train his tect the life and property of the citizens. It would be said that any trained police department would not send two men to the relief of a citizen who was in danger of death from an assailant and send them to that man's office without as much as a nightstick in which to aid them in carrying out their duties. And it would say that the policemen should have been trained to approach the would be assailant in such a manner that they would not have had to throw up their hands. It would be said by the person reading of this incident that the whole system was due for a shakeup and that all the officials from the Police Commission and Chief of Police down, no matter how popular or how good men they were personally and that they should be either trained to do their duty or should be replaced by men who were so trained. No person should expect green men to do something which they are not trained to do. The question would naturally be asked "How is it that these men lack adequate training.
